AT 2.30 p.m. on Sunday 28th November, 1982, a simple, informal ceremony was held in Princes Street Gardens, Edinburgh, to dedicate our white heather memorial garden to those who fell in the battle for freedom of the Falklands.

At the same moment in time, but across 8,000 miles of ocean, a similar ceremony was being held at Stanley, in the Falklands, where there's an exact replica of the memorial garden.

At each spot we've put up identical granite blocks, bearing plaques in proud memory from The Sunday Post and our family of readers.

Action stations

...we will remember them.

THE battle for the freedom of the Falklands was fought from April 2nd to June 15th, 1982.

Victory was won by a Task Force of over 100 ships and 28,000 men from the Royal Navy, Royal Marines, Army, RAF, Royal Fleet Auxiliary, Merchant Navy plus a number of female nursing staff.

But for 253 men—and three women—there was no homecoming to the nation's tribute.

They died in the fighting to recover the Islands from Argentina.

It was a war the UK never sought.

In our heart of hearts, theirs was a sacrifice every one hoped they would never have to make.

But their lives were the price of victory.

The Sunday Post, on behalf of our family of readers, decided to add our tribute.

Two gardens of white heather, as living memorials, to be dedicated on the same Sunday, November 28, one in Princes Street Gardens, Edinburgh, at the very heart of Scottish history.

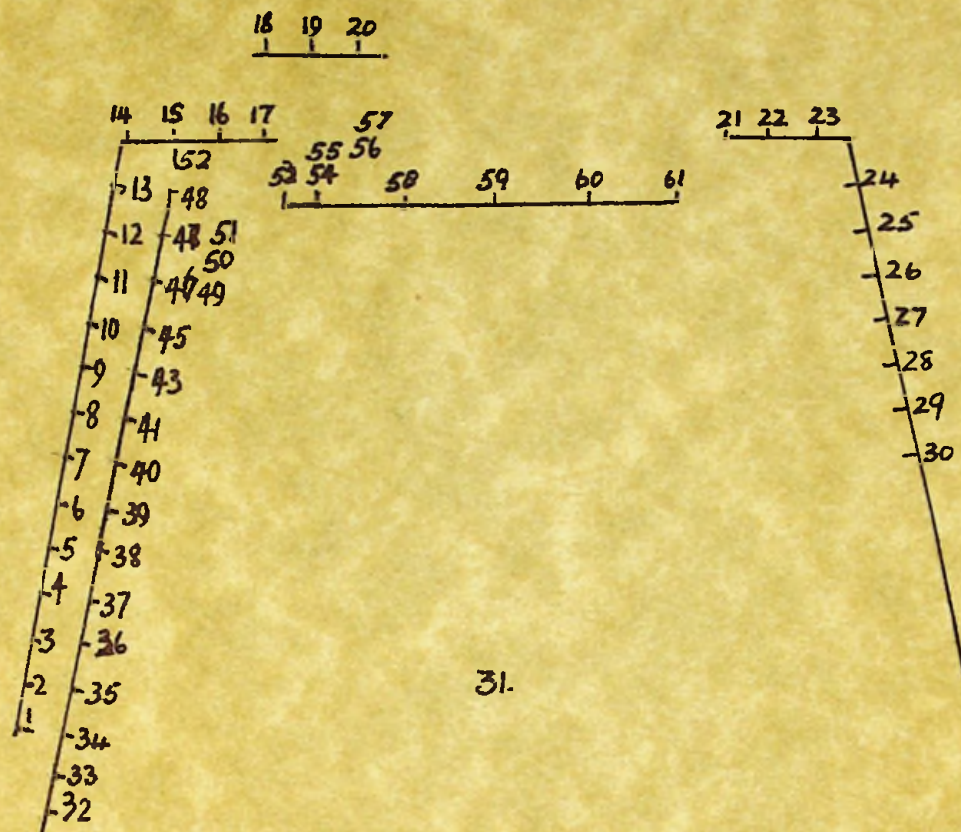

The other at Port San Carlos, the place of the first landing by the British Forces and site of the Blue Beach military cemetery.

A short prayer was said. Then a piper played a lament for the fallen.

Simple bronze plaques on stone plinths mark both spots.

This special memorial supplement lists the names of all those who gave their lives.

The White Feather Memorial. Stanley 28 November 1982.
