Sir,

I beg to advise you that the Knowsley Electrical Company, Limited of Richmond Buildings, 26 Chapel Street, Liverpool, have sent me the aeriads and insulators for the reception of wireless telephony: the complete apparatus to follow by the "Laguna" arriving here in April.

2. As the set is certain to be of a standard pattern similar to those licenced by the British Government for use in the United Kingdom, I beg to apply for a Licence from His Excellency the Governor for the installation to be erected in the garden of my house in Stanley.

3. I have not yet received full particulars but understand that it will be necessary to erect two masts, each 50 ft high, with a span of not less than 100 ft. Full information regarding the actual Receiving apparatus will be forwarded when received from the suppliers.

Sir,

Wireless Station,

Stanley,

28th May, 1925.

The Hon. Colonial Postmaster,

Stanley.

Dear Sir,

I have the honour to report on the Radio Broadcast Receiver of H. H. R. Gresham Esq., which has been tested at the Wireless Station during the past three weeks.

Description of Apparatus - The Receiver is of a super-sensitive type employing six Vacuum Tubes and embodying what is technically known as the Neutrodyne Circuit. In addition to removable coils suitable for the usual broadcast wavelengths between 300 and 550 metres, the receiver is supplied with interchangeable coils to allow reception on all wavelengths between 300 and 3000 metres. The equipment includes two pair of Headphones and one loud speaker besides the usual filament and high tension batteries.

Results obtained - Under good atmospheric conditions, the broadcast concerts from Buenos Aires and Monte Video have been received on the loud speaker at the strength of an average gramophone. The Station at Rio de Janeiro, also other unknown broadcast stations have been heard at sufficient strength for use with the headphones but only under very favourable conditions.

General Observations and Suggestions - To the unskilled, the instrument would at first be found difficult to adjust in order to obtain good results. This complexity of controls is necessary in order to obtain freedom from jamming and sufficient sensitivity for Loud speaker results from the South American Broadcast Stations which use a power of less than 1 K.W. Good results could not be obtained in

Stanley from the usual Foolproof Type of instrument generally used for Broadcast reception over short distances in Europe. The selectivity of the Instrument is remarkably good, so much so that, when correctly tuned for the Buenos Aires Broadcast wavelength of 360 metres, vessels working on the usual 600 metres wave in the near vicinity are only heard very weakly. Such being the case, with this Receiver installed in Stanley, it is improbable that any interference would be noticed from the Eastern W/T Station when transmitting on Continuous waves or Spark wavelengths of 1250 or 1600 metres. The 600 metre wave transmissions would quite likely be heard strong, however, this wavelength is now only used occasionally.

It is suggested, any Broadcast receiver licensed should only be permitted to use coils for wavelengths between 300 and 550 metres. It would then be unlikely that any interference would be experienced at the Eastern W/T Station during reception owing to the Broadcast Receiver oscillating. It would perhaps be advisable that the set in question be licensed provisionally for use in Stanley to ascertain definitely how it will function on a normal short aerial. The long-wave coils could be returned to the Makers.

If the results proved as anticipated (a) that no interference was experienced at the Eastern W/T Station, (b) That the possibility of interception of Morse traffic was improbable, there would appear to be no objection from the Wireless Station point of view, to such Broadcasting Receivers being licensed for use.

I remain,

Your obedient servant,

A. R. Lush

Engineer-Opr-in-Charge.
