Oil found at last, but how much not known

ANY despair and disappointment that may have been felt when Desire Petroleum's first well did not immediately gush black gold all over the South Atlantic has been banished with the announcement by Rockhopper Exploration that it has made what it hopes is "the first oil discovery in the North Falkland Basin."

Managing director of Rockhopper Sam Moody, who said he was "very excited at the result," said the well had found oil along intervals across 53m, which was 25m deep at its thickest.

Now the company has to decide whether to plug the well, suspend it for future testing or drill an appraisal well.

The response from the Falkland Islands Government, who issued the licences for the current oil exploration campaign was upbeat.

Director of Mineral Resources Phyl Rendell said: "We are really very, very encouraged by the news."

"It is early days but good news for the Falkland Islands, and we hope it will result in continued activity in the area and increased confidence."

Equally buoyant was the response of the Member of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly with responsibility for Mineral Resources, Emma Edwards: "It's very exciting and the news is likely to boost confidence in the industry in the islands," she said.

Miss Edwards offered her congratulations to Rockhopper and wished equal success to the other companies exploring in the Falklands.

The discovery, she said, "bodes well for the long term future of the Falkland Islands hydrocarbons industry."

Although the company still has much data to study before deciding on its next step, the announcement had an immediate confidence-boosting effect on the stock market, which extended to all the companies currently engaged in exploration around the Falkland Islands.

Rockhopper's shares soared by 150% to 91p.

Desire Petroleum, whose shares had lost over half their value when the results of their first drilling prospect were called "disappointing," saw their value bounce up 96% to 74p, with lesser, but significant rises in value being experienced by Falklands Oil & Gas and Borders and Southern.

The story of Rockhopper's discovery was immediately taken up by Britain's newspapers and the world's major press agencies, many of which referred back to the political tensions created between Britain and Argentina when the oil rig Ocean Guardian first arrived in Falklands waters in February.

Speculation as to the possible size of the discovery was also rife, with BFBS radio talking about a possible two million barrel find.

John Sparks of Channel 4 News, who reportedly visited the Falkland Islands in February, was more circumspect.

"It's not yet possible to tell how many millions of barrels Rockhopper has discovered, but it has made the first step along the road of a commercial find," he wrote.

"More testing is required before the size of the find becomes apparent. It was always known that the Falklands sits on a bed of the black stuff. What matters is how much of it is commercially viable to recover."

"The basic answer is that far more is commercially viable with an oil price at $80 per barrel than it was in 1998 when Shell abandoned some small finds in the vicinity of today's Rockhopper find with the oil price barely above $10."

"Eyebrow-raising estimates suggest as much as 60 billion barrels across the whole of the Falklands - basically another North Sea - a figure scoffed at by many of the big oil executives I have spoken to."

For his part, Mr Moody said: "We don't know how much oil there is, but we now know there is some."

THE Complaints Commissioner Bill was approved by Executive Council this week but already I fear that this will turn out to be another box to tick, which makes us look good, but serves no very useful purpose.

You may ask why we need a Complaints Commissioner. After all, apart from the Letters Page of the Penguin News, we have legal aid, and an independent judiciary with a small claims court. The Civil Service, which obstinately remains the Falkland Islands largest employer, has its own system of line management and complaints procedure. So isn't all well?

The answer, sadly, is that it is not. This is the case for a variety of reasons, among them the tendency of any organisation to close ranks when challenged in a way which puts its own credibility above that of any complainant.

Recently at Penguin News we heard of a case where someone had alleged minor corruption, or at least an over-zealous application of the rules, on the part of a civil servant. The claimant expected the matter to be soon cleared up, but instead claims that from the bottom to the very top, the administration closed ranks against him, including possibly turning a blind eye to the falsification of evidence.

The guilt or innocence of any of the parties in the above case is not the issue here, but the lack of an independent body to which a complainant can appeal is.

This is particularly true for the Civil Service, whose members are bound by a Mafia-style "omerta" or vow of silence, from disclosing publicly anything that may be going amiss in their departments.

They also do not much like the idea of having to make any complaints to their line manager, when it is he or she who holds sway over their prospects of promotion and possibly is the person against whom they most wish to complain.

Unfortunately for the hopes of any civil servant looking to the Complaints Commissioner for support, Paragraph 6.4, Section (ii) of the Bill reads: "A complaint can only be made if internal complaints procedures have been used first, and the complaint has been referred to a commissioner by a member of the Assembly or the Governor."

Swings and roundabouts anyone?

Fined for second case of assault

WHAT was described by Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis as "a momentary loss of self-control" led to financial penalties totalling £380 being imposed on Mr Jason Alazia in the Magistrates Court on Thursday.

Mr Alazia was fined £200 for a common assault on Mr Gary Thomas, to whom he was also ordered to pay £100 in compensation. Court costs of £80 were also awarded against Mr Alazia, who was given credit for having entered a plea of guilty, on the advice of his lawyer, Keith Watson.

In a previous hearing, Mr Alazia had entered a plea of not guilty, claiming he had been simply patting Mr Thomas as thanks for his intervention in a dispute. However, the court was told he had since accepted the view that striking Mr Thomas for whatever reason constituted an assault.

In sentencing, Mr Trevaskis said he rejected a suggestion by Mr Alazia's defence counsel that a conditional discharge would be appropriate.

He said bruising to Mr Thomas's chest resulting from the blow indicated an inappropriate use of excessive force. This also was the second time Mr Alazia had come before the court on an assault charge and, although the circumstances were different, he felt the appropriate punishment should be "further up the scale."

Man 'pushed' partner

DELROY Kevin Leo (20) pleaded guilty to two charges of common assault against his then partner Alena Dawn Scott, in the Magistrate's Court on Wednesday.

Crown Counsel Elliott Taylforth said the first offence, alleged to have taken place on April 9, involved Mr Leo becoming violent, grabbing, pushing, choking and attempting to smother the victim, and the second on April 18 included incidences of Mr Leo pushing Miss Scott, kicking her as she ran away, and in the ribs when she was on the floor. Mr Leo, who was not represented, admitted pushing the victim, but denied the other assertions.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said: "I am satisfied the elements of the prosecution case you deny would substantially affect sentencing, therefore I cannot accept your plea of guilty."

Mr Taylforth said because Miss Scott had withdrawn her statement she may not agree to participate. The case was adjourned until May 20.

Drink driving review

IN a hearing to determine the admissibility of elements of the prosecution's evidence against Adrian James Minnell, Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis yesterday ruled that both assertions made by Mr Minnell's lawyer Karen Bremner had failed.

Mr Minnell (46) was charged with a drink driving offence on March 14, with a reading of 94-95mc per 100ml of breath.

Mrs Bremner said Mr Minnell was not warned of the consequences of failing to provide a breath specimen, or that the form of words used in the warning he was given was incorrect.

Crown Counsel Elliott Taylforth called evidence from Reserve Police Constable Jill Roberts and Sergeant Dave Roberts. Mr Trevaskis said: "As things stand at the moment, I could be forgiven for thinking this is a fishing expedition."

The case is scheduled for a pre-trial review on May 25.

Accused denies rape charges

COLIN Macdonald (69) pleaded not guilty last Friday to charges of rape and indecent assault.

Three cases of rape and one of indecent assault were alleged to have taken place between November 1976 and November 1977 against two children, and a further charge of rape, between July 1991 and July 1992 was alleged against a third child. The trial, to be held in the Supreme Court, will begin on June 7, and is anticipated to last six to seven days.

ExCo rejects private sector on freight bids

NOT everyone seems to be as pleased as Councillor Roger Edwards by news from last week's Executive Council meeting that the consolidation of freight to West Falkland and its delivery to Fox Bay will be handed over to ferry operators Workboat Services Ltd.

Cllr Edwards, who lives at Fox Bay and was one of the ExCo members who took the decision, said he thought the move would be "well supported on the West."

But John Clifford of Saddle Direct, who has been attempting to set up a private freight service to the West, was furious.

Mr Clifford told the Penguin News: "Imagine the annoyance, having been trying for the past year to introduce a reliable freight service between Stanley and Fox Bay, to have the council undermine the effort with one fell swoop by awarding the contract to a subsidised company like Workboat Services. We at Saddle Direct, with no help or money from government or FIDC, have tried really hard to get this up and running.

"We have fought - with others - to bring rates on the Concordia Bay down to reasonable levels for freight carriers and, just when we think we are in a position to make it all work, and without any acknowledgement or even an invitation to be considered - kick, right in the nuts from council."

Cllr Edwards said the issue had been a "bone of contention for a long time."

Although delivery of freight to Fox Bay and the provision of a consolidated freight service had been part of Workboat Services' original proposal, the previous council had thought it should be opened up to the private sector.

But Cllr Edwards said efforts by the private sector to provide a consolidation service had not been a success and, because heavy traffic was having a deleterious effect on roads, ExCo felt the service should now be handed over to Workboat Services. Mr Clifford, whose company began on the West and still has a shop at Fox Bay, took issue with Cllr Edwards' assertion that the opportunity to provide such a service was never taken up successfully by the private sector.

"He should know better," said Mr Clifford. "After all, he drove our truck across for us twice."

Hamish Wylie of Seafish Chantry, which also has in the past offered a consolidated freight service to the West, said he would be surprised if Workboat Services could provide a superior service at a competitive price.

"I guess if government wants to spend more money, it's up to them," he said.

Workboat Services manager Adam Cockwell said negotiations with government were still ongoing, but his company looked forward to being able to provide a level of service that its customers would appreciate.

Veteran's son dies in Helmand

CPL Harvey Alex Holmes, 22 whose father fought with 2 Para in 1982 was killed on Sunday by an improvised explosive device close to patrol base Waterloo, in Sangin, Helmand Province Afghanistan.

He was providing protection for his patrol as it investigated a compound when the explosion happened, the MoD said.

In his five years with the 1st Battalion The Mercian Regiment Cpl Holmes served in Northern Ireland, Belize, Iraq and the Falkland Islands.

Whilst serving in the Falkland Islands, Cpl Holmes was able to visit Mount Longdon where his late father had served with the Parachute Regiment during the 1982 conflict.

This was described by Major Mark Ellwood MBE, Officer Commanding A Company, 1st Battalion The Mercian Regiment (Cheshire) as "an emotional experience for him as his father was a huge inspiration to him."

FIRS problems

SSVC engineers were on Tuesday trying to resolve a problem which has prevented Camp residents from receiving FIRS programmes via the new satellite system. They hope to resolve the problem within the next couple of days.

A princely tour

ACCORDING to the Express the RAF is making provisional plans to post Prince William for a tour of duty in the Falklands. "It's been pencilled in for William sometime down the line," said a senior RAF source.

Visit planned

COUNCILLOR Sharon Halford is to attend the annual British Islands and Mediterranean Regional Conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in the Isle of Man from May 10-14. The theme of the conference is "Technology and Democracy: Successes and Challenges." This is Cllr Halford's second visit to the Isle of Man this year.

Mrs Halford said: "Hopefully I will gain an insight into how we could better communicate with our constituents and also other bodies worldwide."

Run Together

RUN Together, the annual event to raise money for cancer research will be held on Sunday. Everyone is welcome, preferably wearing pink. Registration begins at 9am at the Leisure Centre, with an 11am start, to walk run or jog past the Beaver Hangar and back.

Last demolition

THE last demolition of mines open to the public will be held tomorrow at 2pm. Viewing is from Canopus Hill, which must be approached via Boxer Bridge. A BACTEC representative will be there to brief spectators, is it recommended they arrive early.

Challenge Day

CHALLENGE Day 2010 will be held on May 26. Everyone is encouraged to take part in any activity that causes breathlessness. Anything will do. Many activities will be held free of charge at the Leisure Centre, including free courts, pool, and fitness suite.

The Leisure Centre staff hope to achieve at least 25% population participation this year. Speak to reception or email: dbiggs.leisure@sec.gov.fk. Further details on the day and the activities planned, will be detailed in next week's Penguin News.

Immigration

EXCO last week approved a paper setting out the terms of reference of a Strategic Review of Immigration. It was recognised that much work was required regarding detailed policies and regulation, so a team lead by MLA Gavin Short, portfolio holder for Immigration, will be set up to meet fortnightly to give an initial policy thrust. More details in next week's Penguin News.

Trust Chairman Theresa Lang presents a plaque from the Falklands to Dr Elenora Horvath of the Clinica Alemana

Mammography screen visit was exceptional

THE recent inaugural mammography screening visit was very well received by everyone involved.

The procedures at the King Edward Memorial Hospital went very smoothly and at a recent "wash-up" meeting, Dr Roger Diggle complimented the Trust and the team from Clinica Alemana, Santiago for the minimal disruption to the day-to-day workings of the hospital.

Using state of the art equipment worth £160,000, the professionalism and care of the clinical team was exceptional, said members of the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust, which continues to support cancer sufferers and their families with telecommunication costs.

The Trust also thanked Derek Pettersson for hosting the annual Port Sussex fishing competition and those who took part in the raffle at the North Arm two-nighter, both of which were in aid of the charity, and the whole of the Falklands community for their assistance in this endeavour.

Mixed bag as showers are slight

APRIL showers fell far below average, with sunshine and temperature both up on monthly averages, since MPA records began in 1986.

Temperature

The mean maximum temperature was 10.6 Celsius compared with an average of 9.9C. The highest temperature was 16.5C on the 9th and the lowest maximum was 3.5C on the 21st. The mean minimum temperature was 4.1C, compared with the 3.8C average. The lowest minimum was -1.4C on the 19th and the highest minimum was 8.7C recorded on the 9th.

Rainfall

The total rainfall for the month was 31.2mm, much less than the average of 57mm. The wettest day was the 18th with a total of 9mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 17 days and 1.0 mm or more fell on nine days.

Sunshine

There were 127.8 hours of sunshine, compared with the monthly average of 112 hours. The highest daily total was 9.7 hours on the 7th.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog

There were four days when sleet or snow fell and six days with hail, just about average for both. There were five days with fog and none with thunder.

Wind/Gales

The monthly mean wind speed was 14.2 knots, against an average of 14.4 knots. The highest hourly mean speed of 37 knots and the highest recorded gust of 50 knots both occurred on the 6th. Gales occurred on three days and there were 14 days with gusts in excess of 33 knots.

Clarification

OUR apologies go to Mrs Arlette Bloomfield, Manager of Stanley Services' Falkland Islands Holidays should anything in our article "Business travellers boost tourism figures" in last week's edition have portrayed her or her organisation in a negative light.

This was not our intention, nor was it our intention to suggest that Falkland Islands Holidays had encountered any particular problems during the past season. Mrs Bloomfield wishes it to be known that the issues with FIGAS operations are common to all and not only tourist operators.

Such issues are now the subject of a positive review process being undertaken by the industry and government, the results of which are to be advised and implemented in the near future.

A final gaze at the crystal ball before the election race is run

MY, what an election this has turned out to be.

Of course I haven't seen the results yet. As I pound these words into my trusty Imperial portable typewriter and send them to that nice boy Tony through the new-fangled fax thingy, the three lads still have 72 hours to fight it out. But by the time this appears you will know the results, so let's see if I've got my little bit of crystal ball gazing right.

It had looked as though the toff David Cameron was well in the lead, with the hero of the working classes Gordon Brown chasing along grabbing whatever votes he could in Cameron's slippery wake. But since they plucked up courage and appeared on telly, it's become a three horse race. I think (aided, I have to admit by about 1,000 opinion polls over the last few days) we will have a narrow Tory victory (blast it), with Labour and the Lib Dems in a close second and third place. Hung parliament with lots of horse trading coming up. Goodie.

It doesn't bother me at all, nor most of the girls I meet at our stitch-and-bitch coffee mornings. We have all got so sick lately of one party stomping around doing what it likes, with Her Maj's opposition doing all it can to stop everything. Now, it looks like the beggars might actually have to co-operate for the good of us all. Much less time wasting.

I wonder what it might mean for your little Islands, though. Well, it will be a while before anyone gets around to thinking about the Falklands. Let's face it, we don't matter. But that might ultimately be the problem.

When the nasty-smelling dust does settle, one of the first things on the agenda will be a massive defence review. Afghanistan? We'll be there to the last bullet – but nothing else is sacred, including the nuclear deterrent and a relatively small garrison, an ice patrol ship and a handful of Typhoons 8,000 miles away.

And, as Mr Burlington says, we're in tough times, so looking after number one is all that matters. I wouldn't be surprised if there isn't a total review of foreign affairs too.

The good old FCO may be instructed to clear its desk of as many pesky problems as possible. We've got used to Tories and Labour looking after the colonies (we've got better ones than the French, and that's quite handy during regular Anglo-French peeing competitions). But we've never had the Liberals with any influence over anything, so now we might be in for a few surprises.

Oh well, whatever it means, it's going to be interesting. I'm off to the polls in a little while. Eenie, meeney, minie mo. That nice young man Nick Clegg is awfully attractive, but he is a bit of an unknown. Oh, what the heck. Let's have a flutter. Bye!

Celebrity GP a sign of global doctor shortage

RECENTLY departed from the Falklands after three months as a locum at the King Edward Memorial Hospital, Dr Mary Fortune is something of a celebrity both in her native Scotland and Australia.

After replying to an advertisement in a magazine, Dr Fortune, 52, left her family and friends behind in Brora, Sutherland, to head for the West Australian desert. After spending six weeks in the gold mining town of Kalgoorlie, Mary's final medical placement was in Dalwallinu, a tiny town in Australia's wheatbelt region.

On her arrival, the town's only resident doctor disappeared, leaving Mary completely on her own. While running the busy GP surgery, the hospital and attending emergencies 24 hours a day, she finally realised a childhood dream of working with the Australian Royal Flying Doctor service.

As if this were not challenging enough, Dr Fortune became the star of a TV documentary called Desperately Seeking Doctors.

Screened in 2008 in both Australia and Scotland, the programme looked at the medical crisis facing Australia where, despite extensive domestic and international recruitment campaigns, doctors are leaving some rural communities faster than they can be replaced. According to Dr Fortune the series "went down a treat." The BBC then made another documentary in Scotland about her called Doctor Mary's Casebook. Intended to be a modern version of the 1962 classic TV series Dr Finlay's Casebook, Dr Mary's Casebook also earned good reviews.

Dr Fortune enjoyed her time in the Falklands where she had the chance to combine general practice with accident and emergency, and even occasional duty in the operating theatre. Before leaving she quipped: "Maybe one day I'll come back with the BBC and do something here in the Falklands. You never know."

Another programme with the title Desperately Seeking Doctors has proved very popular in Canada. What the interest by filmmakers in making such programmes seems to suggest is that like the whale or the warrarrah, the general practitioner is becoming an endangered species – not just in the Falklands, but throughout the more rural parts of the world like the Australian Outback or the plains of Canada.

While more and more doctors are specialising early on in their careers, fewer it seems are willing to take on the rigours that come with living in remote areas.

When Dr Fortune arrived in Kalgoorlie she was told: "If you go on holidays, we don't have someone to fill that gap."

But it's not just Kalgoorlie struggling with staffing issues, as the Falklands knows only too well.

FIG's Senior Medical Officer Dr Roger Diggle told the Penguin News that in the Falklands he and three other doctors provided 24-hour, 365-day cover for everything that was not surgical or anaesthetic.

This, he said, was an extremely wide range of medical areas including accident and emergency, acute in-patient general medicine, and acute paediatric and obstetrics. And there are few areas in the world now where doctors are expected to provide such a wide range of services.

The policy had always been to try and recruit general practitioners with extended skills, said Dr Diggle, but this had always been problematic, with an average of one satisfactory applicant per advert.

Last October there were no satisfactory applicants for a one year or longer post, but there were five excellent applicants for shorter-terms, so four doctors were appointed to undertake approximately three months each.

These doctors, who included celebrity GP Dr Fortune, were appointed on standard FIG terms, not locum hourly rates.

Vet who led pilgrimage is new SAMA chairman

A 1982 veteran known to many in the Falkland Islands has become the new Chairman of the South Atlantic Medal Association (SAMA 82).

At the annual meeting of the Association held in Southport, Lancashire, Mike Bowles was elected as Chairman to take over from Tony Davies who is stepping down after three years in the post. Mike has been a member of SAMA since it was started by Rick Jolly in 1997 and became a Trustee in 2008.

In 1982 Mike commanded the Port Squadron from 17 Port Regt RCT which was sent on the operation. The Squadron was spread around the six Landing Ships Logistic (LSL) of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary and also various merchant ships. They operated the Mexeflote rafts as well as cargo handling gear, fork lift trucks, cranes and everything else needed to operate a port. After the surrender the Squadron set up a military port in Stanley and built and commissioned B Slip which was to be the centre of operations for many months afterwards.

The Squadron HQ was set up in Harry Milne's office (now Roger Spink's) in the FIC building and the port operators quickly adopted Harold Rowlands as their benefactor – a relationship that continued for well over 20 years until Harold's sad death in 2004.

With his family, Mike returned to the Islands in 1995 for 15 months as Chief Staff Officer (Personnel and Logistics) in HQ BFFI where, among other responsibilities, he had the Civil Military Liaison officer working for him.

His son was a cub with Jan Miller's pack and his wife Ros's claim to fame was winning the Commander's Cup at the Boxing Day races in 1996 on a horse belonging to Ron Binnie – Miss Ellie. The family returned in 2000 for a holiday while Mike was serving as Defence Attaché in Brazil. Later he led the 2007 Pilgrimage for 250 veterans to mark the 25th anniversary of the conflict.

Mike is also a Trustee of Falklands Conservation and a member of the committee of the Falkland Islands Association.

On taking up his position as Chairman Mike said: "It is a great honour and I will strive to continue the excellent work done by my predecessors Rick Jolly, Martin Reed and Tony Davies."

"My family and I feel that we have strong and enduring links to the Islands which we treasure and will always maintain. It is my aim to continue to build on the links between SAMA 82, SAMA FI and all the Islanders for the benefit of veterans and of all our friends and supporters in the Islands."

Argentine sea threats realised

IT would appear that the threats against shipping travelling to and from the Falklands which were made by Argentine President, Cristina Kirchner in February have now become a reality.

The Argentine Naval Prefecture says requests for permission to travel by sea to the Islands from Argentina must be submitted seven days before departure.

It has warned shippers that the same rule applies to vessels bound for Argentina from the Falklands, South Georgia, or South Sandwich Islands in the Falklands archipelago.

The Argentine curbs include punitive action against vessels that are found to be involved with the Falklands oil exploration effort, but at the heart of the new restrictions are Argentine demands for shippers to adhere to its Decree 256/2010, which forces shippers who comply to tacitly recognise Argentine jurisdiction over the Islands. In one major incident in February, Argentine coastal officials halted a shipment of oil pipes apparently destined for the Falklands.

The seizure coincided with the start of exploratory drilling.

Neither the oil companies nor Argentine authorities watching over them have given up on the idea that the Falklands basin may hold huge oil and gas reserves.

As a result, some commentators claim, the Argentine moves to refurbish its long neglected military machine as part of the sovereignty drive.

Dismayed at lack of Kelpers

I WAS dismayed upon reading yesterday's paper that you asked members of the public, only two of which are "Kelpers," for their opinion if Camp two-nighters should be promoted by the Tourist Board. Quite obviously, who-ever dreamed that one up needs to learn about the Camp.

Yes, two-nighters are a Camp tradition. Visitors are always welcomed, but to ask the public, mainly expats, is wrong. You should ask the people who are left running the farms and who organise such special occasions, for their views. Good luck Campers, from an envious Frog.

Penguin News: Missing Links

This image from Don Bonner features a plane which flew from Southampton via Montevideo on a trial return flight, sponsored by FIC, during 1952. The aircraft was a converted Second World War Sunderland flying boat. But who was it carrying? If you think you know, please send an email to editor@penguinnews.co.fk. Our thanks to June McMullen who recognised the mare upon which her husband Tony was riding in our photo of April 23. Her name was Susan.

My remote is out of control

MAY I ask your readers whether they consider the remote control of their TV as a "consumable?"

I ask because after your letter from a lady saying how well FIC was doing in the customer service department, I have been disappointed to find that another company considers customer service to be very low to non-existent.

I will explain: I have had a problem with my new (10 month old TV) remote control. I have changed the batteries. I cannot access any function with the remote at all, but I can access four programmes on/off, volume, channel change and change access to VCR/DVD from the front of the TV. What I cannot access is Teletext, tuning the satellite, changing details in source programmes, like the colour. Therefore I cannot use three programmes of seven. How can that be classified as a "consumable" and not covered by the two-year manufacturer's warranty?

I would like to hear your readers' views. I know Caroline has gone on record telling everyone I will be using the remote to excess when we get satellite, a whole three channels! But ten months is not long to be operational for the zapper. My last TV, 25 years old, expired, hence the need for a new one. I have loaned the remote to Bonnie over the way; that one is still going strong. I am glad that the info on the supermarine wallrus was of interest.

Editor's note: While I was inconveniently hospitalised for a minor operation last week, maybe Bill Luxton was undergoing a sense of humour bypass. His letter in response to my opinion piece clearly touched a nerve. Sadly, it wasn't his humerus. Lighten up, Bill! It was nothing more or less than a harmless piece of satire.

On the float of a Bleaker Beaver

YOU may not be surprised to hear that a lot of people in this country would like to get away from it all.

By "all," I mean of course the nerve-jangling election campaign and the appalling financial situation.

So what to do, said The Times today. Get out of it, that's what. Go to an island as far away as possible. It listed 20 "ultimate escapes," islands where electioneering and failing economies are rare, and peace is abundant.

You're ahead of me here, aren't you. Yes, we're talking the Falkland Islands but, one in particular. There, at number five in The Times list, was Bleaker Island (it was preceded, by the way, by Castilla de la Isla del Burguillo in Spain).

"There is not much between Bleaker and Antarctica," said the Thunderer, going on to describe the wildlife that resides on Bleaker's shores. Mike and Phyl Rendell's number and email address were listed, so I suspect Cobb's Cottage is now booked well into 2015.

That's a shame for me, because when I'm back in the Falklands I like going out to Bleaker to spend a day or two in its utter tranquility. Bleaker has special memories for me because, back in the 1970s, my father negotiated rights from the FIC to develop the island as a tourist location. He and I made plans for the island, and would travel to and from it by Beaver floatplane of FIGAS, or on the Lindblad Explorer or the World Discoverer (both now rusting beneath the sea, God bless their little hulls).

The FIC were even more parsimonious then than they are now, and refused to sell or lease the island as long as they could run it even slightly profitably as a sheep farm, without putting anything into it or paying any permanent staff. The war of 1982 was a watershed for Bleaker and us. Because the tourism industry died almost overnight, our hope to develop the island ended, and it was a decade or two before it again began to receive visitors and demonstrate its potential.

My most vivid memory of Bleaker has nothing to do with wildlife. Dad and I had hosted one of the ships and were being picked up by Beaver pilot Dave Emsley. Picking us up was a bit tricky, as there was no one left on shore to help fend the plane off from the jetty, and we were on a nasty lee-shore.

My father was first to climb up the float struts and into the boxy cabin. I scrambled after him, doing my best to keep the plane off the jetty as I went. Meanwhile, Dave gunned the huge Pratt and Whitney radial engine to edge us away from the structure.

The pilot could see over his right shoulder that, despite his efforts, the Beaver was drifting towards a bollard that stuck up to wing level. He shouted some probably choice words to my father, who leaned out of the aircraft's door and urged me to push us off the jetty. And, by the way, would I mind putting every ounce of my strength into it (I think he was a little less delicate).

It was all very well for him, but I was in the precarious position of having both my feet on the jetty, while my arms were wrapped around the struts of an aircraft which was trying to take off. This would have been perfectly normal activity for Bruce Willis and Sylvester Stallone, but there was no sign of them.

Other than during a brief and unsuccessful career loading bags of cement onto trucks, I had never exerted more blood-vessel-busting energy. Amazingly, though, I did manage to get the better of the Beaver and the 20-knot wind. Briefly.

Dad leaned out of the door, and shouted, "For God's sake get on board!" But I had become a human fender.

At that moment, Dave gunned the engine furiously, and the plane began to pull ahead. I leapt for the door as my father leaned out to grab me. My feet were still sticking out into the slipstream, as I heard a terrible crunch. Huddled over the control column, Dave had not heard it.

Supposedly under his control, we careered across the choppy bay, bouncing off increasingly large waves, but weaving an erratic track and certainly not leaving the water. The door was still open and I leaned out, looking for the source of the crunch.

There it was. The right tailplane – one of the little wings at the back – was hanging almost vertically and flapping like a demented penguin. The bollard and the jetty had proved stronger than De Havilland of Canada.

After what seemed like minutes Dave got the message. We managed to mime the fact that the tail had largely been ripped off, and he might like to slow down. He did, and we drifted back up on that damned lee-shore.

We were cast away on Bleaker for only a few hours. Dave called FIGAS on the radio, and his fellow pilot, Jim Kerr, soon arrived in another Beaver, carrying a couple of engineers. We dragged the wounded Beaver up the beach as well as we could and all flew back to Stanley with Jim.

A few days later, the plane was embarked onto the deck of MV Monsunen. She flew again but ended her days at the hands of the Argentines.

When I flew to Bleaker recently, I did so aboard an Islander aircraft, a less rustic little plane that is fitted with a delightful set of wheels.

I caught a glimpse of the jetty as we flew in, and noticed that it had crumbled over the years, and there was much less to see of it now. Couldn't happen to a nicer jetty, I thought.

The island was, I found, as lovely as ever but, as I packed my thermos and sandwiches ready for a hike, it occurred to me that the sense of adventure I had associated with Bleaker had gone. Not that I felt in the least sad about that.

I think it's an excellent idea, because it protects, particularly the bar staff, who don't necessarily smoke. But having seen it in the UK it costs a lot of business, and closes pubs.

You have to weigh up the health, and the business issues

Julie Halliday

I respect that people have choices, and I do enjoy going to the pub when it's a smoke free environment. Maybe it would help people who were trying to quit as well

Chris Peck

I think they should in pubs and restaurants. But they should have rooms so you can go and smoke, instead of going outside

Talk of the town

Penguin News Vox Pop

Should councillors still be working towards introducing the ban on smoking in public places?

Marty Plato

I think the people that actually live here don't want the smoking ban, the same as they don't want to have to wear seatbelts. They're trying to make the Islands like the cities

Cheryl King

Absolutely, yes definitely. Purely for health reasons

Tara Wilson

I just think it should be banned in public places. It's horrible, and it smells. It just makes places much nicer to go, if you go somewhere as a family

Vanessa Ramirez

It would be quite useful to quit smoking. They'll do me a favour if they do introduce the ban

Ken Aldridge

I think there's times and places for everything; there's enough pubs with smoking and without. It's your personal choice where you go. No smoking where there's food, but that's a different thing. Smoke and food don't mix, but smoke and booze do. It's personal choice

William Harvey

If it was to happen then fair enough. If I have to go outside and have a fag it wouldn't bother me. If it happens, it happens, either way it's not going to stop me smoking

Jo Watson

I smoke, but I wouldn't mind. It wouldn't bother me if they brought it in

Chile earthquake fund ends with final flourish

THE Falkland Islands show no signs of suffering from compassion fatigue with over £25,000 already raised for the Chilean Earthquake Appeal and some money still to be collected.

Saturday afternoon saw the drawing of the Appeal's raffle in the Parish Hall, marking the end of a series of money-raising events, following the earthquake in Chile on February 27. Numbers in attendance were probably reduced due to other attractions, such as the North Arm Two-Nighter, but those who were there had plenty to amuse and entertain them.

Girl Guides, Shannon Henry, Kirsty McLeod, Emily Barker, Sophie Pomper Robertson and Jessica Whalley King served hot drinks and ran a cake stall, assisted by Nancy Jennings, Adela Guala, and Christine Scipio O'Dean.

Children, many of whom had faces painted by Carolina Bonner and sister Veronica, were kept happily and noisily amused by the energetic clown, Rafael Sotomayor.

A demonstration of the Chilean national dance, La Cueca, was given by Ricardo Leyton, who was wearing full 'huaso' costume, including riding boots, and accompanied by the elegant Kathy Reyes.

Shortly after 3.30pm the raffle ticket sellers, Alison Howe, Anna King and Paula Muñoz announced that all 500 tickets had been sold, so with £2,500 safely in the kitty, it was time for the draw to begin.

Bank Manager Donny Donosepoetro struggled for some time with a recalcitrant tombola machine, aided by Councillor Dick Sawle, before at last the winning numbers began to come out.

North Arm crowd cheers on fun trial champions

Sharon Jaffray reports on the North Arm
two-nighter

IN its third year and a firm favourite with spectators and dog handlers alike, the fun trials at North Arm on Saturday were as entertaining as had been anticipated. Not missing out on a chance to have a flutter, spectators were cheering their preferred dog on while others were ready to offer a bit of distraction if the competition didn't look to be going their way.

The hilly course offered a great view of proceedings which required the handler and dog to gather up 15 sheep, haul them across the ditch and pen them. Extra points were awarded if abandoned sheep from the previous handler were scooped up and the light drizzle which persisted throughout the morning failed to dampen the high spirits of dogs, handlers or spectators.

Top sweep prize of £1,250 goes to Vic Bar

THE Darwin Harbour Sports Association sweep draw is the traditional reason for the May two-nighter. Sales were up by £1,000 this year and the top prize of £1,250 was eagerly awaited by ticket holders. Keeping everyone on the edge of their seats it was among the last few prizes to be drawn and went to a Victory Bar syndicate consisting of Cathy Jacobsen (Snr), Vera Simpson, Leif and John Pollard, Roger Howells and Andy Williams. Sweep secretary Glynis Newman reported that £1435 was made for the Darwin Harbour Sports Association this year.

VHF 2 metre Band
147.725 (Duplex - 0.6) Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross Sound ferry main operational area

146.625. Stanley to Mount Alice

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFI may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 30th April 2010

Tony Mills, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands

The wool market has moved downwards with the EMI closing the week down 8 cents to 876 AUD c/kg. However, because of the weak in the pound the EMI has strengthened by 1 p/kg to 534 p/kg. This same exchange rate effect is again influencing pricing across the micron ranges reported with the majority of categories showing price increases.

Demand for most wool types was reported as being softer with the most significant falls in the 19-20 micron range. Skirtings were also reported to be down which is an unusual event especially over the last 4 years. China while still a dominant buyer are sitting on high stocks and haven't been as active in the current buying period.

Analysts are speculating that over the coming weeks there will be a return to price levels experienced earlier in the year. This would appear to be good news if you have not sold all of your wool however it doesn't necessarily provide any comfort if you are considering sales at present.

Surely, the coolest fundraiser... ever

IT'S difficult at times to pinpoint how and when a challenge is set down or accepted, but at some point on Friday Ally Bonner had agreed to swim across the creek and back from the North Arm jetty for charity. For the sake of decency, a skimpy ladies thong was selected as his only attire for the event. And so it was that at 1pm on Saturday Ally stripped off and executed a smooth dive into the cold, kelpy sea, the rear view resembling a firmer version of Peter Stringfellow. Hot on his heels was Sarah Crofts who had bravely offered to swim with him. I say brave because she was sporting Ally's boxer shorts which carried the motif "Warning, may contain nuts!"

Cheered on by a large crowd on the jetty the two strong swimmers were soon across the creek where Ally clambered onto the rocks and executed 10 star jumps. £10 per jump for charity. Back at the jetty a shivering Ally accepted a hot rum but the news that a total of £570 had been raised for the Stephen Jaffray Fund and the Darwin Harbour Sports Association was all he needed to get the blood pumping to his extremities again.

Keith Alazia and Kenneth Jaffray provide backup

Raffle, auction, games and BBQ boost Stephen Jaffray and Cancer Support funds by a massive £3,340.56

A SPUR of the moment decision to run a raffle by Violet Clarke and Sheila Harvey just two weeks before the event resulted in a massive £2,184 being raised from the sale of tickets. Local businesses and individuals had donated a total of 63 prizes which were on display at the hall as the draw took place. The auction of four pictures, a quarter of beef and of course the swimming thong, brought a further £970 into the coffers. The perfect warm up after the swimming event had been a barbecued feast at the club which through donations had collected a further £161.86. The evening entertainment in the form of crazy party team games devised by the one and only Neville Hayward had not only kept participants and spectators in stitches, but has also added a further £115.70 to the funds. A tremendous effort by all concerned, especially the people of North Arm who once again went out of their way to ensure that visitors old and new had the time of their lives. Thanks everyone, I'm looking forward to the next one already!

Falkland Islands' unique plants to be conserved at Kew Gardens

SOME of the Falklands' rarest plant species have been saved from possible extinction by an ongoing collaboration between botanists from the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew and Falklands Conservation.

Botanist Richard Lewis has been visiting the islands to work on plant conservation for 4.5 months. As part of his work he has been collecting seeds from native plant species for a unique conservation initiative, the Millennium Seed Bank Partnership. These have included seeds from many of our rarest native plants and three of the 13 plants that are unique to the Falklands and found nowhere else on earth.

As part of their ongoing plant conservation programme, Falkland Conservation (FC) have been collaborating with the Millennium Seed Bank Partnership (MSBP) at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew in a drive to collect and safeguard seeds from all native Falkland Island seed plants.

The MSBP is based in the UK and is a unique, global project that aims to safeguard as many wild plant species as possible. With 10% of the world's seed plants already in the bank, the MSBP is aiming for 25% by 2020, including 90% of all seed plants native to the UK Overseas Territories.

At the MSBP, the seeds are carefully dried and then stored at -20°C, allowing them to remain viable for decades or centuries. These seeds are then made available to researchers and for restoration projects as well as acting as a safeguard against extinction in the wild.

In the Falklands, seeds from the MSBP have been used in the Native Plants Nursery project, a collaboration between FC, RBG, Kew and Stanley Growers. Native plants are being grown from seed and cuttings, under the careful supervision of Cynthia Williams at

Heather Norman and Cynthia Williams collecting seeds

Stanley Growers. Next spring, some of these will be planted out in the FC front garden, others will be made available for purchase as garden plants, and some may be used in habitat restoration projects.

Some seeds from the MSBP have been grown on at RBG, Kew, where it is hoped they will form part of a future display highlighting RBG Kew's plant conservation in the UK overseas territories, including their collaboration with FC. This will include growing on some seeds collected from an as yet unnamed species (Calandrinia sp.) similar to Felton's Flower (Calandrinia menziesii, syn. C. feltonii). It is hoped this will eventually allow researchers to accurately identify this poorly understood species.

The Falklands have around 157 native plant species suitable for seed banking, plus a further 19 native species not suitable for seed banking, including ferns and clubmosses that produce spores rather than seeds. Previous seed collections undertaken in collaboration with FC have seen 77 of these species added to the MSBP. Over the 2009/2010 season, Richard Lewis has been working to add to these collections, resulting in 45 separate seed collections from 38 species, 35 of which were new to the MSBP.

This brings the running total to 112 species seed banked, over it bears separate male and female plants, with only the female plants bearing seeds. It also tends to grow in fairly remote locations, often on mountains, making collecting trips time consuming and sometimes logistically difficult.

At one location visited only male plants were found, whilst at another all the female flowers had all been nibbled off by some escaped goats.

At a third location the plants were heavily grazed and probably rarely, if ever, flower, whilst at the fourth the chilly November had delayed flowering, so a long climb to the top of the mountain resulted in lovely photos of flowering plants, but sadly no seeds!

The seed collections made over the 2009/2010 season have only been possible thanks to the assistance of 15 local and international volunteers, who have helped make seed collections in locations as diverse as Weddell, Keppel and Kidney Islands, Cape Pembroke, North Arm and Roy Cove. Our thanks go out to all who have contributed to this inspiring conservation project.

Ian Stewart wins golf May Medal

IAN Stewart won the first medal tournament of the new golf season with a net score of 69 in what can only be described as difficult conditions.

Such was the strength of the wind that only eight players signed in for the tournament which was as in previous seasons sponsored by Decor Services. Wayne Thompson was placed second with a net 74, five shots behind Ian. AD Lowe recorded the only birdie on the day.

On Sunday the Club will hold

Ian Stewart

an inaugural tournament sponsored by Caribbean Sun Alliance. This tournament will count towards last season's league tables. Usual check-in time.

Club members should also note that the Annual General Meeting of the Club will be held after the June Medal on Sunday.

Items for the agenda and nominations for committee positions can be posted on notices to be placed on the Clubhouse noticeboard.

British family saved in Southern Ocean drama

A BRITISH family with good reason to be thankful for the Royal Navy's presence in the South Atlantic arrived back in the Falklands on Wednesday aboard HMS Clyde.

After a twenty-hour vigil of baling to keep down rising water levels, Carl Lomas and Tracey Worth, also known as Lord and Lady Hollinsclough, and daughters Caitland and Morgause were rescued from their sinking yacht Hollinsclough by the HMS Clyde, three-hundred miles north east of South Georgia.

They left South Georgia on an excellent weather forecast, Mr Lomas said, expecting regular force eight gales which are typical for the southern oceans: "It was sensible southern ocean weather; what you expected."

Last Friday, when safely hove-to for the night, their Oyster yacht Hollinsclough was hit by a "growler" the name given to small chunks of floating ice rising only about one metre out of the water.

Their alarm signal was received by the international distress centre run by the Falmouth coastguard, who communicated with HMS Clyde, which was some two hundred miles away from the stricken yacht.

When HMS Clyde approached the family was huddled together on the rear deck of the stricken vessel.

"It was by the grace of God that we found an English warship, sat within 300 miles of us. We could not believe the luck we had," Mr Lomas said. "The Royal Navy plucked us from the ocean and saved our lives, for which we're forever indebted."

Before communications finally broke down on the Hollinsclough the family received messages of support from all over the world, including from the Rev Dr Richard Hines of Christchurch Cathedral in Stanley, the FPV Pharos SG, the RRS Shackleton and HMS York.

On the four days spent on HMS Clyde returning to the Falklands, the family "were treated to outstanding food, friendship and warmth," Mr Lomas said.

As is customary for naval ships on operation, there was a communication blackout from the ship, which the family described as difficult to deal with at times, as they had no way of communicating with their family back in the UK.

Mr Lomas said: "We're just happy to be here with the friendship and warmth of the Falkland Islands. There's no greater place than the Falklands Islands to have to come back to."

They are staying with friends and their daughters made in their previous six weeks visit to the Islands, which was longer than expected: "The girls were very sad to leave the Islands and leave the school," Tracey said. "We'd stayed longer than expected because the girls had got involved in going to school and really loved it, and asked us to keep them here until the end of term." She added: "We recognise that there were lots of friends in the Falklands that were rooting for us, and we did appreciate that."

While happy to be in Stanley they do hope to return home soon: "It's time to take stock and head home to England" said Karl.

Rockhopper shares boom

SHARES in the Rockhopper Exploration company rose from 37p to 93p following last Friday's announcement of an oil discovery and surged upwards in value again on Monday to open at £1.90, reaching as high as £2.35 during the following week.

This optimism among investors followed an update from the AIM listed company on Monday, which stated that additional logging data had confirmed the quality of the reservoir encountered by their Sea Lion well.

Managing Director of Rockhopper, Samuel Moody, commented: "These are further encouraging results; the logs clearly indicate that we have encountered a high quality reservoir interval with very good porosity and permeability. This increases the likelihood that we will return to this well later during the campaign to carry out a flow test."

Renewed confidence in the viability of the North Falkland Basin has been shown by the market. Shares in Desire Petroleum which had slumped in the wake of early disappointing results from their Liz well, rose from 37p on May 5, to 88.5p yesterday.

The winners of the Falklands Exposed photography competition have been selected from 1,300 images, and along with more than 120 finalist's pictures are now on display at the Jetty Visitors Centre. This is an extraordinary exhibition which showcases the Falklands landscape, wildlife and lifestyle from every imaginable angle through the eyes of Islanders, short term residents and visitors alike.

The Jetty Visitors Centre is open from 10am to 3pm on Saturday; 11am to 3pm on Sunday and 11am until 2.30pm weekdays, apart from Monday when it is closed all day. Turn to the centre pages for a preview of the exhibition and to find out who captured the winning images in each category.

Penguin News

THERE is an old saying to the effect that while hard work, intelligence and perseverance are all admirable qualities, it is better to be lucky. However it goes, I am sure it is a sentiment with which the eight members of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly would all agree.

Since the announcement by Rockhopper Exploration last Thursday that they seemed to have found some oil, I am sure councillors have also been tempted to remember thankfully that other old cliché: "What a difference a day makes."

Six months or so since they were voted in, and probably time that we stopped thinking of them as "new," the eight councillors seem to have been enjoying an extended honeymoon period, even - rather disturbingly to some people - winning plaudits from one of our regular and most critical correspondents.

Whether this is because they have been wisely doing the right things, or rather, as someone unkindly suggested, because they have even more wisely been doing nothing at all, is not clear. However, I would bet an old penny to a rapidly devaluing pound that all eight were viewing the approach of the Assembly's budget session on May 26 with some trepidation.

Cuts in public spending are usually accompanied by increases in taxation and fees and though these might be necessary they are no more popular here than in Athens. Furthermore, no amount of feet shuffling, finger pointing or shoulder shrugging would serve to allow councillors to wriggle out of being held responsible, either individually or collectively.

The Falkland Islands do not seem to have suffered too severely from the global economic chaos, but, with the Illex squid still being coy, or perhaps being slaughtered in unsustainable numbers as it passes through Argentine waters, and bad weather plus a rising tide of cost and regulation reducing the arrivals of large cruise ships, any chance of balancing the budget without what BBC commentators used to call "swingeing cuts" is as likely as squadrons of flying penguins.

Now, suddenly, it doesn't seem to matter as much. The mere existence of the oil means that the Malvinas House Hotel will continue to be full of oil men for much longer and, if we have to wait for some years before real revenues start to flow, in the meantime there are always our reserves to be squandered - sorry, I meant invested.

It's all good isn't it? So why aren't the champagne corks popping at Gilbert House and the streets raucous with celebrations of drunken councillors? Could it be that our representatives are having a "Hurrah...oh dear" moment as they realise that while they may have got lucky in the short term, in the longer term, if the black gold does flow they might be faced with challenges beyond any they have so far imagined.

If you have a view, please write to Penguin News about it.

FIG planning stronger stance

LEGISLATIVE Assembly member, Emma Edwards, is to attend a seminar entitled "An Assessment of the Decolonisation Process in Today's World" organised by the United Nations (UN) Committee.

Attendance at the seminar, to be held in the Pacific island of Noumea in New Caledonia, is seen as preparation for the annual meeting in June of the United Nations Special Committee of 24 in New York.

Miss Edwards will be attending this meeting with Legislative Assembly colleague Gavin Short.

While it is sometimes felt inappropriate for the Falklands, as a largely autonomous overseas territory, to be attending a meeting on decolonisation, it is seen as offering the Falkland Islands an annual high-profile opportunity to refute the Argentine sover-eighty claim. Miss Edwards stated: "This year, given the increasing prominence given to its territorial claims by Argentina, Members of Legislative Assembly felt that it was appropriate that the Falkland Islands Government's stance be aired in the international arena as much as possible."

"Attendance at the seminar will give the Falkland Islands a greater insight into what the aims of the Committee of 24 are, enabling us to take a stronger and more productive stance at next month's meeting in New York."

"It will also allow us to network with other territories in a similar position to ourselves, as well as meeting member countries of the Special Committee. It is important for the Falkland Islands to raise their profile on the international scene."

Moira attends stamp festival

Moira Eccles with Tim Underwood (right) and the Air Attaches of USA, Poland, Canada, Australia and France at the RAF Club

POSTMASTER Moira Eccles is attending the 2010 International Stamp Exhibition, which started on May 6 and closes tomorrow.

The Exhibition is one of the highlights of the London Festival of Stamps, a year long celebration of stamps, stamp design and postal heritage which also marks the centenary of the accession of George V, the philatelist king. The Exhibition contains approximately 150 stands manned by postal services and stamp dealers from around the world.

On May 7 the Falkland Islands stamp issue commemorating the 70th anniversary of the Battle of Britain was released, to celebrate the achievements of 2,927 brave young airmen from no less than 14 allied countries who over 14 days from 10 July to 31 October 1940, took to the skies to defend Britain from Nazi tyranny.

Sadly 544 did not return and at the start of 2010 it was believed that only 90 of "The Few" (as Churchill named them) were still alive.

Mrs Eccles was delighted to be able to hold the official launch of the Battle of Britain stamp issue at the Royal Air Force Club in London.

The launch was attended by the Military Attaches of the USA, Poland, Canada, Australia and France, among others. Also present was Tim Underwood, managing director of Creative Direction, which manufactures stamps on behalf of the Falkland Islands Government.

Questions flow on world faith day

STUDENTS at the Falkland Islands Community School had an unusual and thought-provoking opportunity to gain insights into the world's major religions recently. Teacher Veronica Fowler explains how it came about:

In the normal course of the curriculum, Years 9, 10 and 11 at FICS all undergo short courses on Comparative Religion, giving them an overview of the major faith groups. With this in mind, Monday May 10, was a historic day for us. Thanks to liaison with the padre at MPA, Andrew Wakeham-Dawson, we at FICS, were delighted to welcome chaplains from five different faith groups for a Q&A session.

In 2005, the MOD recruited four Chaplains from four major faith groups, incorporating the already existing role of Honorary Jewish Chaplain into the role of Civilian Chaplains to the Military (CCM).

Multi-Faith Chaplaincy is not new to the Services, the first Jewish chaplain being appointed as long ago as 1892. It may interest readers to know that, within the British military, there are 581 Buddhists, 134 of the Jewish faith, 1005 Hindus, 809 Muslims, and 176 Sikhs.

At FICS, we were very fortunate to have representatives from all of the above faiths under one roof, to include the Revd (Gp Capt) Jonathan Chattey, Assistant Chaplain in Chief Operations who, in his capacity as Chair of the World Faiths Working Group of the Armed Forces Chaplaincy Board, has responsibility for day-to-day direction of the CCM.

It is not often that any of us have the pleasure of a Rabbi, an Imam, and representatives of the Hindu, Buddhist and Sikh religions in our midst, especially representatives who will take a variety of random, even unpredictable, questions from a group of young people.

There was concern that our students might be overwhelmed and shy to ask questions but the opposite was true – we ran out of time before many questions could be answered, and it was heartening to see the interest our students displayed.

We were shown a prayer shawl by the Jewish representative, and the kirpan, a traditional religious sword or dagger carried by Sikhs. Students were delighted to hear from Mrs – yes, Mrs Mandeep Kaur, that she even slept with her kirpan. Lots of pause for thought, I think, would sum up this momentous meeting of minds.

Gurkha TV

BFBS Television has added a 10th channel to its service, especially for Gurkha soldiers on operations in Afghanistan.

The 1st Battalion The Royal Gurkha Rifles has just deployed for a six-month tour of duty in Afghanistan, taking over Nahr-e Saraj (South) from the Coldstream Guards on April 26.

On May 14, within three weeks of their arrival in Helmand, BFBS was able to deliver a Nepali language TV channel.

Nimrod MR2

COVENTRY Airport's aviation museum has added an RAF Nimrod MR2 to its fleet of classic planes.

The reconnaissance aircraft, which saw service during the Falklands War, will not remain airworthy, but will be kept in a taxi-able condition at the airbase.

A spokesman for the museum said: "The Nimrod will make a dramatic addition to our collection."

Pink prizes

THE post Run Together "pink raffle" was a great success raising over £500 for the Falkland Islands Cancer Support and Awareness Trust (FICSAT).

A variety of pink prizes were won including a mobile phone, drill, gardening kit, cushions, clothing and pizzas. FICSAT wish to thank all the individuals and organisations who generously donated items and also everyone who bought tickets.

Vets ashed out

AMONG the casualties of the Icelandic volcanic ash were the two European Union veterinary inspectors who had been due to visit the Falklands.

Director of Natural Resources, John Barton, writing in the Agricultural Department's journal Wool Press compared this event, or non-event, to the fabled tornado in Texas caused by the flap of a butterfly's wing in Brazil.

BFBS award

BFBS Radio won a Special Award this week at the star-studded Sony Radio Academy Awards, at London's Grosvenor House Hotel. The Sony Radio Academy Special Award was made in recognition of a contribution by BFBS to the radio industry that reaches beyond the normal bounds of the Awards.

Yacht club

THE Falkland Islands Yacht Club was formed on April 20 under the chairmanship of Tony Blake.

The club has expressed an interest in the development of Stanley waterfront to the government and will be holding its first AGM on May 20.

Tim's calendar does it again for a second year

FOR the last two years, retired Community School art teacher, Tim Simpson has produced a calendar featuring scenes around Stanley at her own expense and using her own pictures.

The proceeds of sales are split equally between the Museum and National Trust and the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund.

This year Mrs Simpson was able to give the Museum and the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund £1,154.63 each.

Oddly enough, as she points out, last year's amount raised was almost exactly the same... £1,154.52 to each of them.

Mrs Simpson told Penguin News: "As ever, the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund uses all money donated to help families whose relatives have to go overseas for treatment. Leona tells me the Museum put last year's donation from the calendar sales toward paying for the Oral History of the Falkland Islands project. I'm not sure that many people realise that the Museum is actually run as a charity."

Offering her thanks to everyone who bought her 2010 calendar, Mrs Simpson wonders whether folk would buy it again if she were to go for a third year.

One body that hopes she will be the Museum and National Trust. Manager Leona Roberts writes: "The Museum & National Trust is grateful to Mrs Tim Simpson for her extremely generous donation."

"Tim has long been a friend of the Museum and this is the second year that she has given us half of the takings from the sale of her calendar - her support is greatly valued and much appreciated. We try to use major donations like this for specific projects and this year's donation from Tim will be used towards the scanning of our glass plate negative collection."

All Stanley turns out for Henry's big charity bang

PEOPLE like to see explosions, at least from a safe distance.

That would seem to be a safe conclusion to draw from the fact that a host of folk in 94 vehicles (Jimmy Smith's count) turned up at Canopus Hill on Saturday afternoon to see the demolition of almost the last, of well over a thousand mines cleared from the Surf Bay minefield during recent months.

It would also seem safe to say that lots of people would like the chance to set off a big explosion, but maybe not as much as Nyree Heathman and Henry Browning.

With the cooperation of the Falkland Islands Radio Service, the mine-clearing contractors, BACTEC had arranged an auction, with the highest bidder getting to press the plunger on Saturday and send the mines and a great quantity of peat, smoke and sand into the air.

With half an hour to go to the 1pm deadline the best bid stood at £250, but by the time the seconds had finally ticked away to the end of Liz Elliot's Lifestyle programme and the close of the auction, Henry Browning had narrowly outbid Nyree with an offer of £500.

This offer was immediately matched by BACTEC themselves, with the now magnificent sum of £1000 promised to be shared between the local Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and BLESMA, a charity which looks after servicemen who have lost limbs in the course of their duties.

On the day, the bang was even bigger than originally promised and Henry's smile reportedly almost as big as the bang he set off.

Thanks to the efforts of Bruce Humphreys, beaver away in his armoured digger, the last panel of mines have now been discovered some four metres below the sand and another three anti-tank mines have been found, carefully excavated to add to the 18 already destined to be blown up.

It is hoped that the final few mines in the last panel will be found and safely disposed of before the end of this week, which will allow BACTEC Project manager Roger Gagen to go home, following operations manager, Kev Bryant who left the Islands on Tuesday.

Henry Browning gets to hold an anti-tank mine, but only, BACTEC were at pains to add, after it had been made completely safe

UNASUR backs Argentine claim

THE leaders of the 12-member Union of South American Nations (UNASUR), has declared support for Argentina in its dispute with Britain over sovereignty of the Falkland Islands, in anticipation of its forthcoming summit.

One positioning document states that UNASUR repudiates recent petroleum exploration activities by Britain in the area and calls on the two nations to comply with recommendations by the United Nations and seek a negotiated solution.

In another paper, UNASUR declares that one of the organisation's priorities is to integrate the continent's electricity grids and expand the development of energy sources as well as access to those sources throughout all of South America.

Nestor Kirchner, former president of Argentina and the husband of the present president was elected UNASUR Secretary General.

One problem with his election was a threat by Uruguay to veto Kirchner because of a dispute over alleged pollution from paper mills built in Uruguay across the River Plate from Argentina.

Finally, there is the matter of Paraguay where the president, Fernando Lugo, has placed the country under a "state of exception" so the Army can act freely (always a delicate issue in Latin America).

Lugo justifies the measure because of activities of a leftist militant movement known as the Army of the Paraguayan People (EPP) that has been kidnapping people since 2008. Paraguay also has a very serious problem with drug trafficking.

At the moment, further complicating the situation, Paraguay and Brazil face difficulties along the 1,365 kilometre border the two countries share where tens of thousands of so-called Brasiguayos have lived on both sides of the border more or less without any control for many years. These people, who are both, but neither, Brazilian or Paraguayan and often have no documents, are being expelled from Paraguay en masse by the EPP and drug barons.

Legislative Assembly Diary

An occasional glimpse into the work of a member of Legislative Assembly provided by Jan Cheek

AN early Tuesday deadline means that I will not know the outcome of the fascinating power struggle that has followed the inconclusive UK general election.

The striking aspect of it all is the way that the pre-election slander and backstabbing has been replaced by 'respectful' discussions.

Whatever the final outcome, I do not anticipate new problems for us because we have enjoyed good cross party support for many years. Much of the credit for this is due to the hard work of our London representative Sukey Cameron. The high regard in which she is held is always evident when attending political party conferences or meeting politicians.

It is good to have encouraging news in the latest drilling round.

Visits, walks and dining

THE Sea and Marine Cadets charity dinner held at Government House last Friday raised over £1,300. Twenty-four people enjoyed the four course meal and music provided by Karen Neely and Maryanna Ryan.

A silent auction for a weekend at Port Stephens, a bottle of Glenlivet, a hand made bag from Mim Newton and other things swelled the takings.

Decorations for the event, which was also held to celebrate the 150th Anniversary of the Cadets movement, included a display from Geoff Pring on the history of the Marines.

The Sea and Marine Cadets also completed an 85km yomp from KC to Stanley, from April 29 to May 2. Royal Marine Cadet David Parker completed the entire distance, with others completing various parts of the walk.

"They all did really well" CPO Ken Newton said. "The weather was fairly good which helped a lot. Obviously the high point was finishing!" He would like to thank those who allowed the cadets to cross their land and stay over night, the FIDF for logistical support and everyone who sponsored them.

Arriving on Monday for a week long visit to conduct various training inspections and reviews of procedure are Commander Andy Giles from the Southern Area headquarters in the UK and Major Steve Crawley of the Royal Marines, both veterans of the Falklands War on their first return to the Islands.

During the visit the annual Royal Naval Parade will be held at the Sea Cadet Unit, on Sunday May 23 at 6pm.

The companies that have made huge investments over many years deserve praise for their persistence and commitment. However, it is too soon to break open the champagne with much more work and analysis required.

What is now clear is that we need to give considerable thought to the implications of a possible future commercial find.

In many ways the 'oil' scenario is more fraught with problems than the 'no oil' one. An acquisitive neighbour may be the least of them. Big oil companies have done pretty much as they please in much larger countries than ours so we will need to be careful whose advice we seek and take in the event of a find proving commercial.

I have yet to find any two individuals in full agreement about what we need to include in a new port, where it should go and how it may be paid for. I do know that I will feel duty bound to vote against any proposal that would significantly encroach on Stanley's recreational space.

Finally, any arguments we may have regarding the future of the minefields, for example remediation, must be had with the Foreign Office, not the deminers who have done a great job in frequently nasty weather and ground conditions.

Many thanks for the feedback from the first MLA diary which is much appreciated. All of us welcome comment on any issue.

Four new recruits join defence force

Recruits and FIDF personnel relax at the end of live firing tactical training exercise on Saturday May 8

FOUR recruits became full members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF) last Saturday after completing a testing two day exercise.

A large number of FIDF personnel took part in the exercise, which was intended to be one of the FIDF "main effort" events of this part of the year. It gave members the chance to practice live firing tactical training after a series of preparation events, which included range work and blank firing battle exercises.

Over the special training course that was arranged for the recruits, which commenced in early March, they received training in the whole range of basic soldiering skills, including camouflage and concealment, fieldcraft, movement with arms, navigation, weapon handling and marksmanship, section and platoon tactics and battle exercises.

The Commanding Officer of the FIDF, Major Peter Biggs, said he was very pleased with the outcome of the exercise. "Exercises such as this rely on meticulous preparation in order for troops to get the maximum realistic, but safe benefit. The FIDF staff involved in the preparation for this exercise did an excellent job.

"For the recruits that qualified on the day this is just the beginning of their training, giving them the basics to build on. I was very happy with the standard of the recruits, and was impressed that two of them that have extensive previous military experience still put themselves forward to do the complete recruits course. They earned a lot of respect for their commitment."

The FIDF will be running another recruits cadre that will commence in late August 2010.

No political tries scored by rugby visitors

It is my deepest pleasure to be in touch with you again. It was of strategic matter to let time pass by in order to send you this letter.

We wanted you to see that our trip to the Islands last December was not used in any political way, and that none of us have made any negative quotation or used our beautiful trip during the week between December 12 and 19, 2009 except as a message of peace and overcoming difficult times.

We know the problems that our governments are going through and we regret the bad things done to the web site of the Penguin News.

The way of our of our non government organization Rugby without Frontiers is going forward.

Last April 17 we sent a message of brotherhood between Argentina and Uruguay and we did a charity event for our Chilean brothers.

We would like to tell you that the war veterans who traveled with us, were able to turn the page of our terrible history that they lived.

We hope to carry on with this silver bridge of the relationship through sport, as we have done it up to now. We really hope that every day more people will understand our message of peace, love and overcoming feelings.

We are finishing our magazine that shows our travel to the Islands, both in Spanish and English, and will send you copies to be read in both languages. We will keep you informed of our next steps and wish you the best.

Dirty love nest lacking in romantic appeal

TO the people who are using the rocky outcrop on the track between the Lady Liz and the guns on top of the hill as their "love nest." Please could you clear up the used condoms, foil wrappers, coke cans and other rubbish from the area when you've finished your romantic liaison.

While I appreciate the fact that you're practising safe sex and certainly don't want to stand in the way of "loves young dream" I don't appreciate walking past the mess while out with my dog. Not quite sure what you think is going to happen to it all as there are no "condom clearing fairies" in the hills around Stanley and they're definitely not bio-degradable.

For goodness sake, bag your rubbish, take it home and bin it.

This rather atmospheric photo comes from Ian Gleadell. If you know who the young lady is or where and when it was taken please email editor@penguinnews.co.fk or ring 22709.

Mike McRae Senior tells us that the plane in last week's photo was a Short Sunderland Mark 3 belonging to Aquila Airways, call sign G-AGJH. Captained by Douglas Pearson, she departed Southampton Waters late evening on April 20, 1952 with 9 passengers. After stopping in Cape Verde Is, Brazil and Montevideo she arrived in Stanley on the afternoon of April 28. She departed Stanley on the May 2, with 16 passengers and arrived back in Southampton on May 8, having completed a round trip of 18,000 miles.

Finally Tony Anderson tells us that in our picture of April 23, he was riding Poppy, which was later gored by a steer and stitched up by visiting shearing expert Taffy Evans.

Moves afoot to overhaul immigration

MOVES are finally afoot to overhaul the Falklands immigration process which has come in for much criticism from many different quarters during recent years.

The last meeting of Executive Council accepted the terms of reference for a Strategic Review of Immigration which will be carried out by a group known as the Immigration Review Group (IRG).

This group, which will initially meet fortnightly, will be chaired by Gavin Short M.L.A., Portfolio Holder for Customs and Immigration, and will include Dick Sawle M.L.A., Deputy Portfolio Holder for Customs and Immigration; Ros Check, Principal Crown Counsel; Robert King, Collector of Customs; Wendy Reeves, Immigration Officer; Sonny José, Head of Policy; and Principal Immigration Officer Gary Finchett, who will be responsible for the co-ordination of its activities.

The Falkland Islands Immigration Ordinance was introduced in 1999 and there has been no complete review since this date. It was intended that the basic framework for immigration procedures set out under the Ordinance would be supplemented by detailed policies and regulation, but very little of the work needed for that to occur has been done, except in relation to permanent residence permits.

In 2006 an Immigration Policy Working Group was formed comprising of three members of the Legislative Assembly, the Government Secretary/Principal Immigration Officer, Collector of Customs and the Immigration Officer.

One of the first tasks of the group was to consider a draft immigration policy statement which, it was said, was intended "to encourage on a gradual and controlled basis, such permanent immigration as is in the interests of the Falkland Islands, taking account of the need: to increase the human capital of knowledge, ability and skill in the Falkland Islands; to develop and increase enterprise and innovation in the Falkland Islands; and to safeguard social cohesion and promote integration in the Falkland Islands."

The group eventually produced an immigration points system which was approved by Executive Council in 2009 and has been the subject of fierce criticism ever since.

It is regarded by many as being designed to keep out immigrants rather than to encourage immigration.

Paragraph 4.8 of the paper accepted by ExCo acknowledges these shortcomings and states: "Against ..... the concerns expressed by Members in connection with the points system, it is clear that there is a need to undertake a comprehensive review of immigration policy, beginning with a review of the fundamental policy statement to ensure that immigration policy meets the current and future needs of the Falkland Islands."

The paper suggests that criteria for Falkland Islands status or for an adjustment of the points system could be made at an early stage, as it was always anticipated that the points systems would be revised on a regular basis to reflect any changes in immigration requirements.

SIXTEEN people took part in the Run Together event held last Sunday on West Falkland. Aged between six months and 72 years old, the group has so far raised £150 for their walk from the Boundary Farm to the Point at Hill Cove

Next weekend's ball approaches

YOUNG people of the Falklands will be donning their suits and ball gowns for a glitzy and glamorous evening of old-time dancing at the annual May Ball, to be held on Friday May 21.

All the old favourites will be played, from the Fox Trot to the March of the Mods, in this traditional event of over 60 years. It is organised by the 1st Falkland Islands Scout Group as their principal fund raiser of the year.

The Town Hall doors will open at 8.30pm. Entrance will be £5 per person, with suit and tie to be worn by the gentlemen attending.

May Queen and May Princess will be chosen by three judges, unknown to those taking part, with final judging commencing at 11.30pm and the winners announced at midnight. Prince Charming and runner up will be decided by popular vote from those assembled, and the hall will close at 1pm.

Making May Ball weekend a little different this year, the second night of the traditional event, Saturday May 22, will be informal. One of the organisers Jan Miller said: "We hope lots of people will turn up and have fun."

Traditionally, Prince Charming is chosen on the second night, she said, but since that had changed the evening was attended less and less.

To encourage the crowds, the price on the door has been reduced to £3, with smart, but casual dress to be worn. A bar serving alcoholic drinks will be located in the refreshment room, available until 12.00am, with the event closing at 1am.

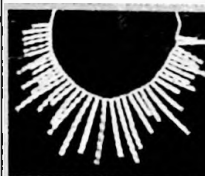

Soft drinks and refreshments for the under 18s will be served in the dance hall.

There will be a mixture of Myriam's country and western, 70s and 80s music. "Myriam has very kindly agreed to play the music for us" Jan said. "We're trying to keep it a mixture of music that everyone could dance to."

Tickets are on sale on the door, and there is no admittance allowed after 11.30pm, or by those under 15 years of age.

"We are very grateful to Cable & Wireless for kindly sponsoring the event so that we can glitz the hall" Jan added. "Justin McPhee himself was Prince charming for two years running in 1991 and 92."

Falklands Photography competition winners 2010

OVER the last few months photographs have flooded into the Falkland Islands Tourist Board website in response to the Falklands Exposed competition.

Sponsored by the Tourist Board, Footprint Travel Guides, the Falkland Islands Government and Outdoor Photography magazine, top prizes of cameras, photography vouchers, travel photography guides and magazine subscriptions were all up for grabs and the winners have now been selected.

The competition was open to amateur, professional and young photographers anywhere in the world who had captured a Falklands moment over six categories in the last two years and more than 1,300 images were submitted.

With the exceptional light, diverse landscapes, captivating wildlife, rich heritage and active lifestyle there was no shortage of subjects to focus on. That there is something for everyone in the Falklands became apparent as the images were uploaded taken from every angle and arriving from every corner of the globe.

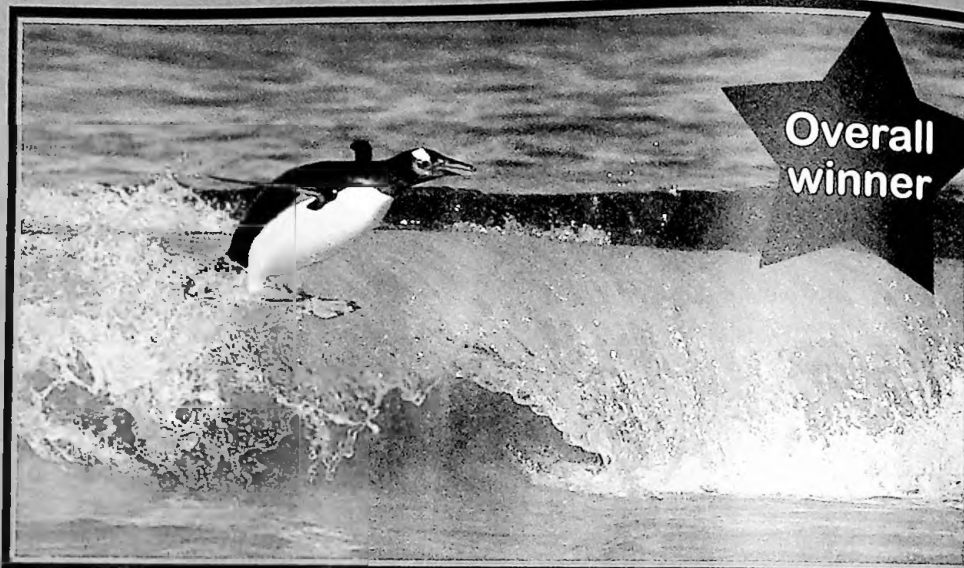

Travel photographer and Footprint journalist Steve Davey had the unenviable task of selecting 10 shots from each category, 10 youth shots and five portfolios. The final stage of judging was carried out by Will Gray a freelance travel writer and photographer, Steve Watkins Editor of Outdoor Photography magazine, Jenny Smith for the Falkland Islands Government and Paul Trowell the newly arrived General Manager for the Falkland Islands Tourist Board.

With the Falklands not considered to be a "run of the mill" holiday destination the judges were briefed to look for excellent composition, beautiful subjects and a quirk of some sort; in short, shots that really capture the spirit of the Islands.

Steve Davey said that in general he thought the standard of photography was very high, and showed the uniqueness of the Falklands very effectively. He said: "Predictably the landscape and wildlife categories were the most difficult categories to judge as the standard was particularly high."

"All of the amateur categories though were surprisingly good, and showed a good level of photographic skill as well as an affinity with the Islands. It was good to see some great pictures in the youth category as well, and some of the entrants showed a clear and fresh vision that you would expect from younger photographers."

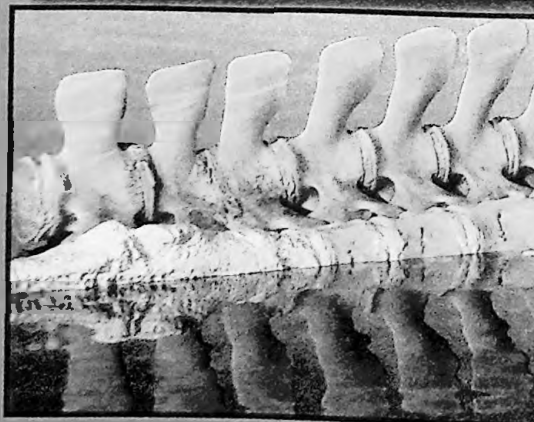

With the final decisions made Paul Trowell said it had been extremely difficult to select the best from what was an excellent selection of photographs and that it had given him a fantastic insight into what was on offer in the Falklands not only as a destination, but also as a lifestyle.

Former CBBFI Gordon Moulds' 'Surfing Penguin' winner of the wildlife category and overall winner of the Falklands Exposed photography competition

Active category winner: "Playing in a Puddle" Hattie Kilmartin's image of her son Toby paddling about at Bluff Cove Lagoon

"Whalebone reflection" by Karen Armstrong-Ford, Heritage section winner

Travel Photographer Steve Davey

THE overall winning shot of the 'surfing' penguin was a clear winner. The secret to wildlife shots is the degree of difficulty, and this shot catches the moment perfectly.

It's very sharp, very well lit, with a crisp and warm light. A well executed shot that is a clear winner.

This illustrates one of the main things about travel photography: using the light. Obviously if you are lucky you will get good light, but as can be seen from the work of these photographers, this often involves getting up early for sunrise and shooting late for the sunset.

It also involves some degree of luck, but of course you make your own luck by working hard and heading out to take pictures whenever possible!

Winner Landscape category. A sudden "Sunset at Saunders" sent Allan Waton dashing for his camera, but the result was well worth the effort

"Shearing" Adele Pole-Evans took this shot of her daughter Rosalyn having a smoko break to win the "Island Life" section

Wildlife finalist Anton Wolfaardt's "Striated caracara"

"The Lady Liz" by Richard Davis - Landscape category finalist

Professional portfolio winner Roland Gockel

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross Sound ferry main operational area
146.625, Stanley to Mount Alice

147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band
156.800...Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report

Jan Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands
 The Australian wool market is relatively steady at first glance but the dollar is falling (to the $US) and so wool is getting slightly cheaper and this is even greater when converted to pounds.
 Still exchange rates are dominating over prices, and an interesting election result in the UK may keep the pound weak for a while which will be good for wool exporters in the Falklands.
 Fine wool is still holding and it is oddments and stronger wools that are starting to lower the FMI slightly by only 1 Australian cent, but exchange rate changes mean this is a more significant drop of 10p to 524p.

Running for cancer research

Helen and Alan Huckle

PRETTY in pink, the 274 men, women, children and dogs who walked and ran the 5km route on Sunday morning were blessed with sunshine. From money collected by participants and t-shirt sales, Run Together Falklands 2010 has so far raised £3123.36, all which will be donated to Cancer Research UK.

Organiser Barbara Bates said she would like to thank everyone who turned up and ran, walked and supported in any way on the day, and made a special mention to all of those who travelled down from MPA. Including the first man back Graham Hunt and the first lady Lorna Lambert.

Sponsorship money for the run is still to be collected; contact Barbara on 21034 in the evenings, or drop it off at the MPA gymnasium. The prize for the most money raised is two nights for two people at Cobbs Cottage on Bleaker Island, donated by Mr and Mrs Rendell, with return flights donated by FIGAS.

Alongside the run were other fundraising events. From the sale of Ovarian Cancer badges and a pub crawl held last Friday, organiser Cara Jordan and helpers raised £570, to be split between the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust (CSAT) and Ovarian Cancer Action UK.

A cake sale in the Chandlery, held on Saturday and organised by Sharon Gilbert raised £506.24 to be donated to CSAT. The organisers would like to thank everyone who baked and bought items from the stall.

Looking back as MPA turns twenty-five

WEDNESDAY saw the 25th anniversary of the official opening of the Mount Pleasant Airport by HRH Prince Andrew.

This ceremony, attended by the then Secretary of State for Defence, Michael Heseltine, and the author of the blueprints for the economic development of the Falkland Islands, Lord Shackleton, marked not only the culmination of an incredible feat of civil engineering, but the start of a new phase in the evolution of the Falkland Islands.

The Laing-Mowlem-Amey Roadstone Construction consortium (LMA) built the airfield within eighteen months of starting on a bare field site at the ends of the earth, with nothing available to them locally other than water and rock. The 8,500ft runway was completed on time, just three years after the end of fighting in the Falklands and at a cost of £215,000,000.

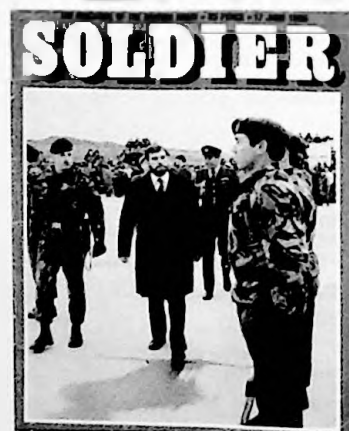

As there was no road between Stanley and the site chosen for the new airport, all materials had to be shipped to Mare Harbour, where the first job for LMA was to attach one of two specially acquired ships, the 13,000 ton Merchant Providence, to the shore to serve as a jetty head and accommodation block. Further materials and the work force, which at one time numbered 2000, were ferried from South Africa in the 8,000 ton, England, chartered from Cunard.

By the time the first runway was completed in 1985 it was estimated that 9,000 passengers had been carried and the England had travelled more than 150,000 miles. During the same period four other chartered cargo vessels had moved 513,000 tonnes of materials and there was a fleet of single-decker buses and over 850 major items of construction plant on site, worth some £25,000,000. This plant enabled the quarrying of 1,500,000 tonnes of stone from quarries which can still be seen today.

One of the strange features of this massive civil engineering project was how little it impinged on the life of the Falklands population, particularly those who lived in Stanley, who for the most part were blissfully unaware of the scale of the undertaking or the number of people involved. With no road between Stanley and Mount Pleasant and hazards in between like the feared Bluff Cove blue clay, the overland trip was not for the inexperienced or faint-hearted. A Mount Pleasant workers' football team found this out when their trip to town to be beaten 11-0 by an army unit took five hours.

Ian finishes top of the league

THE Caribbean Alliance Insurance golf competition held on Sunday May 9 concluded the 2009/2010 golf season in the Falkland Islands.

The scores in the Stableford competition were much better than the previous week's medal, mainly because the weather was sunny and there was little in the way of wind, so the 12 golfers were able to enjoy their golf.

The overnight frost kept the ground hard in the early morning and the balls gained some extra distance for a while.

The winner with a score of 41 points was Nick Stevens. He managed a birdie on his way round and his reward for such a good round, as well as the trophy, was a two stroke cut in his handicap to 16.

Second place went to the ever present Ian Stewart with 37 points and third was Adie Lowe with 36 points. The minor prizes were shared amongst four players. Best front nine Bob Gilbert, best back nine Wayne Thompson, longest drive on the 18th was Ian Stewart, nearest the pin on the 12th was Adie Lowe and nearest the pin on the 17th was Wayne Thompson.

The points from the Caribbean Alliance Insurance competition counted towards the league competition. With two players in contention to take the league depending on their scores on the day, it finished with Ian Stewart on top with 85 points, just ahead of Kevin Clapp on 82 and then Adrian Joshua third with 76 points.

With the 2010/2011 league starting the previous weekend it looks like Ian is out to retain his title having won the first monthly medal of the season.

The next scheduled competition is the June medal to be held on June 6, followed by the AGM at the golf club to which all members are welcome to attend. There is a sheet posted on the clubhouse notice board for nominations for positions on the committee.

Cricket team on tour

THE Falkland Islands cricket team is to make two overseas tours this year.

A one-week cricket tour to Mexico to play in the ICC American Division 4 Tournament, is on again after some early doubts. Captain Elliott Taylforth tells Penguin News. The team leaves the Falklands on June 12 and will be back one week later after playing Mexico, Cuba and Costa Rica in Mexico City.

Starting on July 19 the team will play in a Festival of the Three Falklands cricket week hosted by the cricket club of Falkland in Fife, Scotland and including the village team from Falkland, Berkshire, which visited the Islands last year.

Illegal shipping decree challenged by FCO

AN early and welcome sign of the new British Government's attitude towards the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands came yesterday with the delivery to the Argentine Chargé d'Affaires in London of a note from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office challenging the legality of recent attempts by Cristina Kirchner's government to hamper the free flow of shipping between the Islands and the continent.

The note to the Chargé d'Affaires (there being no Argentine Ambassador in post in London) challenges the legality of the Argentine President's Decree 256/2010 which requires all shipping passing to and from Argentina, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands to seek the permission of the Argentine Government.

The note points out that the imposition of such a restriction constitutes a contravention of international law, including the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) and points out that any attempt to restrict the passage of shipping through the Straits of Magellan is in direct contravention of its 1984 Treaty with Chile.

Article 10 of the Treaty states: "The Argentine Republic undertakes to maintain, at any time and in whatever circumstances, the right of ships of all flags to navigate expeditiously and without obstacles through its jurisdictional waters to and from the Straits of Magellan."

While the principal aim of these restrictions is to impede the oil exploration campaign being carried out in Falklands waters, if applied rigorously to all shipping it could have a serious effect on the Islands economy, increasing the isolation we already suffer from the limits imposed upon air access by Argentina and making difficult the routine visits of Falklands vessels to both Punta Arenas and Montevideo for dry docking and other purposes.

How strictly, if at all, the new regulations will be imposed by the Argentine authorities is not yet known, but there will clearly be an understandable reluctance to test the situation on the part of ship owners and charterers until the situation is clarified. In the meantime one vessel due into Stanley from

Punta Arenas has been delayed by three days, having chosen to leave the Magellan Straits by the western end and take the long route around Cape Horn for what are described as "operational reasons."

Asked whether any specific event had triggered the sending of the note to the Argentine Government at this time, Government House First Secretary Paul Martinez said that it was something that had been "in the pipeline" for some time, but had been delayed due to the change of government in Britain. Mr Martinez also said that he believed a similar note would shortly be on its way to the United Nations Secretary General.

Former fishing company owner and now Member of the Falklands Legislative Assembly, Dick Sawle said that he and his colleagues in the Assembly were, "delighted by the strong and robust stance that the new British Government had taken" and added that any attempt to interfere with international shipping's "right of innocent passage" had to be opposed.

Whether or not the Argentine Government would change their stance as a result of the note, Councillor Sawle said that they could not dispute the legal situation, as described in it. The councillor also pointed out that as recently as this year at the Latin American and Caribbean Summit in Cancun, Mrs Kirchner had stated that it was not her government's intention to blockade the Islands.

Ironically, the Argentine President used the platform of the recent European Union-Latin American summit in Madrid to rebuke the UK for failing to respect international law, after her request for British-Argentine dialogue to be opened with regard to the Falkland Islands was rejected.

At the final news conference of the EU summit Kirchner commented: "Refusing dialogue does not point to someone that wants to be part of a society governed by international law."

"It seems to me that the UK, which is a very important country in the concert of the UN and is very important in the EU, should, in my view, set an example and should itself also submit to UN resolutions, as we ask for others to do."

John Fowler

NOTE VERBAL

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland firmly rejects the issuing and promulgation of Presidential Decree 256/2010 and Disposition 14/2010, pertaining to authorisation requirements placed on shipping to and from Argentina, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland considers that Presidential Decree 256/2010 and Disposition 14/2010 are not compliant with international law, including the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland would like to take this opportunity to remind the Government of the Republic of Argentina of its obligations under international law, and that the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea provides for ships of all States to enjoy the right of innocent passage through territorial seas, and freedom of navigation in the waters beyond the territorial sea. Furthermore, with respect to the Straits of Magellan, the rights of international shipping to navigate these waters expeditiously and without obstacle is affirmed in the 1984 Treaty of Peace and Friendship between Chile and Argentina with respect to the Straits of Magellan. Article 10 of the Treaty of Magellan further provides "The Argentine Republic undertakes to maintain, at any time and in whatever circumstances, the right of ships of all flags to navigate expeditiously and without obstacles through its jurisdictional waters to and from the Strait of Magellan".

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland has no doubt about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands, and South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, its sovereignty over the adjacent territorial sea of these Islands, and its sovereign rights over the adjacent maritime areas.

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland also has no doubt that the surrounding maritime areas of the Falkland Islands, and South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands are not Argentine jurisdictional waters.

Penguin News

DESPITE apparently being invisible to the government of Argentina and some sections of the British media, the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly continues to show the British Parliament the way forward. Not only did we pioneer the "clean sweep" approach to general elections last October, but a government made up of members with fundamentally differing views, such as Westminster is now fretting about, is nothing new to us.

Personally I would have thought a coalition between the Labour and Liberal parties a more natural kind of beast than is likely to emerge from the mating of the Liberals with the Conservatives. However, British politicians could take a lesson and be warmed by the enthusiasm expressed in these pages by veteran Falklands councillor Bill Luxton for his present colleagues and their ability to come to a consensus view, without abandoning their own principles or falling out over their differences.

Judging by this issue of Penguin News alone, in which three members have taken the time to pick up their pens or light up their laptops, this Legislative Assembly does seem to be largely living up to its pre-election promise to be more committed to communication with its electorate and the wider world than some of the Legislative Councils which preceded it. And they are using plain language and not the kind of alienating jargon so commonly heard from some of their predecessors.

The over-use of any kind of jargon serves to boost the feeling of belonging to an elite among those to whom it is meaningful, but to exclude those to whom it is meaningless. This is as true for the kind of "management-speak" that some former councillors used to use as it is for gangster rap. Apart from being intensely irritating, the unnecessary use of strange acronyms and weird and wonderful ways of saying the commonplace, uttered by some former councillors, only served to confirm the feelings of many that their representatives were no longer in touch with them and, indeed, may have been living on some other planet. While this was maybe a symptom rather than the whole disease, it may partially explain why no one was left standing from the old Council, once the smoke of electoral battle had cleared.

If the new Assembly has been successful in bridging the perceived gap between them and their electorate, and in the process boosted the morale of both parties, I would suggest that their next big challenge - before even the oily ones discussed last week - should be to restore the morale of large portions of the civil service.

The response to my recent rather mild 'dig' at the jargon and box-ticking rampant in the civil service seems to indicate that there are some very, very, unhappy people out there.

FIG Environmental Studies Budget 2010-2011

The Falkland Islands Government provides funding to help people in the Falkland Islands to conduct activities which benefit and enhance the environment. Anyone can apply for assistance from the Environmental Studies Budget, including owners and managers of land, non-government organisations and international scientists that conduct research and conservation activities in the Falkland Islands.

Projects eligible for ESB funding must assist in the management or enhancement of the biodiversity of the Falkland Islands. Priority will be given to initiatives addressing the key three themes of the 'Falkland Islands Biodiversity Strategy', which are: environmental research, on-ground action and education.

The ESB has a formal application and decision making process with the Environmental Committee responsible for the allocation of funds. This year all the available funds will be allocated in one round in July 2010.

The deadline for applications is Monday 21st June 2010. The application form can be obtained from the Environmental Planning Department. Applicants are encouraged to discuss proposed projects with the EPD Environmental Officer prior to submission and he can also help draft your application. Where possible, some level of co-funding or in-kind costs (e.g. labour, equipment) is desirable.

Please contact the Environmental Planning Department to obtain an information pack

FICS welcomes Chilean students

LAST Saturday saw the arrival in the Falklands of eight students from Punta Arenas, who are to spend three weeks as pupils at the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) in Stanley.

The eight, who are accompanied by teacher, Elena Barria Ampuero, come from eight different schools in the Punta Arenas public school system and so had not met each other until they boarded the plane.

Their visit to the Falkland Islands is sponsored by various bodies, including LAN and the municipality of Punta Arenas.

Seeing the group off at Punta Arenas airport, the Mayor urged them to be good ambassadors for the city and for their country, which so far they appear to be.

FICS headmaster, Alistair Baldwin speaking on Tuesday said that although it was early days, the visit seemed to be going well. All eight students had faced the ordeal of delivering a short speech in English and Spanish at the school's Monday assembly.

The students had been given the twin aims of learning about the geography and culture of the Falkland Islands and improving their English, but Mr Baldwin said that he had given them a third which was to help FICS students to improve their spoken Spanish.

At the end of the visit, the Chilean students would address the school again, showing, he hoped, an improvement in their English fluency. He also hoped that an equivalent number of FICS students would be able to give a brief speech in Spanish, showing how much they had gained from this exchange.

All of the students, with one exception, are lodged with families in Stanley and on Wednesday they and their hosts were entertained to tea at Government House.

Rockhopper to announce soon

FOLLOWING on from their announcement of a significant oil discovery at their well 14/10-2 on their Sea Lion prospect, Rockhopper Exploration reported on May 19 that it had been successfully suspended for future testing.

A release from the company stated that physical samples taken from the well were currently being transported to the United Kingdom by freight plane, and were due to arrive shortly.

A further update from the company giving initial estimates of the potential size of the discovery is expected within the next 8-13 days.

Rockhopper's Executive Chairman, Pierre Jungels, said: "The outcome is great news in itself, but it also demonstrates that small operators, with the correct planning by the Company, combined with the right support from outside experts and quality contractors, can work to the highest industry standards in terms of health, safety and respect for the environment, whilst achieving excellent operational results."

We can never be complacent in this regard and will seek to maintain this standard with the drilling of our Ernest prospect in the coming months."

Training courses complete

PC Kim Bone and PC Paul McDade were commended for their achievements at a reception held at Government House on May 10. Both officers had recently completed training courses overseas.

Director of Community Safety and Chief Police Officer Gary Finchett said: "PC Kim Bone and PC Paul McDade have successfully completed two very challenging nationally accredited training courses in the UK and have passed with flying colours. I am proud of their determination to succeed and the specialist skills and abilities they have obtained will be used to good effect to make people who live, work and visit the Falklands Islands even safer."

PC Kim Bone attended the National Hostage and Crisis Negotiators Course in London for two weeks in March. At 18 hours per day, only provided at two locations worldwide and with only four spaces for international students, the course was intensive and students were put under extreme pressure to perform consistently.

PC Bone's qualification will enable him to work worldwide as a hostage and crisis negotiator. His services will potentially be offered to other South Atlantic Islands. He said the course was hard with people dropping out within the first week. "The final exercise was 48 hours" he said. "People got dropped that day; it was really shocking."

PC McDade attended an Initial Crime Scene Investigator course held between Jan 4 and March 10 at the National Police Improvement Agency at Harperley Hall in County Durham. The aim of the course was to teach basic skills required of a Crime Scene Investigator, and included photography, procedures surrounding forensic trace evidence, and the appropriate use of fingerprint powders and techniques.

Pleading guilty

RICO Jaye Anthony pleaded guilty to the charge of sexual activity with a child in court on Monday. The offence took place between February 1 and April 30 2010. Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said he would need more information before sentencing, and asked for a pre-sentence report to be prepared by the social services.

Mr Anthony, who lives in the Mount Pleasant complex was granted a conditional bail, to appear before Mr Trevaskis and assessors on Wednesday June 23.

ROBIN Swanson of the Falkland Islands Demining Programme Office said there is only one mine left to find. "We should get it by the end of the week, we hope" he said. "As from last Thursday we've only found three, it's been a slow week." They are planning a public confidence demonstration to be held next Friday at Surf Bay at 12.15pm, "obviously depending on finding the mine, but we will have found it by then I'm sure" he said.

May Ball tonight

THE May Ball will be held this evening from 8.30pm until 1am in the Town Hall. Suits and ties is to be worn; it costs £5 on the door, and the final judging will commence at 11.30pm, with the May Queen to be announced at midnight.

The second night, held tomorrow in the Town Hall will cost £3 on the door; only over 15-year-olds permitted, and a smart, but casual dress code. There will be no admission after 11.30pm. A bar will be provided in the Refreshment room.

Mr Browne

IN the new UK Government, Mr Henry Bellingham MP has been given responsibility for the Overseas Territories, but not the Falklands. The minister responsible for the Falklands and Latin America is Mr Browne MP.

Head of school

FOLLOWING a recently held election involving all the students of the Falkland Islands Community School, Arianne Goss was appointed as Head of School and Rebecca Lowe as Deputy Head.

Annual parade

THE annual Royal Navy Parade of the Falklands Islands' Sea and Marine Cadets will be held on Sunday at 6pm at the Sea Cadet Unit, just off the Stanley bypass near Stanley Services. All are welcome.

Hello to the new and thanks to the old

RECENT dramatic changes in the composition of the British Government have brought about a flurry of letter writing from the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly.

Letters of congratulation have been sent to British Prime Minister David Cameron, Foreign Secretary William Hague and Defence Secretary Liam Fox on their appointments and a letter of appreciation has been sent to the outgoing Prime Minister, Gordon Brown.

The letters to the incoming ministers were signed on behalf of the Legislative Assembly by Legislative Council Member Emma Edwards, as she travelled through London on her way to New Caledonia to attend a seminar on decolonisation organised by the United Nations 'Special Committee of 24'.

The new cabinet ministers were told that the people of the Falkland Islands had greatly appreciated the support that they had received from the Conservative Party over the years and appreciated their robust stance on our sovereignty and our right to self-determination.

The letter to the cabinet ministers went on to express the delight of the Falkland Islands Government that Mr Hague and Mr Fox had already visited the Falklands, and anticipated working with them and their colleagues to the benefit of the British Government and the Falklands.

Miss Edwards has also sent a letter of appreciation on behalf of the Legislative Assembly to Gordon Brown, to thank him for the robust stance that he and his government took on the rights of Falkland Islanders to self-determination, his refusal to entertain any discussion of sovereignty, and the strong messages that he gave in relation to oil exploration around the Falklands. Members sent Mr Brown and his family their very best wishes for the future.

The Falkland Islands Government has also sent a letter of congratulations to the new Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth, Jeremy Browne MP, who has responsibility for South America and the Falkland Islands. The letter was signed by Legislative Assembly spokesperson Bill Luxton. It said that councillors looked forward to working with Mr Browne for the mutual benefit of the British Government and the Falkland Islands, and hoped that his schedule would allow him to visit soon.

The letter also thanked Mr Browne for his strong statement of support following to President Kirchner's call for Sovereignty negotiations at the opening session of the European-Latin American summit in Madrid yesterday.

In his statement, Mr Browne said: "We have no doubt about our Sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. The principle of self-determination is set out in the UN charter applies. There cannot be negotiation on sovereignty unless and until the Falkland Islanders so wish. The Lisbon Treaty clearly reaffirms the European Union position that the Falkland Islands is an overseas territory of the United Kingdom."

Mr Luxton said that Legislative Assembly members are very pleased at Mr Browne's appointment, as he has demonstrated an interest in Falklands affairs for some time.

Mr Browne had met with Sukey Cameron, for a briefing on issues of concern to Islanders.

Legislative Assembly Diary

An occasional glimpse into the work of a member of Legislative Assembly provided by Jan Cheek

DESPITE similarities between the last diary and the editorial in the same PN, brought to my attention by readers, I can give an absolute assurance that there was no conferring!

Regarding the assertion in the editorial that this Assembly has had too long a honeymoon, could it be that we are getting something right? All those elected promised to heed the concerns of the electorate and I believe that we are listening. That said I did ignore one e-mail a few months ago, directed at all assembly members, that verged on abusive and threatening and did not therefore deserve a response.

How the electorate will react to the budget when finalised I cannot guess; however, I believe that concern about the economy and dwindling reserves was the biggest single issue in November.

My aim is to act responsibly and not undermine the resilience and independent self reliance of which Falkland Islanders are rightly proud. To factor in theoretical oil income at this stage would be irresponsible.

Returning to possible oil, the recent accident off Mexico has reminded everyone, industry and others, that it is impossible to remove every risk. The legislation and regulation of the exploration phase here in the Islands aims to mitigate risks as far as possible and the Mineral Resources Committee constantly reviews requirements in the light of the best advice available.

Our local capability was tested and found wanting in Berkeley Sound fairly recently, so it is important that the oil operators have their own contingency plans and insurance. Our environment is our most valuable asset, let's keep it that way.

I was interviewed by the Cinema 7 group who were in the Islands last week filming the story of an Argentine veteran who was here aged just 18 in '82. I mentioned in answer to one of their questions that at least one branch of one of the families who arrived at Port Louis in 1842 can now trace nine generations in the Falklands. This elicited great interest from the Argentine film crew, some being only third generation immigrants in their country.

Biking the Americas

"SOME people say if you travel in a car it's like watching a movie, but if you travel on a motorcycle you're in the movie," Julieta Cerri told the Penguin News. This goes some way to explain the amazing distance she and her husband Julian have travelled over the past two years.

The couple arrived in the Falklands on Saturday and leave to return to Punta Arenas tomorrow.

Julian has travelled a total distance of 44,000 miles on his Suzuki V-Strom 1000, from Miami to Alaska, and back down through America, including 38 states and four in Canada. Julieta has joined Julian in his journeys through central America and South America, including Columbia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina.

Speaking of the Falklands both commented: "We are so happy, from the first moment we arrived here in the Islands; we felt like we're at home" Julieta said. "The military people helped us, and all the people helped us a lot, they're all so friendly" Julian added.

Originally due to arrive in the Islands a week earlier, the couple were not allowed to travel with their motorcycle as luggage. Determined to make the trip they took off the two wells, the gas tank, the seat, battery, mirrors, windshield and side bags, anything that was easily removable, and finally boarded the plane with the bike as one piece of luggage, and everything else as the other.

Although Julieta was born in California they both grew up in Argentina, moving to Miami in Florida some years ago, where they met, discovered a mutual interest in travelling and embarked upon their trip.

After reading of the regulations imposed by President Kirchner in a newspaper, Julian confessed they were worried they wouldn't be able to visit the Islands. "We came to the Islands to see the people, like we have done in all the other countries" Julieta said. "Obviously we grew up in Argentina so we know what happened in the past, but we are people, we are not Argentinians that came here thinking that this is our territory" Julian added "We didn't come to claim, we came to learn."

"One of the most important things on the trip is making friends" he said. Julieta added: "Most of the people we stayed with, the day we left I started crying, because you don't know when you're going to see the place or the people again. It's really special when you have these moments with people."

From Punta Arenas the couple plan to travel to Argentina, before riding across to Uruguay and up the East Coast of Brazil, taking an estimated further two years. They are planning to replace the clutch of their Suzuki when they get to Buenos Aires, but aren't anticipating any other mechanical problems.

Julian and Julieta invite everyone to visit their webpage, www.juliancerri.com, or to add them on Facebook. Julian said: "People dream to travel like us, but they are scared. They share their dreams with us. The future is now. Do it now, because you don't know what might happen to you in a couple of years. If we can do it, everyone can do it."

Breathless with Challenge Day

THE Stanley Leisure Centre hope to see at least 25 per cent participation in this year's Challenge Day. Held on May 26, the day involves members of the community "getting breathless," with any activity they choose.

Exercise Referral practitioner Daniel Biggs, said: "It would be really great if as many people as possible came along. Even if you don't use the gym regularly, it's a good chance to have a go at some of the activities we have on offer."

"Exercise is important for everyone, and we hope this year's Challenge Day, will encourage more members of the community to get involved with sport and exercise, as little as walking to work, it all counts for something."

At the Stanley Leisure Centre the following activities will be on offer: free swimming all day from 7am until 9pm, free courts all day and free access to the fitness suite, however these depend upon block bookings. There is a free aquarun session between 5 and 6pm, Carol Peck will be holding a free core circuit exercise class from 5.30 until 6pm and Sarah Clement free aquarobics from 6-7pm. For sports, a table tennis tournament will be held in the school street and a 5-a-side football game in the gym from 12 noon until 1pm. There are eight team slots available. Contact Daniel Biggs on 27291 with your team names. For parents and toddlers there is a free session planned in the gym from 1 until 2pm and a dog walking group will be on Surf Bay from 2 until 3pm.

A registration form will be in place at the Stanley Leisure Centre, phone 27291, or alternatively you can email your registration, or any queries to dbiggs.leisure@sec.gov.fk.

"Challenge Day" traditionally involves similar sized cities in the Americas challenging each other to get more people active on a particular date.

Self defence disproved by Crown

MR Stephen Stuart Whitley (31) of Hillside camp was found guilty of common assault in court on Monday. He was fined £200 and ordered to pay prosecution costs of £200. No compensation was ordered to be paid to the victim.

The incident occurred on March 19 in Deanos Bar. The victim Simon Guevara was dancing with Mr Kevin McLaren's wife. Mr McLaren took exception to Mr Guevara's conduct, and pushed him across the dance floor, which resulted in the defendant (Mr Whitley) being knocked to the ground. After standing up the defendant then hit the victim.

In his summing up Mr Trevaskis said: "I am sure on the facts that Mr Whitley deliberately stuck Mr Guevara because he admits he did, I am sure that when he did he did not honestly believe that he needed to defend himself."

"Self-defence has been disproved by the Crown. The defendant is therefore guilty."

Fallout in Falklands

I'M off politics again. There was that moment of exhilaration when I realised the election might be more than the traditional two horse race: "Coming up the half way stage, now, and it's neck and neck. Brown and Cameron, Cameron and Brown; but who's this coming up on the near side? It's Clegg – the nag they said could never do it, but by golly he's giving them a run for their money..."

One of Patrick Watts's Christmas commentaries would not have been out of place. It was good to see the result, but now the fake love-in that is the Cameron-Clegg coalition is just too saccharine sweet.

Clegg says that it is the shape of new British politics. And Cameron beams his agreement but with fingers firmly crossed behind his back. In fact neither main party had a real appetite for coalition. We, the great public, forced them into it because we had decided to punish them by not voting as expected.

I am also intensely irritated by the presence at the top table of privileged public schoolboys. Both Cameron and his Chancellor are products of that most famous of "public" schools, Eton. If the party operated on a level playing field, such a coincidence would be so unlikely as to be impossible. It just confirms that the old establishment dominated class systems still rules.

But one cannot criticise them for getting to work quickly. New foreign Secretary William Hague has met Hillary Clinton in Washington, and there will be an emergency budget announcement next week; one which could save £8 billion.

I don't think there will be any impact on the Falklands. A decision not to replace HMS Endurance (always a possibility) would save only a few millions.

We must wait until the promised root-and-branch defence review kicks off next month before we see whether the cost of Falklands defence generally may be slashed. If that were to occur, it would have to be accompanied by a concession to the old foe – talks. But William Hague is pretty right-wing, a closet Thatcherite, and I believe he made clear his support for islanders many months ago. I don't think he would be in favour of concessions.

Breathe easy for a little while, I think. But these are strange times.

Where are the voices of dissent?

I ENJOYED the editorial in the last issue of PN which reflected on the discovery of oil. John wondered whether councillors and officials may now be wondering whether, along with possible wealth, they have created a monster.

No one has articulated it in such a way, but I think of Robert Oppenheimer, who created the atomic bomb, and Dr Frankenstein who created, quite literally, a monster. Both were eloquently in awe of what they had achieved, but were equally terrified of it.

It was a very unfortunate time to find oil. At about the same time, a BP- off-shore oil rig pumping crude up from the bottom of Gulf of Mexico exploded with the loss of 11 lives, precipitating an apparently unstoppable belching of oil into the sea.

I am no expert, but it seems to me that the method of oil extraction being used off the southern USA is very similar to that which is proposed for the Falklands. It does not take a massive leap of the imagination to picture the same thing happening off the Falklands some time in the future.

Writing from London, I can only be an observer. But I have been struck by how little discussion there seems to be about the pros and cons of the industry, particular by those in the conservation movement, for whom preservation of the unique South Atlantic environment is critical. They do not appear to be saying much for or against oil.

We sometimes read in Penguin News about beach clean-ups and educating children about the need to look after our birds, beaches and grasslands. But little is heard about the big issues.

In the last issue of PN there was a letter from someone who cared enough about the environment to complain about condoms discarded around Stanley's coastal beauty spots. Not nice, I agree, but not a major threat. I do wonder why we see so few conservationists raising their heads above the parapet to question the wisdom of developing an oil industry. Any answers?

Four by fear

HERE in central London, more and more wealthy drivers are getting around in Mercedes G-Wagons, the same vehicles with which the Argentines patrolled our streets all those years ago. They are ugly, angular vehicles, and I hate them.

This got me thinking about 4x4s that I do like. I feel positively warm about Series 1 and 2 Land Rovers. My first "car" was a 1957 Rover. I bought it off Aub Summers for, I think, £350. A lick of gloss green and a new canvas top, and the Rover was my steed for fishing trips, burning up the tarmac at 40mph, and just hanging around trying to look cool.

I felt so nostalgic about my old wagon that I bought a Land Rover magazine to see how much it might cost me to re-live the Series 1 dream. About £8,000; that's what it would cost! Apparently Series 1s are in big demand.

The last time I saw my poor old Rover, she was upside down in a minefield (the Argentines had nicked her). But these old vehicles were out of fashion by then, and I did not mourn her for long. I wanted a newer, bigger and better vehicle.

I wonder if there are still any roadworthy ancient Land Rovers tucked away in garages and shearing sheds around the Falklands? If so, it might be time to lift their bonnets, wire-brush the spark plugs, swing their starting handles, engage low range and follow the signs to E-Bay. But give me a call first.

CBF explains

IN the run up to Landing Day there seems to have been an amount of speculation, not all informed, on changes that were being considered by me and my staff, in consultation with members of the FIG and community. I thought, therefore, that I should write to you in order to explain to your readers why I have put in place some changes to the way that we have, until recently, done commemoration and remembrance. My reasons are threefold:

The first is that for us in the military, Remembrance Sunday and Armistice Day are the days when we remember our fallen from all wars. All of us here at MPC have friends and colleagues who have been killed or wounded in Iraq or Afghanistan and I feel that it is right that we should conduct our military wreath laying and acts of remembrance on the same day as the rest of the Armed Forces.

The second is that I feel that commemoration of the battles of 1982 are properly community led events, to allow the communities to celebrate their liberation, commemorate the fallen and express their gratitude to the veterans of the Task Force. It is therefore my intention that the military adopts a lower profile - attending as invited guests, rather than organising and leading the events.

The third is that the vast majority of my personnel serving here at BFSAI were not even born in 1982. I need to educate them in the war so that they understand their own service and commitment to these islands. Events such as the Landing Day at San Carlos are, therefore, wonderful opportunities for the veterans - both service and civilian - to tell their stories and inform the next generation.

The effect of these changes is that the majority of the 1982 commemorations will be attended by the appropriate unit and they will liaise with the community in order to fit in with the style and tone of the community led commemoration. Our attendance at Liberation Day will be as it always has been.

Not fooled

I REFER to the letter in PN (May 14) from Juan Bautista of "Rugby sin Fronteras" in which he insinuates that the December visit to the Falklands by an Argentine rugby team: 'Was not used in any political way.' He surely must not have picked up a copy of the Clarin newspaper of Buenos Aires of January 10, which had a massive photo on the front page, and a double page spread (pages 68 and 69) in the sport section.

Needless to say all the merits of having an Argentine rugby team visit the Falklands, were extolled. The title of the article: "El rugby une" (Rugby unifies) says it all. Suggestions by Clarin that the Argentines played the first ever rugby game seen in the Falklands are also incorrect. A thriving rugby club played for many years at Eliza Cove and the goal posts can still be seen behind the fences which were erected around the mines that the Argentines left behind in 1982. After hostilities ceased regular rugby games, between Stanley and the British Forces, were played on Stanley common, just off the by-pass road.

In the newspaper Bautista Segonds is quoted as saying: "We managed to leave the seeds of rugby and extend a promising bridge of union between both peoples." While the Argentines refuse to recognise the Islanders right to self-determination, then I consider this statement alone, to be of a political nature.

In the Clarin article much is made of the fact that 17 youngsters attended the first rugby clinic and this number later rose to 40. No mention was made of the fact that on the first day of training at four in the afternoon, the Argentines stood at the school gates and enticed many of these youngsters to the football field, with gifts of sweets, chocolates, soft drinks and t-shirts, while our police inexplicably did nothing, other than to later suggest a "compromiso" whereby the Argentines should conduct their practice sessions at a later time.

I fully commend the newly elected Councillors for promptly withdrawing the Government's support for the tour within a few days of their election, but unfortunately the damage had already been done through approval given by the previous Legislature, many of whom said they were misled by the intentions of the tour. Furthermore a senior government official, operating out of the F.I.C.S. had already given the green light to the Argentines to go ahead with tour, so little could be done to halt the visit.

It was also ironic that just a day before the team's arrival in the Falklands, the Argentine Government had incorporated the "Malvinas" into the province of Tierra del Fuego, which was gazetted in the "Boletín Oficial." Seemingly President Cristina de Kirchner had signed the decree just days before. So much for "a promising bridge of union" as quoted by Mr Bautista!

Gratitude for CSAT effort

I WOULD like to say a huge thank you to the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust.

Andy Brownlee and Louise Taylor have been the leaders in fund raising and faced some very tough challenges in their efforts to raise money. Many other people have contributed to this cause and this enabled the trust to bring a mammogram machine, an ultra sound machine and the wonderful medical team to the Islands from the Clinica Alemana in Santiago, Chile. These machines proved to be worth their weight in gold. I can only speak for myself, as it would not be correct to comment on other peoples diagnosis, but had it not been for the ultra sound machine my story could have been very different.

They operated and treated my condition in the Clinica Alemana. All went well and I am truly grateful. I would urge everyone who has an opportunity to have these tests to go ahead and have them done. IT CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.

Things go on behind the scenes which we tend to forget sometimes. An enormous amount of organisation goes into bringing people and machines to the Islands. The administration alone is a nightmare at times; it's no mean feat, so thanks to all of you for your hard work.

I must also mention the Hotel Rio Bidasoa, where a lot of Islanders stay when in Santiago for treatment. This small, family run hotel is fantastic. It's about twenty minutes walk to the hospital and the staff are extremely helpful. There's a beautiful garden to sit out in and the food was delicious.

Finally to Dr Madrid, Dr Hovarth, Lizzie Oliveras and all of the staff at Clinica Alemana. Thank you very very much for your care and kindness. It was second to none. The hospital with its spectacular views of the Andes is magnificent. Just walking into the place makes you feel better.

It takes time to steer the FIG whale

YOU asked for views about your last editorial – well here are mine, just mine, not a Government or Gilbert House view, no consultation with other MLAs – and I'll probably get my knuckles rapped severely – again, I don't mind – but it plays up hell with the arthritis.

I think you are being very unfair to MLAs with the suggestion that we have been doing nothing in the last six months. There has been a hell of a lot of activity going on but it is not easy to alter the course of the Government leviathan that quickly. Some of the effort will hopefully soon bear fruit, not least the battle to bring our IT services into the present century and some hope of a better housing situation for our younger people.

I hope there are people who feel that some small wrongs have been righted – small in the overall picture, but big for them. If you look back I think you will see that every MLA has agreed with the objective of a balanced budget and while we may not achieve it this year, I think you will see progress towards that objective.

As you rightly imply – this will probably lead to something of a cold shower on the honeymoon period, however I hope that on reflection people will agree that it would not be best to "squander" – er, sorry, "invest" our reserves as you suggest. I cannot pretend to think that everyone will be happy after Budget day but I hope afterwards you will not accuse us of shirking our responsibilities. I also bet you don't see any shuffling feet, pointing fingers or sloping shoulders – and don't waste time looking for that flight of penguins.

I do have a few years on council under my belt and I can honestly say that this lot have been the best ever to work with as a group. Of course we have different views on a lot of things but so far we have arrived at a consensus with the minority accepting the majority view with no teddies having their heads ripped off and thrown into the corner.

I do hope we are seen as being more approachable – Sharon has done a sterling job with her weekly email to anyone who wants it. Jan is contributing regularly to PN and I understand that Dick has bravely stepped into the bear pit that is called Facebook! I personally would like to see a Gilbert House web page but I am in a minority on that and can see the possible drawbacks – as has happened in others. I have enjoyed all the public meetings so far and maybe I am naive but I have not detected a great deal of hostility – so far!

I think your last paragraph was particularly unkind and unfair. I was part of the council that dealt with the huge influx of fishing licence money many years ago and, yes, we made mistakes, some horrible like Seamount which I was involved in. We learned a lot of lessons there, not least the development of an acute antenna for detecting carpet baggers.

IF – and I repeat IF, there is a huge flow of oil out and revenue in, I can assure you that I have given a great deal of thought as to how it should be managed and am well aware of the challenges there could be. I would welcome those challenges and the chance to show all of the Americas, and the rest of the world, what a decent honest democratic government could do.

No doubt some who want to gain advantage will find the lack of corruption in the Falklands frustrating. The media image of wealthy Benny sheiks sitting back, while imported labour does all the work as happens in the Middle East, is a travesty and I would hate to see that happen.

IF the oil starts to flow, it would be as if we had won the lottery and who hasn't fantasised about what they would do with a few million quid. Some winners go off the rails and the result is tragic, but others handle it wisely and change their lifestyle for the better for ever. I have previously written about countries that have handled oil wealth sensibly so there are good examples to follow.

I would like to think that IF it happens, having got to know them all better over the last six months, this bunch of MLAs would make a pretty good fist at managing the situation with all its challenges. I would be most surprised to see the streets raucous with drunken champagne swilling celebrating councillors.

Anyway, I don't like champagne – mine's a rum please.

Cautious and pragmatic approach

I READ your editorial (PN May 14) with interest and would like to make a few comments if I may take advantage of your pages.

Honeymoon period for the elected eight? It doesn't feel like it, but there again I have only had one honeymoon in my life before. That experience was great – a relaxing time at KC, with no e-mails, phone (fixed or mobile) and generally very pleasant indeed. One of my first impressions in this job has been that there is a huge amount to do if you wish to do it, and then comes the perhaps obvious detail that all of the work is so varied and different, which makes it all the more interesting. Not a honeymoon, but a steep learning curve. This is not a complaint – simply an observation. This job is busy, full and perhaps the most interesting I have ever done.

On the oil question – it would be a sad reflection on us all if we rolled drunk down the streets at this early stage.

Delighted? Of course, as is everyone. Slightly sad that I never bought any shares of course, but no doubt those who bought at the right time or sold at the right time have wider grins than I!

More seriously, there is little doubt that this is excellent news for the Falklands. However, whilst there will be interim income from the exploratory phases, it would be too soon to begin writing large cheques and "squandering" reserves – I would like to think that we were voted in because people considered we had the right type of approach, and I would hope therefore that everyone would appreciate our being slightly cautious and pragmatic.

The problems posed by oil exploitation (rather than exploration) have all been considered carefully – both in the past and now. I would hope that exploitation will not pose any great surprises. After all, we are not the first country to find ourselves in this situation and FIG has always taken heed of the good advice it has received.

It is far too early to throw caution to the winds when approaching the budget. However, whether there should be cuts in services or increases in revenue, I think it would be a person out of touch with reality who did not expect to have to tighten the belt in some measure.

The Falklands, as you rightly point out, has not suffered anything like as much as other countries from the economic recession. However, I believe that this year did see some hope on the horizon regarding illex stocks. The first Loligo season was by all accounts the best for many years. Of course, 2010 will always be remembered as the year we found the oil.

At the same time, the Falklands has to diversify and expand its economic base. We can't afford to be complacent and expect the oil companies or the fishing companies to fuel our cheque book without any effort on our part – those days have gone.

With this aim, the economic development strategy is now coming to an interesting point, where I would hope that soon things will begin to happen which will be to the benefit of everyone, but they will require entrepreneurial skills and "get up and go" to see it through to success.

Yes, I think we have got it right – and there is cause for optimism and there is a brighter future ahead for the Falklands, but (as always) let me know if I have got it wrong!

Don't lose touch with the people

AT the end of last week's excellent editorial, John Fowler asked for thoughts on how the present Government might respond to the discovery of oil.

In the same edition, Jan Cheek rightly states that if oil is found in commercial quantities, it will be difficult to resist the power of the multinational oil companies.

I think we all knew that if oil was to be discovered in commercial quantities in our waters it would change the Islands forever, for good or ill, and that the job of the Government would be to try and steer a course such that there are more benefits than problems.

Councillors will be faced with taking some very difficult decisions and I hope they will not forget to ask their constituents, us, how we would like to see the Islands develop.

When exploration took place in the Islands in the '90s, a majority of the then Council, led by Mike Summers, were of the firm view that we needed as much on-shore oil development as possible.

It even suggested the building of a new town on the Camber to house all the workers and their families we would need to recruit from overseas to man the industry.

Whenever this view was challenged in Public meetings, we were told that "Councillors know the wishes of the public."

A group of us were so concerned by this arrogance that we paid for an independent survey of every person on the electoral roll to ascertain their true views as to how the Islands might develop.

The overwhelming majority of those polled favoured no, or minimal, on-shore development, even if that meant making less money from oil.

I hope the present councillors will realise that they will not have all the answers to the difficult questions they will face and that they cannot know the views of the electorate, unless they take the trouble to ask.

Referenda on crucial issues relating to how the Islands might develop if oil is found in commercial quantities would not show weakness on the part of Councillors, but highlight their commitment to open and inclusive government.

The mud-caked across windcreens

Vehicles line up for some serious mayhem

A beautiful sunset on the way home

Mud flying as far as you can see

THE weather was threatening moisture as an intrepid bunch of drivers gathered at the Murrell Farm last Sunday morning for the start of another Rover Rally, organised by the Falkland Islands Motorcycle Association.

Always popular and eagerly awaited, these events always attract a large number of motorcycles, 4x4's and a quad.

The drama started before the first full rotation of a wheel as the leading vehicles slipped into the deep ruts of the first gate. Out came the ropes that were to be used constantly throughout the rest of the day.

Once clear of the gate, we tentatively set off across the soft peat flats towards Long Island Mountain, and soft those flats were!

Still within sight of Stanley there were vehicles strewn across the landscape either bogged, debogging or just bimbbling along, taking in the sights and sounds of a rapidly improving day. Motorcycles were darting around the vehicles like blue buzzers enjoying the thermals of a freshly squeezed cow pat.

By mid morning the sun was out, no wind, the sweet smell of teaberries and mud flying as far the eye could see.

Warning! If you are ever lucky enough to be on one of these events don't get bogged in the middle of a swamp, if you do, close all your windows, because sure as eggs are eggs, Daniel Ford will appear out of nowhere on his 520 KTM and re-spray your vehicle, completely, with a two inch thick layer of Falklands finest swamp paint.

With Furse Bush Pass approaching vehicles started to bunch up in anticipation of a difficult crossing; motorcycles and expert drivers crossing first, with an audience gathered sitting comfortably on a peat bank in anticipation of some serious rover mayhem!

We were not disappointed. Very soon there was a log jam with vehicles bogged on each side of the pass, a few intrepid stone masons jumped into the stream and began to reshape the pass to make it passable.

Very soon we were able to coax the vehicles across, with the odd thump of rock hitting axles and a hearty cheer from the crowd, we set off in search of Long Island Mountain.

By one o'clock it was time for lunch and with the mountain in sight, it was also time to turn back. With dusk due in a just few short hours, we did not want to be stuck on the flats in the dark, it was bad enough during the day.

We came off the flats to witness the Murrell river mirror calm and one of the most beautiful sunsets we have had this year, it was a joy to take it all in. Who was it that said the Falklands need trees to look stunning? I should think to some of our drivers the road looked even better!

Many thanks to all the land owners, Neil and Glenda and Ady and Lisa.

We raised over £400.00 towards our lads travelling to the Welsh Two Day Enduro event in June.

Imminent changes for the Brasserie

BIG changes are planned for Falklands Brasserie in their tenth anniversary year of trading.

Proprietor Alex Olmedo said: "We want to make the Brasserie more accessible and more economical for our local customer over the coming winter months and after - we want to make it a pleasant experience and brighten the dark evenings with some live entertainment."

Alex will shortly be introducing a "gastro-bar" service offering tapas style food (plus main courses) during earlier opening hours. He is also applying for a wine bar licence and will eventually be extending the lounge seating into part of the restaurant.

"We hope everyone will be delighted with our exciting new winter service. We will soon launch a host of special offers and promotion; we are also about to change our dinner menu and the service charge has been dropped."

Alex and Fortuna Ltd formed a partnership and opened the Falklands Brasserie in May 2000, coincidentally at a time when oil exploration was taking place around the islands.

"The Falklands was a busy place when we came up with the idea," said Alex: "We felt the place needed a stand-alone restaurant providing good quality food but in a relaxing environment."

Things weren't always easy though: oil exploration ended shortly after the restaurant opened, meaning Stanley became somewhat quieter. Also, unable to recruit enough staff locally Alex was forced to deal with the extra expense of imported staff.

On the upside the Falklands Brasserie had the opportunity to entertain members of the British Royal family and a host of well-known television news people.

Alex said: "But funnily enough the person who caused the biggest stir when she walked into the Brasserie was TV personality Charlie Dimmock from the Ground Force Team. Everyone, especially the soldiers, were so excited to see her that in the end we had to put them in the private dining area and shut the doors."

DNA from feathers can unlock the history of penguin movements

FINGER printing is often used to catch criminals and now it's being used to help inform conservation management of Falkland Island penguins.

Two visiting scientists are working in the Falklands throughout May to study the movements of gentoo penguins populations in the South Atlantic which will help to produce a species action plan for gentoos.

Hila Levy from Oxford University and Tom Hart from the Institute of Zoology (London Zoo) are investigating penguins' population structure and movement using their DNA. The process is very similar to forensic science, when police can obtain a DNA profile from microscopic tissue samples.

The two researchers aim to visit as many gentoo colonies as possible and use DNA fingerprinting (or in this case, featherprinting) to determine the gentoo penguin population structure around the islands.

Tom and colleagues from Sheffield University have spent the last two years adapting the technique for penguin research. They have just completed a population map of macaroni penguins around South Georgia and hope to apply the technique to penguin conservation worldwide.

Just as DNA can tell us how closely related you are to your parents, your cousins and your friends, a penguin's DNA can show which colony a penguin originally came from, and therefore how penguins mix between colonies.

Hila and Tom will be taking a direct feather sample from penguins only where they can do this without disturbing colonies, and comparing

DNA from feathers can unlock the history of penguin movements

FINGER printing is often used to catch criminals and now it's being used to help inform conservation management of Falkland Island penguins.

Two visiting scientists are working in the Falklands throughout May to study the movements of gentoo penguins populations in the South Atlantic which will help to produce a species action plan for gentoos.

Hila Levy from Oxford University and Tom Hart from the Institute of Zoology (London Zoo) are investigating penguins' population structure and movement using their DNA. The process is very similar to forensic science, when police can obtain a DNA profile from microscopic tissue samples.

The two researchers aim to visit as many gentoo colonies as possible and use DNA fingerprinting (or in this case, featherprinting) to determine the gentoo penguin population structure around the islands.

Tom and colleagues from Sheffield University have spent the last two years adapting the technique for penguin research. They have just completed a population map of macaroni penguins around South Georgia and hope to apply the technique to penguin conservation worldwide.

Just as DNA can tell us how closely related you are to your parents, your cousins and your friends, a penguin's DNA can show which colony a penguin originally came from, and therefore how penguins mix between colonies.

Hila and Tom will be taking a direct feather sample from penguins only where they can do this without disturbing colonies, and comparing this with the DNA obtained from shed feathers.

"At the moment, most genetics for conservation is done by taking bloods, which is obviously disturbing to birds," says Tom: "But shed feathers could be a replacement for this. If we can get the technique working on shed feathers, then we can produce really useful measures of population structure and movement without disturbing the birds." Collecting shed feathers would then be a way in which landowners and volunteers could contribute to monitoring penguin populations.

Throughout May, Hila and Tom will be collecting feather samples from gentoo penguins around the Falklands to help produce a map of important areas for conservation and to show to what extent penguins move between them. Hila says this work is important because we need to know which colonies contribute most to the overall population and how population structure changes with time.

So far, Tom and colleagues have sampled gentoo penguins from the bottom of the Antarctic Peninsula to South Georgia using the same techniques. They have looked at how population structure changes and might be influenced on the large scale by climate change. Both Tom and Hila hope that the techniques trialled in Antarctica will prove useful to the Falklands.

The pair would like to thank everyone who has helped so far, in particular the landowners who have allowed them access to land and provided support, and volunteers who have helped them get out to sites.

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 13th May 2010

Ian Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands

The Australian wool market is gradually easing, however exchange rate fluctuations are disrupting this quite effectively.

The market indicator is only down one to 52p.

Whilst the pound remains so low this will keep prices for Falkland Island wool relatively healthy.

Week ending Pence per kilogram clean for each micron category

On the trail of the Falklands walrus

On April 1, the Penguin News "Missing Links" article featured a photo of an amphibious plane contributed by Ian Gleadell. Readers Ron Clarke and Peter Wakefield were able to give us some information, but the Falkland Islands Association's Ted Clapp has sent us more:

I BECAME interested in the old photograph in the Penguin News not just because of the two persons identified but because the amphibian on the beach seemed to me to be a "Walrus" and I had never heard of such a plane operating from the Falklands at that time.

I was interested also as I had served on a Light Fleet Aircraft Carrier in 1947 which held a small flight of Walrus Amphibians used for anti submarine searches and sea rescue (two of which, with their crews, were lost on search and rescue operations) in addition to our normal Sea Fury Fighters and Firefly ground/ship attackers armed with rockets and light bombs.

The plane in the photo showed no markings and I embarked upon a bit of research with the help of the RNAS Museum at Culdrose and the internet.

Staff at the Museum were particularly helpful and willingly provided details and the two photos. I think they were a little surprised that they held in the archives such specific records relating to my queries. But there are gaps!

The Walrus was probably W2738 of 710 squadron Y Flight and was carried onboard HMS

Albatross (formerly HMAS Albatross) which saw service in the South Atlantic, based at Freetown, during 1939 and until May 1942. Walrus W2738 (apparently named Audrey) was detached from HMS Albatross and placed onboard RFA Broomdale (a Dale Class Tanker), which headed towards the Falklands.

Records indicate the "unit" landed at Bluff Cove on the 28th January 1942 and presumably operated from there until the following signal was recorded in the 710 Squadron records:

"March 6th. Learnt by signal that Audrey has been written off."

This ties in very well with Ron Clarke's information that she crashed at Mullet Creek after "a couple of months" and a Museum report that she "crashed 1/3/1942."

As I said - there are gaps... I haven't yet been able to trace any crew names or positively confirmed they were at "Bluff Cove."

The 710 squadron records do not, it seems, cover the Falklands Detached Force so there is a big blank there. I suspect the flight was working in support of a cruiser squadron operating in the nearby South Atlantic area, possibly looking out for Blockade Runners, but I can't confirm it.

If anyone has information or "tales of old" I would love to hear from them.

I have spoken to Frank Burton (RN) who was stationed at the Head of Bay Wireless Station from 1939 until 1944 but he cannot recall anything about an RNAS air unit being around

NOW into its fifth year Falkland Islands hockey is looking healthier than ever with over 40 members, a stark contrast to the 18 players when it was introduced in 2006 by Grant Budd. Dek hockey now enjoys five teams battling it out for supremacy, with each team roughly rostered with seven players. A hockey committee was officially formed in 2009 when the club was officially named The Falkland Islands Dek Hockey Club, and a brand new logo was introduced.

During 2009 funds were released by the Dek Hockey club, and their sponsors Cable and Wireless and Energise; to purchase and install goal lights and a scoreboard in the Stanley Leisure Centre sports hall. The season also saw the introduction of permanent referees, so teams no longer have to referee their own games, or pull someone out of the stands.

The 2010 season is now underway; and is the first to have all teams kitted out in replica NHL shirts, along with two new teams the Blackhawks (which replaced the Ducks) and the Panthers.

The Energise Shield, sponsored by local company Energise, recently finished with the last fixture, between the Blackhawks and the Buffalos, deciding where it would go. If it were not for the Penguins and the Panthers ruffling a few feathers in the final few fixtures the competition may have been won earlier.

The final game had it all, skill, speed, blunders, great saves, up and down refereeing and the occasional sin bin (not to mention a faulty scoreboard). The Blackhawks eventually held out to win the game 6-4 and claim the shield for the first time.

The Energise Shield produced some great displays from teams and players. The pick of the highlights would be the Penguins against all the odds managing to beat the Blackhawks 12-10 in the highest scoring game of the Shield.

An excellent start to the season by all teams and long may it continue into the Cable and Wireless Russell Smith Memorial Trophy, where the Panthers, Penguins, Buffalos and Sharks will be trying to stop the Blackhawks from doing the double.

If you would like to be part of this fast growing sport go down to the gym on Sundays between 4 and 6pm and Tuesdays from 7 to 9pm, or call Martyn Barlow on 55624 who can give you all the necessary details. Have a go; you might just surprise yourself!

Dek hockey (the Canadian name for the sport) is based on ice hockey but played on foot. It is believed to have originated in Northern America some time close to 1900, and is most popular in Canada and some Northern parts of the United States.

The Buffalos best Blackhawks

SUNDAY saw some of the last few games of round one of the Russell Smith memorial trophy. The first fixture was a replay of the Cup and Shield final with the Blackhawks facing off against the Buffalos.

The Hawks had a slightly reduced squad with Caris Stevens unavailable but with Jordan Philips making a debut after being signed on to the Hawks earlier in the week. Grant Budd's Buffalos fielded a full squad. After a disappointing result against the table-topping Penguins the Buffs needed a win to secure second place.

Presiding referee Marcus Morrison in his second appearance as ref noted that he would consider a time-out in the event of a low scoring game, to allow goalies to rehydrate.

Buffalos took an early lead through captain Grant Budd beating Hawks net minder at range. This lead was quickly built on as Nick Rendell netted the puck.

As demonstrated time and again a two goal deficit in Dek Hockey is no cushion at all, as Blackhawks number two Karl Knightingale slotted the first of the Hawks catch up goals.

Captain Craig Dockrill was awarded a two minute penalty for kicking the puck. This power play was ended prematurely as the Buffalos scored.

Shortly before half time Mark Spruce was also sin-binned. The Blackhawks frustrated the Buffalos as they maintained possession of the puck, moving it around so the Buffalos couldn't capitalise on their three-on-two advantage.

The referee called on the sin-binned player as the two minute penalty expired, only to point him back to the sin-bin 15 seconds later. Not content with being the highest scoring goalie Mark has now set a record for the two fastest sendings off!

The half time hooter went, so the remainder of the power play would be played at the restart of play. Scores stood Buffs four Hawks five.

Ten minutes into the second half Buffalos' defender Izzy Ceballos caught a follow-through from Karl Knightingale in the face.

After the blood was cleared up, play resumed with players refreshed after the break, and the Buffalos raring to go after losing Izzy in such dramatic fashion.

Leading from the front, Grant Budd won the restarting face-off and darted around the defence and slotted the puck in the net. The pace of this attack set the tone for the rest of the match. With a further injury stoppage as Mark Spruce hurt his arm after a heavy landing, the defences of both sides were kept busy, but the Buffalos out-scored their opponents four goals to one in the second period. The Buffalos left standing clinching the game 8-6.

The second fixture of the evening saw the Sharks go down to a rampant Panthers side with all of the Panther out players making it onto the score sheet. Final score Sharks four, Panthers eight.

MUSSEL FARMING

Fortuna have a mussel line at Fitzroy which is in some disarray but which has been successful in that mussels have grown well on it over the past few years.

The development of a commercial export mussel business here presents a number of difficult challenges and these will take time to work through, indeed it may be that it will not be possible to establish an export industry.

However there could be a small local market and Fortuna would like to talk to any organisation or individual who is interested in re-establishing part or all of the line, either at Fitzroy or elsewhere and supplying the local market.

Perhaps this activity could complement other business ventures on a farm or be operated part time from Stanley.

War of words is only simmering

AS might have been expected during a week when Argentina has been celebrating the bicentenary of its independence from Spain, the new British Government's "Note Verbale," reasserting sovereignty over the Falkland Islands and declaring illegal recent Argentine attempts to impede the free passage of shipping to and from the Islands, brought forth a prompt response.

British Ambassador in Buenos Aires Shan Morgan was summoned to the Foreign Ministry, Palacio San Martin, on Monday afternoon to receive a note from the Argentine government in response to the British one.

The Argentine note was delivered to the Ambassador by Cabinet Chief Alberto D'Alotto.

Britain had complained that Argentine Presidential Decree 256/2010 and Disposition 14/2010 which state all vessels sailing to and from Argentina, the Falklands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, must request a previous authorisation from the Argentine government, "are not compliant with International Law including the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea," and other international treaties signed by the Argentine government.

The Argentine response reiterated that country's territorial claims in the South Atlantic and argued in consequence that the restrictions they seek to impose on shipping do not break international laws, because voyages to and from the Falklands (and other islands that Argentina claims) are really voyages to Argentine territory and so are an internal matter for Argentina.

This exchange of notes has been described by the Argentine press as indicating an escalation of tension between Britain and Argentina, but many seasoned observers take the view that it is predictable rather than critical.

British Ambassador in Buenos Aires, Shan Morgan

Outside the simmering of these formal diplomatic exchanges, however, Argentina's Deputy Foreign Affairs minister Victorio Tacetti has been attempting to raise the temperature with statements, which are both historically inaccurate and clearly meant to be inflammatory, such as his declaration that: "Those living in Malvinas were not colonised; they were sent by the UK, thus displacing the original inhabitants by the use of force."

Rather strangely, given the historical evidence to the contrary, Mr Tacetti also complained that for the past 200 years "Argentines have not been allowed to live in Malvinas," claiming: "At some point only teachers and labourers were allowed to lead some activities." Several Members of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly took the opportunity offered by Wednesday's Budget Session to praise the robust stance of the new British Government vis-a-vis what is seen in the Islands as a stepping up of Argentina's sovereignty campaign, since the current period of oil exploration began in the waters around the Falklands.

Councillor Jan Check, whose grandchildren are eighth generation Falkland Islanders, said that the Argentine claim was based on "shaky history," and the wrong assumption that Falkland Islanders were an implanted population. Her earliest Falkland Islands ancestor had arrived with the first British Governor, but he was a volunteer.

Veteran Councillor Bill Luxton described recent actions by the Argentine Government as: "thuggish, bullying tactics."

Penguin News

FOR a budget that was promised to be belt-tightening, the one outlined on Wednesday by the Director of Financial Services, did not seem at first to be too frightening, except maybe for those on the verge of extinction from over-indulgence in alcohol and tobacco. However, cleverly offering as it does a mixture of small benefits, small subtractions and lumps of status quo, it will take me, like most people I expect, some time to digest its complexities and to work out where it leaves me.

This was not the case with one Penguin News reader who was on the phone within minutes of Keith Padgett sitting down, to tell me how much the new arrangements, if adopted, would cost the average family. She later was kind enough to email with a range of calculations for families of various sizes and incomes, which we may well publish next week once we have checked them out.

At first glance they seem to suggest that a family earning a gross income of £31,000, consisting of two parents with two children, will be £74 better off if one stays home so they don't have to pay for child care, but £472 worse off, if both work. Even more worrying, a similar family earning £61,000 per year, even paying for child care for their children end up £282 better off.

If these calculations are correct - and the background of the person doing them suggests that she should know how to use a calculator - then it would appear that what we have is a Reverse Robin Hood budget, with the poorer being robbed to pay for the better off.

To be honest though, important though they may be, these kind of calculations just hurt my head. What really impressed me about what we all heard on Wednesday, both from the Director of Corporate Resources, or Financial Secretary as I still prefer to call him, and the Governor was the sheer size of the task that this Assembly seems to be setting for itself. To carry out the recommendations of the budget alone will, we were told, require changes to 23 different laws and that's before housing, education and a new port get sorted out, or the nine other bills are passed which are required to help implement the Rural Development Strategy or overhaul the laws relating to telecommunications or employment or smoking in public places or immigration or.....the list goes on and on.

This Assembly's plans as presented seem to strike a fair balance between many conflicting demands, but it would have been good to see some provision made to make its Members full-time and reasonably well-paid. Surely the volume and nature of the work involved demands this if they are to succeed without being brought to their knees by the sheer size of their own lofty ambitions.

Highs & lows from budget

Cruise ship tourism escapes any threat from increases in passenger levies, embarkation fees, harbour dues, and customs fees

THOSE fearing that they would have to take in many notches in their belts may heave a sigh of relief if all the Financial Secretary's budget recommendations are accepted by councillors; it is not as draconian as might have been expected.

Surprisingly, perhaps, there are no changes proposed to either income tax rates or corporation tax rates, though personal and lower tax bands are decreased to £12,000.

Businesses which profit from the cruise ship side of tourism will no doubt be gratified to find that there are no changes proposed to the passenger levy or to embarkation fees, harbour dues, or customs entrance & clearance fees.

All these costs for visiting ships have been cited in the past as high, and likely to discourage visits, when Stanley is compared with other destinations in the Southern Cone.

Things are not so rosy for the prospects of land-based tourism, which suffers already from the high cost of getting here and the lack of easy access.

All these difficulties will be added to from July 1 2011, by a 10% increase in FIGAS tourist rates. Outer island resident's flight costs remain capped at £50, though FIGAS freight rates are set to increase by 20%.

Those whose salaries or wages are tied to the cost of living will enjoy a 1% increase, as will beneficiaries of the Old Scheme public service & FLH pensions. Standard retirement pensions, ex-gratia pensions & Christmas bonuses also increase by 1%.

Allowances for the rent rebate and service charge rebate schemes go up by 5% and 1% respectively.

Welfare allowances, including attendance and fostering allowances, also see a 1% rise.

The threshold for rent rebate, service charge rebate and winter fuel allowance increases by 0.7%.

Further good news, no doubt occasioned by the increased use of the wind, is that the cost of a unit of electricity will reduce from 17.5p to 16.53p.

Retirement pension contributions (RPCs) go up from January 1, 2011, to £13.50 for residents, employees and employers, while the voluntary overseas retirement pension contribution goes up to £33.10. There is to be no change in the OAP winter fuel allowance.

Rents for FIG accommodation rise by 5%.

Customs import duties on cigarettes and tobacco products will go up by 10% and 3% will be added to the cost of alcohol, which with a 1% Medical Services Levy may help cover the cost to us all of those killing themselves with cigarettes and booze.

The dead, too, or at least their surviving relatives, come in for a bit of a hammering with funeral charges in Stanley going up by 18% to £1,168 and in Camp by 29.5% to £1,368.

Clearly the push for the repopulation of Camp applies only to the living.

There's also no change to the reservation charges for plots in Stanley cemetery, so the Stanley bias continues, tempered slightly by the news that service charges for domestic properties will go up 6.5% to £396.

The cost of waste collection from non-domestic properties goes up 10% to £134 for a wheelie bin & £407 for a large bin. Metered water charges for commercial users rise by 3%.

Local postage charges remain the same, but if you want to complain about the budget to overseas relatives complaining about the budget, it will cost you more.

Governor's final state of the nation address

THE Budget Session of the Legislative Assembly was held on Wednesday morning. It began as always with the annual State of the Nation Address by His Excellency the Governor. At one time, as the Honourable Dick Sawle mentioned in his vote of thanks, this used to be a somewhat tedious affair, rather akin to a typical headmaster's speech at prize giving, with every one of the government's departments getting a favourable mention.

For the last two years however, as the Governor himself pointed out, there has been a different format. Instead of being written for the Governor by the heads of the Civil Service, the Address is compiled with contributions from the Members of the Legislative Assembly themselves and is, in effect, an outline of the policies and plans they have for the coming year. In this respect it now very much resembles the speech made by the Queen at the state opening of the Westminster parliament, which this year, by coincidence, happened a couple of days earlier.

Beginning with government's finances, the speech made reference to the effects of the global economic downturn, which coupled with reduced fisheries income, reduced returns on investments and reduced tourist numbers made our budgetary position "fragile" and called for "financial prudence" and "budgetary restraint."

The effect on the government's finances of any future oil exploitation was acknowledged, but because of its uncertainty and the time scale involved, was dismissed as a base for economic forecasting. Mention was made, however, of the short-term boost to the economy provided by the current oil exploration effort, and the local private sector were praised for the considerable investments and efforts they had made to support this.

The nearness to completion of the Economic Development Strategy (EDS) was hailed as providing "the potential to provide increased economic growth including in Camp," though significant private sector investment would be needed, particularly from the fishing industry, should it be decided to go ahead with the construction of a new port.

A medium term financial plan has been agreed by the Legislative Assembly, which aims to strike a balance between meeting investment and public service needs on the one hand and affordability on the other. While the Assembly will work towards a balanced budget in the future, for next year the target of an operating budget deficit of £1m has been retained.

The Governor went on to say that councillors no longer considered that there was a need to build up reserves, but in their speeches of thanks after his address, Councillor Cheek and Councillor Halford both took issue with this statement.

The Government's policy priorities were listed in the speech as Housing, Education, Rural Development, Tourism, Internal Transport and Telecommunications.

These ambitions were echoed by several members during subsequent speeches, with Cllrs Glenn Ross and Gavin Short being particularly forceful on the need to make house-ownership more accessible than at present.

Government will be producing a housing plan to detail the types of accommodation required in both the short and long term. It will also look at financial options for making housing affordable, which might include shared ownership and government mortgages.

Cllr Cheek, as principal proposer of the vote of thanks to the Governor, said that she felt there had been a "falling off" in the priority given to education in the past few years, and that in her opinion it was vital to have more local people in senior positions in government: "If we are to be convincing as a people in our own right," she said. This attitude is clearly shared by Cllr Short who declared a totally local civil service as something he hoped to see before heading to his final rest in East Stanley. Plans currently being drawn up by the Education and Training Departments include a review of the apprenticeship scheme and the consideration of provision for support for mature students and for those undertaking Masters degrees.

Knowing that when the Assembly resumes on Friday, they will have the opportunity to speak at length, some of the Members limited their remarks to taking the opportunity of his last Budget Session, to thank the Governor for his support and to wish him and wife, Helen, a happy retirement.

It was no surprise however that Cllr Sawle should have taken the opportunity to speak about telecommunications. He assured those present, and the wider radio audience, that there had been "no diminution of resolution or will" or change in the "robust stance" that he and his colleagues were taking with regard to the Cable and Wireless Service, and urged that company to cooperate with Government rather than shy away from admitting the existence of problems.

The Governor's speech outlined consultancy work on the quality of the service, which, when concluded in August, will "enable the Assembly to consider whether the exclusive licence granted to Cable and Wireless continues to be in the best interests of the Falkland Islands people."

In the final section of his address, the Governor forcibly reiterated the British position on the illegality of Argentine attempts to interfere with international shipping. He also criticised the Argentine Government for ignoring the existence of the Falkland's democratically elected government. It was surprising, he said, that a country composed largely of relatively recent immigrants should deny the right of self-determination to a country where some families had lived for up to nine generations.

New Civil Military Liaison Officer

LIEUTENANT Commander John Maskell-Bott, the Civilian Military Liaison Officer, has now retired from the services. John and Sarah will return to the Falkland Islands in October and reside in their house in Hill Cove.

Warrant Officer Ivan Morris the Command Warrant Officer will temporarily cover some of the duties of the Civil Military Liaison Officer until a suitable replacement has been recruited.

Ivan has served in the Islands in the 80's and then served here accompanied with his wife Shirley between 2000-2004 and 2007, and leaves the Island in Jan 2011.

Ivan is based in the Headquarters at Mount Pleasant Complex. If you need to discuss any local issues Ivan can be contacted at the address below: hqewo@mountpleasant.mod.uk Local 74038 Mil 94130 4038 Mobile 53918.

Moon marathon for charity

FOURTEEN members of the community including the staff of Wilkins Kennedy's Stanley office are taking part in a "Marathon at Midnight" this evening, starting at the Standard Chartered Bank as the Town Hall clock reaches twelve midnight, and following the marathon route.

The marathon is in aid of the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund and the spinal rehabilitation charity Aspire, with all monies raised being divided equally between them.

Unlike the official Standard Chartered Marathon, this event will be more sociable and leisurely and is expected to take around seven or eight hours, although no time limit has been set.

Although the walkers will be wearing quite distinctive t-shirts which should make them easy to spot, the organisers have asked that all drivers should be aware and careful when driving around the marathon route during this time. Anyone wishing to show their support to the participants en-route, will be more than welcome and, of course, any donations will be gratefully received.

The staff of FIC attempt an aerobics session in the West Store car park for Challenge Day

Challenge Day a great success this year

FIVE hundred and forty seven willing and breathless individuals participated in this year's Challenge Day. From walking, playing football, to splashing about in the pool, people of all different ages participated in a sport, or exercised on Wednesday.

Exercise Referral Practitioner Daniel Biggs, organiser of this year's Challenge Day and the activities which were available free at the Stanley Leisure Centre, said it was a success: "To achieve a participation rate of 20 per cent of the population is really good."

"It was great to see the private sector getting involved, in particular FIC with their aerobics session in the West Store car park. We hope to see this extending further throughout other businesses next year."

He made mention in particular of the staff at Standard Chartered Bank for their Laughing Yoga session, the Treasury staff for their Beaver Hangar walk and some of the children's activities: "The pool was at maximum capacity with kids on the aqua run, it was really popular, and good to see."

Mr Biggs added that although the indoor football tournament was not as well subscribed as usual, as they were missing a few of the regular teams, it still went well. The tournament was won by the Stanley Leisure Centre team, with the Falklands Islands Community School students close behind, and the FICS teachers, "not quite as close" he said.

"This year's Challenge Day had a fifth of our community participating – which really is an achievement. Hopefully next year it will be bigger and even better," he said. He would like to pass on his thanks to Sarah Clement and Carol Peck for the free exercise classes they ran, and to the Leisure Centre staff for all the work they put into the day.

War on earwigs declared

WAR has been declared on the creepy crawly that has plagued Stanley for several years and is spreading to outlying settlements at an alarming rate.

At Monday's public meeting, plans to halt the dastardly earwig in its tracks were hatched and a Bug Busting group is to be formed.

Councillor Glenn Ross remonstrated with those who found the situation amusing, and agreed with a member of the public who said there was every chance that the presence of earwigs in the home could eventually lead to mental problems.

He said it was a very real problem and one which he had discussed at the Department of Agriculture in recent days.

"We need to get together on this and set up a map of Stanley so people can let us know where there are concentrated areas" he said.

Preventative measures need to be put in place where there are not as yet any earwigs, so that it can be kept that way. He said that in a few years time he would prefer to have tried to do something and failed, than not to have done anything at all to improve the situation.

Penguin News: Missing Links

Last week's missing link was a picture of Bertha Etherington standing next to an unknown woman at San Carlos. The woman pictured on the left has been identified by Lil as her mother, Nell Reive. She said her mother was a maid at the manager's house at San Carlos, before marrying John Dickson McCallum.

Clara McKay however has also identified the woman, but as Teena Ashley, a maid who worked there at the same time as Bertha. She said Teena married Dick Anderson, and had two children.

She identified the picture as being taken outside the manager's house, and said she had known both women well; Clara was 12 at the time. Clara said that Bertha used to walk to San Carlos Point on her half days, would light a fire so a dinghy would come across to fetch her, and would have supper with Clara's mother. She said she remembered her as a lovely, pretty and a lively person. She thought Bertha's husband Jack was the gardener at the time, not the shepherd, and believes the couple left, possibly to return to England, as at that time house keepers were not allowed children.

If anyone has any further information about the identity of Bertha's friend, or this week's missing link, please let us know on 22709 or email editor@penguinnews.co.fk.

A disappointing and different Landing Day

A SERVICE of Commemoration was held at San Carlos on Friday to remember those who lost their lives and to mark the day, twenty-eight years ago, when the British Forces landed in the Falkland Islands. Those congregated stood facing out to sea at Blue Beach, where HMS Portland and HMS Clyde were at anchor.

A service was conducted by Force Chaplains, giving thanks to the courage and example shown by those involved as they landed under enemy fire. Commander British Forces, Commodore Thicknesse, presented Sheila McPhee with the original invasion map used by the British Forces in 1982, along with other historical and educational material of the invasion which was donated to the San Carlos Museum.

Personal accounts of those who experienced the landings at San Families and military remembering

Carlos were then recounted, before the laying of wreaths in the cemetery.

Gary Clement, of SAMA said: "Today is a very poignant day for me. It felt at the time, that it was the day I had been training for, for my entire 11 year career previous to that point." However he went on to say, the day was not as it could, and should have been: "Because it's so poignant to me, I feel it's something we ought to get right."

Describing this year's event as "different" and "disappointing" although not, he admitted, wholly unexpected, he hopes to call a meeting of other like-minded individuals, to ensure better experiences are had at similar events in the future.

He said the group could take charge of landing day and any other events that may not live up to their expectations: "We will decide where and when, and we will invite the military to our event," he added.

Having already spoken to others he said a landing day event held on the Saturday closest to the 21st might prove preferable, as more people, including children, would be able to attend. He asked anyone who might like to get involved to contact him on 52910.

Fire fighting at Goose Green

RAF Fire Crew Members taught pupils at Goose Green settlement school how to put out a small fire, during a visit on Wednesday May 12.

The fire-fighters first let the children try on their equipment, before inspecting the school and placing a Fire Point sticker next to the main exit where the fire extinguisher went and placing a Fire Exit sticker over the Fire Exit Door in the classroom.

The children had lots of fun putting out a bin fire, Jack Alazia said: "This was the most outstanding bit because Kia, Leo, Rodrigo and I got to destroy the fire in the bin!"

They learnt all about fire safety. The most important lesson they said, was that fire can kill; while buildings can be replaced a life cannot so leave the building quickly without running.

As well as teaching them about fire safety, the fire-fighters gave the children stickers, activity books and a reading booklet called Francis the Firefly, about a little firefly that played with matches, sizzled her wings and burned down the Kingdom of the Insects, they told the Penguin News.

Karen Armstrong-Ford and the pupils of Goose Green School said they would like to thank the RAF Firemen for spending their free-time visiting the school and providing such a fun and educational service. They said they hoped the firemen enjoyed the chocolate cake on the way home.

Gaviscon, oh, Gaviscon

ON April 21 I was sent ashore from the good ship RFA Wave Ruler, feeling unwell, and put under the care of the medical centre at MPA.

At MPA I received no relevant medical treatment at all (unless you include Gaviscon) but, on my third day there, they had the sense to send me to your wonderful hospital in Stanley. In Stanley my condition was immediately identified (heart attack) and the duty team rolled into action like well oiled clockwork – and saved my life.

It wouldn't be fair to name names as I might miss somebody – except Angela, the doctor, whose name clearly comes from the word angel. There was a man, a nurse, who made me tea that tasted just as if my wife had made it. A better looking nurse held my hand earlier in the day, another one took over until early evening and then yet another through the night! Other doctors visited, someone brought me food, I was allowed to phone my wife and drugs were pumped into my arms. At one point I had a bit of a relapse but the third nurse on the above list was calm and professional and knew what to do.

The Anglican Rector of the Falkland Islands, Richard Hines, turned up and was a pillar of strength – and he also phoned my wife.

However, the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital is unable to provide more than initial front line treatment for heart attack victims and, as intensive care is next to the main desk(!), I could hear arrangements being made throughout the night. They located my luggage and, most importantly, my passport – and arranged for me to be transferred to the Clínica Alemana in Santiago. As a result, at 11:00 the next morning I was put aboard a Chilean Gulfstream 150 jet plane and whisked far away across the still trembling Andes.

That afternoon a Chilean doctor told me I would have to wait approximately 48 hours, while they pumped the necessary drugs into me, before they could carry out the next medical step. And then he returned half an hour later and said they would operate tomorrow. Apparently the Stanley hospital team had pre-empted everything and the relevant drugs were already in me! (Thanks Angela.)

The last time I saw Angela I said: "Thank you for saving my life." She told me to think nothing of it (yeah – really!). And I don't think I got the chance to thank anyone else in that wonderful hospital – so this is it: THANK YOU – EVERYONE. King Edward VII

Memorial Hospital is the best hospital in the world – and it is because of the professional, nice, able, caring, conscientious, thinking, beautiful, good tea making, kind, knowledgeable, bestest nurses, doctors, ambulance drivers and everyone else who work within it. Without them a hospital is just walls and a few unmade beds.

As for me, I was very lucky to be sent to the Clínica Alemana and it is a seat of medical excellence. A stent was fitted to one of my main coronary arteries (which was 90% occluded). Another artery, the primary diagonal, is still 80% occluded but due to the small size of this artery further decisions must be made before any further action is taken. And I have a number of dead heart muscles as well! However, the output from my heart is good and, apparently, it should adapt.

I returned to the UK on April 11th and attended my GP the next day. The local hospital (in Reading) will see me on 6th June (I've told them that if I am still alive I'll look forward to it) and, if I want to see a dietician, the next available appointment is in the last week of September!!!

So, thank you to all at Stanley hospital and to Richard Hines. Don't worry if you have to go to the Clínica Alemana because you will be in the best hands. However, if you should return to the UK, don't count on the speedy service you have surely become accustomed to on the FI and... I doubt you would print my comments concerning the medical centre at MPA (but just keep an eye on Gaviscon shares).

Football fame in simulation

I AM the non-Fifa researcher of the World famous Football Management Simulation Game – Championship Manager, and was wondering if it would be possible for you to print an appeal for information in the letters section of your newspaper.

In the most recent version of the game we included non-Fifa teams such as Greenland, Gibraltar and Kosovo for the first time, and were hoping to expand this section in the next version of the game (CM2011 – in stores September 2010).

We are hoping to include the Falkland Islands National team in the new game, however as we are running to a tight deadline it will unfortunately not be possible to include any Falkland Islands domestic teams or players in this game; something which we will hopefully change in time for CM2012.

I was therefore wondering if there are any footballers from the Falkland Islands who play in foreign leagues, as I believe a lot of people leave the Islands to study in England, specifically at a college in Chichester, Sussex. As the game currently has teams as far down the football pyramid in England as Step 14, which includes the Sussex County League, this is the main area I am targeting, however obviously any players in other places will be eligible to be included in the game.

I have also been informed that a lot of people leave the Islands to study in Australia, and as the game includes two regional leagues under the Hyundai A-League, any player from the Falklands playing in these leagues can be included too.

I am also interested if there are any players playing in Chile, due to the Islands proximity to the country, however for obvious reasons I have pretty much ruled out any Islanders playing in Argentina, although if there are any I will be gladly corrected!!

If anyone either plays in, or knows somebody who plays in one of the leagues mentioned above, would they please be able to e-mail any information to me at NonFifaCm@mail.com or alternatively get in touch with the Penguin News; it would be greatly appreciated.

Unfortunately as we are hoping to get a demo version of the game released in early August, any players eligible to be included will have to be known by ourselves by Monday 19th July, so they can be researched and included.

Mr Tom Oliver
London

Please spare those trees

I GUESS it was the lack of sunshine throughout last winter and spring, and even summer, dare I say, but I have noticed recently just how many old, established trees have been cut down in Stanley.

Although I understand the reasons for this it does sadden me as it takes a long time for trees to grow in the Falklands and I would like to urge everyone to consider trimming their trees before they become too big.

This also applies to those trees planted on Government land, such as the triangle in front of the FIC garages, the Remembrance Wood and others.

Macrocarpas and spruces take quite kindly to pruning provided it is not too drastic, so please, please consider a trim rather than sudden death!

Nice try but not allowed

EVERYTHING about the Falklands in Argentina is political. Sr Bautista's recent rugby visit was no exception. It is wrong for him to say (PN 14 May) that it "was not used in any political way."

I was in Buenos Aires when it took place and saw the media coverage. Clarín, had most, on January 10th. There was a colour picture of a match on the front page. In the caption it said the first try was scored by the son of an Argentine killed in the 1982 war.

There were two more pages in the sports section. The main title was "El Rugby Une" (rugby unifies, or unites). Here Sr Bautista said that through rugby they believed they could form a "vinculo indisoluble" (unbreakable link) with the Falklands. Is this normal, if politics were not involved?

Three Argentine veterans of the war accompanied the team. Clarín reported: "After an emotional minute's silence," one kicked the first match off! Isn't that political?

A sub-title was "Fue para los Chicos" (It was for the Youngsters), and the concentration on coaching young Islanders was glaring. This is a time-honoured Argentine tactic, as they know that youngsters are not politically mature enough to realize that they are being used. Sr Bautista stressed that they had promoted "rugby values." Whatever those values are, can't they best be obtained from Britain where the game originated? British rugby players could teach the game for its own sake, without a hidden agenda.

Lastly, I thought the title "Rugby Sin Fronteras" particularly inappropriate. At the time of the visit, Argentina had just finalised its provincial "fronteras" – putting the Falklands into the Province of Tierra del Fuego, the most chaotic province in Argentina, and one of the most corrupt.

Keeping local is more fruitful

WHILST it certainly is a good time to have some discussion on how we would wish to see the economy and community develop in the event of a successful hydrocarbons industry, let us not start from a position of strangely distorted reports of historical perspective and fact (Elsby 21/5/10).

The last drilling round was in 1998: the Council that supervised it was elected in 1997, and included Cllrs Luxton, Halford and Cheek as well as myself and others not now in Government. There were many discussions about "what if's" but there was never to my knowledge any philosophy that "we needed as much on-shore development as possible."

From the very early days of exploration it was always accepted that the best route for the Falklands, if there were hydrocarbons, was that they should be produced, loaded and exported offshore without any need to bring them ashore. This avoids the need for large scale construction projects and the very large numbers of temporary imported construction workers that have had such detrimental effect on other small communities elsewhere. Our view was, and I hope and expect it still is, a minimal onshore impact route.

Where Mr Elsby is perhaps confused, is in the provision of support services in which I and others support maximum local involvement.

It took us 160 years to get back our farming industry from external ownership at very considerable cost. It took 20 years to get control of the majority of our fishing quotas into local ownership, though some of it is still controlled from outside. We would not want the oil industry to go the same way, with large numbers of outside owned and non-Falklands registered companies providing the support services and reaping the benefits, with Islanders left as employees and observers in our own country.

Maximisation of local involvement, and substantial growth in the private sector, is essential to the provision of a long term and stable economy.

The alternative in which we all become the workers whilst others are the owners, and the Government gets bigger and bigger through resource rents and taxation, is unthinkable.

Anybody who thinks you can develop a multi million pound industry without physical growth in the town and its infrastructure lives in cloud cuckoo land. How that growth is controlled and managed will be critical to how the community responds and develops.

But Mr Elbsy's dream of the gentleman farmer on the edge of town need not be lost. There will be plenty more land over Wireless Ridge, and you never know it might even be more fertile, and we can begin to enjoy the asparagus and blueberries we have all so long waited for.

Mike Mac is the exterminator

I WOULD like to thank Michael McLeod for doing such a good job with his fumigation kit.

He did a property down east last week that has been very very infested with these damn horrible earwigs. They were so bad that the floors were just black every day with them. Michael came with his kit and I went back two days later and could not believe my eyes; there was only about a dozen over the whole house.

I think this is the answer to our prayers. My suggestion would be for Government to have every property in Stanley treated now and again in January, then maybe we would get the best of these horrible things.

Letter to Graham Bound

FALKLANDS Conservation (FC) is always pleased to see residents of the Falkland Islands (past and present) take an interest in the conservation of wildlife and the environment of the South Atlantic. However, you should not mistake the absence of comment in the Penguin News for an absence of interest, concern or action on our part.

We prefer to express our concerns about issues such as oil and gas development directly to FIG and the individual exploration companies rather than using the media to deliver our messages. In our experience, this approach promotes constructive dialogue and assures our messages are neither misrepresented nor misinterpreted.

The major industrial activities of the day remain well in our sights. New activities such as the port development project and oil exploration and ongoing activities such as tourism and commercial fishing ventures are of utmost interest to our members, our staff, and the vast number of wildlife constituents we represent.

We endeavour to regularly update our members on our engagement of industry and FIG in activities and discussions that support conservation of the relatively pristine Falklands environment. If yourself or any other readers are concerned about the environment and would like Falklands Conservation to engage in particular discussions or actions then I would encourage you to visit our website (www.falklandsconservation.com) or contact our office in the UK or Stanley about becoming a member.

As a member, you'd have an opportunity to help guide our organization and would be guaranteed of remaining informed of our current and upcoming activities.

Fairies on the Falklands

I WAS wrong! There are fairies in the hills around Stanley!

On Sunday when I went, armed with gloves, plastic bags and a strong stomach, to clear the squalid mess at the rocky "love nest" on Canopus Hill I was very pleasantly surprised to find that someone had beaten me to it.

A big "Thank You" to whoever cleared up the condoms etc that littered the area. My faith in human nature was restored a little or maybe there is a bit of fairy magic in the rocks and diddle dee around the Falkland Islands.

An appeal for the missing reel

WE are writing once again, to ask the readers of the Penguin News if they can help us with our Alistair Cameron History Project on Darwin School's old, stone, play hut, in Carcass Bay.

We are trying to track down a photograph of the stone hut when it was still complete. We would like to scan it and return the photograph as soon as possible.

Most interestingly, we have been told that there is an old film which we would like to track down – it was made in the 1960's by the children of Darwin School. We believe the black and white film, with no sound, starred amongst others, Brian May.

The stone hut featured in the film as the villains' hide-out. We would love to know where it is and watch it ourselves!

We can be contacted by email: gg2008school@horizon.co.fk and telephone number: 27122 (during school hours).

Thank you for your help,
Jack Alazia, Leo Benjamin,
Rodrigo Viveros and Kia Alazia of Goose Green School

Your letters are welcome on any subject. Priority will be given to those opinions and comments which the Penguin News considers topical, lively, original and relevant to the Falklands. Letters may be edited for brevity, legal and other reasons. Thank you.

Sharon Halford at Isle of Man conference

LEGISLATIVE Assembly Member, the Honourable Sharon Halford, attended the annual conference of the British Islands and Mediterranean Region of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, which was held on the Isle of Man from May 10 to 14.

Mrs Halford described the event as: "An opportunity to re-new old acquaintances with friends of the Falkland Islands, to share common experiences, to gain fresh perspectives, and to bring back new ideas to discuss with my colleagues in Government."

The theme of this conference was "Possibilities," the possibilities for democracy created by new technologies including, in particular, recent developments in information technology.

The first day involved a broad overview of governments and technology. Topics covered include the pros and cons of allowing staff to use networking sites in the workplace, IT management and obtaining value for money in IT procurement. Also considered was keeping costs down by updating programs rather than replacing hardware.

Delegates were reminded that whilst technology is the method it is not the message.

Mrs Halford said she was particularly interested by a comment from the speaker that attracting financial institutions to work in your territory is guaranteed to improve your IT connections since without fast IT connections the finance industry is unable to work efficiently.

The technology already exists to permit on-line voting, and the use of laptops is now allowed in some legislatures.

On the second day delegates had a demonstration of how the electronic voting system works in the Tynwald, the Isle of Man's legislature. Delegates were also shown the Hansard voice recognition system in use in Council Chambers. As a parliamentarian speaks, their words appear on a big screen.

During the conference Mrs Halford chaired a session on "The challenges presented by information technologies in terms of protecting important rights and freedoms such as the right to privacy." The keynote speaker was Christopher Graham, the UK's Information Commissioner.

It was pointed out that whilst data protection is necessary, it is not always easy to marry this up with freedom of information. On line communication is instant and this is not always comfortable. One difficult issue is how long data should be kept by government agencies.

The regional AGM was held towards the end of the conference, which gave delegates the opportunity to update everyone on parliamentary developments in their territories. Mrs Halford commented: "When future meetings were discussed there was a huge emphasis on cost cutting, as everyone has to cut back on what they can spend as the recession is still biting."

The final event was a formal dinner, at which the Falklands delegation were seated at the top table beside the Gibraltar delegation.

Mrs Halford concluded: "Outside the workshops it is important to always be putting your message across and I got plenty of opportunities to do this with people wanting to know about the oil and the neighbours."

Stanley gets a yacht club at long last

AFTER what Chairman Tony Blake described as: "Three years of trying and being bogged down over property rights and other issues," the newly formed Falkland Islands Yacht Club held its first Annual General Meeting on May 20 in the Geography room at the Community School.

Twenty-one people were present at the meeting and all signed up for membership, at a cost of £10.

The following were elected as officers of the Club: Tony Blake as Chair, Alison Thorogood as Vice Chair, Janet McLeod as Secretary and Dianne Freeman as Treasurer.

In addition, as required by the Constitution of the Club, the following were elected as Committee Members: Richard Short, Ken Passfield, Carl Freeman and Neil Rowlands.

Mr Blake told Penguin News that he was very pleased by the composition of the Club's Committee. They and the officers of the Club represented a good cross-section of Falkland Islands society, and also covered the three principal locations where yachts were currently to be found in Stanley.

It was hoped, said Mr Blake that the existence of the club would attract contacts from overseas and would help promote the development of the Falklands as a yachting destination, an aspect of the club's existence in which the Tourist Board had already shown interest.

New Camp TV up and running

SINCE the BFBS1 analogue service was recovered on April 7, the service is running satisfactorily with very few reception issues having been raised. This will continue for the foreseeable future and anyone experiencing difficulties should contact SSVC to let them know.

Having successfully completed the bulk of new installations on West Falkland, installation of the digital satellite dishes on East Falkland is due to commence on May 31.

As on West Falkland, two two-man installation crews will be working across the Island.

One crew will be in Sussex on the May 31 to start installations in Sussex, Head of the Bay, Kingsford Valley, Blue Beach, Wreck Point, Green Field and Cape Dolphin.

These installations should be complete during the first week of June after which the following places will be covered: Hope Cottage, Elephant Beach, Dunvegan Cabin, Moss Side, Race Point, Smylies, Newhouse, Lorenzo and Home Farm.

Around the 14th June this crew will go on to complete installations on George Island, Speedwell and Bleaker.

The second crew will be starting at Port Louis on May 31 and covering installations at Johnsons Harbour, Rincon Grande and Horseshoe Bay.

These installations should be completed during the first week in June after which the following places will be covered in the first week of June, Brookfield, Long Island, Estancia, Riverview and Teal Inlet.

Around June 14 this crew will go on to complete installations at North Arm, Walker Creek, Saladero and Goose Green, followed by Darwin, Hillhead, Camilla Creek, Swan Inlet, Wineglass Station and Fitzroy during the third week of June.

Apart from a few sites which may require a revisit, overall installation of the digital TV service should be completed by end of June 2010.

All residents due to receive an installation are kindly reminded to ensure that the concrete bases are complete and have been laid down in accordance with FIG guidelines. Anyone with any concerns should please contact Lynn Brownlee at the Secretariat.

Work on the installation of the new infrastructure and digital transmitter on Sapper Hill is progressing to plan. Test transmissions will be taking place over the next few weeks with the SSVC digital specialist arriving on around June 14.

The final sign-off of the new service is scheduled for the end of June after which all residents in Stanley with a digital TV will be able to commence viewing the enhanced digital service and view the new stations.

I am personally very pleased with all of the hard work and effort being made by the installers G&S Electrical, the service providers SSVC and the numerous other people and government departments that are playing a part in bringing the new digital services to the Falkland Islands. It has been very satisfying to see everyone working together effectively to make this happen. There is still much work to be done, but hopefully with the continued focus everyone has been giving onto this project we should see everything completed and the new TV services available to everyone around the end of June.

FIG has had a number of residents in Camp say to us what a stirring job the installation teams on the West have done; this feedback is very satisfying to the project team and much appreciated. I have also had feedback saying that they are very pleased with the service, picture quality and so on.

After TV, the next big challenge for the project team is to tackle the expansion of the FM radio network. The digital broadcasting of FIRS will this month provide a much improved strength of signal and area coverage.

Beyond this, island-wide improvements to the FM infrastructure should see FIRS and three other channels being distributed islands-wide by or before the end of the year.

Tension before the parade

The Inspecting Officer comes on board

Cadet Force on royal parade

SUNDAY night saw a substantial gathering of parents, friends and well-wishers at the Sea Cadet Headquarters for the TS Endurance Royal Naval Parade. Despite the somewhat cramped conditions of the venue, those present witnessed a real naval parade involving Sea Cadets, Royal Marine Cadets and Junior Cadets.

Just like on Horseguards' Parade with the Brigade of Guards, a longish wait for the arrival of the Inspecting Officer produced a couple of faintings in the ranks of the Junior Cadets, despite the efforts of Chief Petty Officer John Clifford to dispel the building tension. Fortunately in this case nobody actually hit the floor before being led off to recover.

With the waiting over, Royal Marine Cadet Corporal Remelia Ped brought the parade to order and the inspecting officer, Falklands War veteran Commander Andrew Giles RN of the Sea Cadets' Southern Area Headquarters in the UK was piped "aboard" by Cadet John Davies.

Colours were then run up a somewhat stunted flag staff by Cadets Tessa Berntsen and Sorrel Pompert Robertson and an inspection of the assembled cadets began, after prayers conducted by the Cadet Force Chaplain, Father Peter Norris.

After the inspection, cadets gave the assembled audience a display of their various activities before a presentation of certificates, promotions and badges was carried out.

Included in the presentations was that of a cheque for £2,000 presented to the Stanley Cadets by Mike Salmon on behalf of Vosper Thornycroft Communications. This will be used by the corps for the purchase of some 28 wet suits to keep cadets protected when dinghy sailing.

The Royal Marine and Sea Cadets Royal Naval Parade is now a bi-annual event, which includes a full inspection of every aspect of the unit's operation from its paperwork to its activities, to ensure that they are being carried out according to the Sea Cadets' regulations. At its successful conclusion, the unit being inspected is issued by the Sea Cadet's Association with a Licence to Train.

Inspecting Officer Giles was aided in this task by another 1982 veteran, Royal Marine Major Steve Crawley.

Commander Giles said that this visit to the Falklands was probably the only one he would be able to make during his three-year appointment to the Sea Cadets. He had found the Stanley Royal Marine Cadet and Sea Cadets - the most southerly of the 70 units in his division - to be: "a thriving unit, with lots of positives and offering lots of good things for the youngsters of Stanley to enjoy. Being in the Sea Cadets gives young people confidence and the valuable experience of working together."

A magical blue May Ball

A MAGICAL scene of deep blues and silver met the participants of this year's May Ball. The Town Hall looked outstanding, with the decorations creating a more intimate and spectacular venue, courtesy of sponsors Cable and Wireless.

With dresses in a beautiful array of colours, some matching the blue decorations, but others in red, pink, black, and Jo Igao's multi-colored piece of perfection, the youngsters danced, laughed and enjoyed the earlier part of the evening.

After the final dance had finished, and the judging, from Karen Bremner, Gary Finchett and Michelle Trowell had come to a close, this year's chosen few were announced.

May Queen was Mari-Ann Clarke, who wore an elegant light blue strapless gown, decorated with ruffles on the skirt and sequins on the bodice. She said she hadn't been expecting it at all. "I'm still shaking, it was very shocking. The whole night's been amazing."

Resplendent in a bright red dress, with sequins, spaghetti straps, and a layered and gathered skirt, Nina Humphreys was chosen as this year's May Princess. She said: "I feel good, really happy. I was really surprised, my heart was beating out of my chest."

Prince Charming, by popular vote, was a dapper Dominic Jaffray: "I was quite excited and surprised. There were a lot of other good dancers here, and better dressed people as well!" Runner up was Kyran Evans, who said he had a great night: "It was good, really enjoyable. I was really flattered to have been chosen."

With a crowd of close to 250 people, this year's May Ball, organised by the Scout Group, was enjoyed by all. Group Scout Leader Phil Middleton said: "From our point of view it was a great success. The patrons were out to enjoy themselves which made life much easier."

"The sponsorship from C&W meant we could upgrade our decorations which were commented on throughout the evening and the inclusion of the bar on the second night was a success, so I think we will include that every year."

"The girls continued their high standard of dress and the boys were equally splendid in their new suits" he added.

The bulk of the money raised will be used to renovate the scout hut floor, and the remainder will be donated to the cubs, to go towards sleep over and annual camp. Mr Middleton told the Penguin News: "My thanks go to Tim and Jan Miller, Mhari Ashworth, C&W, the judges and all the other many people who provide the music, dance lessons, and generally helped before and on the night."

Jan Miller of the 1st Falkland Islands Cub Scouts, said she thought the standard of dress was very high, and would like to thank everyone who went to the ball, specifically the youngsters entering the May Queen and Prince Charming competition.

She said: "Everybody loved the look of the hall. Lots of people said it was the best they'd seen it so I'm really pleased about that."

"We are very grateful to C&W who kindly agreed to help us with buying materials to decorate the Town Hall." She mentioned programmes, printed them, and helped with the design of a poster.

She said she would also like to thank the dance club, especially Marlene Newman and Marj Adams, Norman Clark for the photography, Mrs Ruth Taylor for creating the "beautiful" May Queen sash, the Governor for presenting the prizes es and the three judges. Also of great assistance, were Jason Lewis who helped with the lighting and sound, Sealed PR, the Globe, Kelper Stores, Stanley Garden Centre, Sew What, Kandy Kabin, and Penguin News and FIRS for publicising the event.

Mrs Miller said she would also like to thank Daniel and Julian for manning the refreshments both nights, Myriam Booth for the music on the second night, Nigel Bishop for providing the bar, all parents and friends who helped with stewarding the event and providing refreshments, and most importantly, she said, Mhari Ashworth for giving up so much of her time before the ball to help with all the decorating.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross Sound ferry main operational area
146.625.....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 20th May 2010

Ian Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands
 Despite a weakening Australian Dollar the Australian wool market dropped considerably in a fall generally described as due to global economic security.
 The Pound is also dropping so the cross rates were buffered to some extent, although the pound has become slightly stronger in AUDS terms.
 The market indicator came down 14p to 523p.
 The buffering effect the cross rates (Pound in Australian Dollar) have been having on disguising the A WEX drop over the last 5 weeks, could mean the drop could all hit at once.

Keeping track of vegetation by satellite images

IF the work of two Shackleton Fund scholars who returned to Chile on Saturday is successful, the vastness of the typical Falklands farm could one day be reduced to the size of a computer screen and its capacity for sheep carrying available at the click of a mouse.

Dr Sergio Radic and Dr Sergio Opazo were in the Falklands as part of the links between Queen's University Belfast, the University of Magallanes (UMAG) in Punta Arenas, Chile and the Falkland Islands Agricultural Department, which were established some years back by Professor Jim MacAdam. Jim, who is a frequent visitor to the Falklands and the editor of the Falkland Islands Journal worked as an agronomist for what is now the Agricultural Department in the late 'seventies.

Sergio Radic, an agronomist, who gained his PhD at Queen's Belfast under the supervision of Professor MacAdam, has visited the Falklands previously. With Dr Opazo, who is an expert in Geographical Information Systems (GIS) Dr Radic has been attempting to map the vegetation of the Agricultural Department's farm at Saladero using images obtained from satellites.

Using Saladero as a test case to enable the identification and value as pasture of different vegetation types encountered in the Falklands by remote methods, and coupling that information with a procedure widely tested and used in the Magallanes region of Chilean Patagonia, the two scientists believe it should eventually be possible to estimate the potential productivity and sheep-carrying capacity of any Falklands camp, without the need to put on the wellies and go outside.

Andrew Pollard of the Agricultural Department, is enthusiastic about the project. He believes that given the vast spaces involved in the Falklands, detailed information about the vegetation types in any given area obtained from satellite images could be of use and interest, not only to the farming community but also to conservation-ists.

CIS expert Dr Opazo told Penguin News that much of the information to be gathered from satellite comes free and that in the project in Patagonia the results are updated every 15 days, giving a smooth flow of information on seasonal as well as longer-term changes in vegetation. In the Falklands, a frequency of between three and five years might be sufficient to keep the information on vegetation distribution adequately up-dated.

Shackleton awards announced

In addition to the Shackleton Scholarship awarded to Dr Radic and Dr Opazo, three other academic awards have been granted for the year 2010. Projects funded range from the archaeological excavation of nineteenth century farm settlements to the study of mosses and seaweed flora.

Two Danish scholars who were awarded scholarships in 2009 will be making their voyage south this year. They are Dr Jakob Tougaard and Dr Line Kyhn, who will be monitoring Peale's and Commerson's dolphins.

See Page 17 for full details.

Academic awards announced

THE academic awards of the Shackleton Scholarship Fund have been announced.

As mentioned earlier in this paper (p15) one award has gone to Chilean scientists Dr Sergio Radic and Dr Sergio Opazo, who are using satellite photography to assess grassland.

Three other awards go to an archaeologist, two other scientists and a botanist.

The archaeologist is Dr Rob Philpott of the National Museums Liverpool, who has already worked on Port Louis and other sites in the Islands including Darwin. This is not his first Shackleton Award and he has shown great enthusiasm for explaining his research to the Falklands public. He will be excavating farms established by the Falkland Islands Company in the nineteenth century.

The scientists Dr Aldo Anensi and Professor Bruno de Reviers of the National Museum of Natural History in Paris are world authorities in the study of brown algae with experience in Kerguelen and Tierra del Fuego. Dr Anensi will visit the Islands in December to work with an expedition of the Scottish Association for Marine Science. The ultimate objective will be an inventory of the Falklands' brown seaweed flora – of scientific importance and potential economic value.

Sam Bosanquet from the Countryside Commission for Wales will form part of a four-person expedition which will investigate the "lower plants" of the Islands – mosses, liverworts, lichens and fungi in co-operation with Falklands Conservation. Their three weeks fieldwork will start in December 2010.

Cross dressing fun for St Helena Day at Stanley Arms

'Missus' Darrell McGill shows a leg and Lynne Summers poses less convincingly as a 'Mister.' Kevin Thomas comments

TO celebrate St Helena's Day, Stanley Arms organised a family fun afternoon for children of all ages.

With Martin Plato playing music through the afternoon, the children played pass-the-parcel and musical statues, then participated in karaoke before the titles of Miss and Master Stanley Arms were awarded.

Miss Stanley Arms was won by Danielle Harris and Master Stanley Arms went to Connor Betts.

Later in the evening, it was time for fancy dress for the adults and to choose the Mister and Missus Stanley Arms.

With a poor attendance entering, the prizes were won by Darrell McGill dressed as a woman wearing about three inch killer heels. He could even dance in them which was very impressive.

Lynne Summers won the prize for being dressed as a man, which she carried off very well.

Model of the Great Britain in her prime

Some photos never exhibited before in public

Anniversary exhibition of the SS Great Britain

FEATURING film footage and original items as well as a wide range of photographs, an exhibition marking the 40th anniversary of the salvage of the SS "Great Britain" is now open at the Museum.

Launched in 1843, the "Great Britain" was condemned in the Falklands in 1886 and purchased by the FIC for use as a storage hulk.

After 50 years of service in Stanley Harbour, the hulk was deemed unfit for further use, towed out to Sparrow Cove, beached and holed, there to see out the rest of her days – or so it was believed.

However, in the mid-1960s interest in the old ship was renewed and a plan to return her to Britain for restoration began to gather momentum – finally possible with the backing of the Bahamas-based philanthropist, Jack Hayward.

The massive operation to return the ship to her home port began in January 1970 with the arrival in the Islands of Leslie "Spike" O'Neil – a salvage expert. He judged there to be an 80 per cent chance of success and the plan went ahead.

The salvage operation that followed in April of the same year achieved what few thought was possible – the hulk was patched up, pumped out and refloated, then towed on to the submersible pontoon that would carry her 8,000 miles home to Bristol.

A number of Islanders were involved in the famous operation – either providing carpentry skills (Willie Bowles and his apprentices), working on the small boats and launches that helped to tow the hulk into position (Robin Goodwin and Peter McGill), or as part of the dive team (Lyle Craigie-Halkett).

Now restored to her original glory, the "Great Britain" is Bristol's main visitor attraction, but the ship retains an unbreakable link to the Falklands.

The salvage is central to the Museum's exhibition, and illustrated with a series of photographs by Marion and Tony Morrison of South American Pictures, along with some excellent images taken by Islanders.

For the first time, the Museum is able to enhance an exhibition with video – a 10 minute video clip shows some of the salvage work and adds great interest to the display.

The design, working life and restoration of Brunel's most celebrated ship is also briefly explained.

The Museum & National Trust is extremely grateful to the Falkland Islands Co. Ltd. and Sullivan Shipping Services for their sponsorship of the exhibition and to all the individuals who loaned photographs or shared their memories of the ship.

A visit to the Museum is always an interesting way to pass some time but for the next month the SS "Great Britain" exhibition will certainly add to your enjoyment of Britannia House.

Stampeding dek hockey Buffalos

THE Russell Smith Memorial Trophy dek hockey action at the weekend saw just the one game, as the second hourly slot was a scheduled training, "come and have a go" hour, with yet more new faces picking up a hockey stick for the first time.

Prior to those honing their skills, was the small matter of the Buffalos taking on the table leaders and so far undefeated Panthers side. The Buffalos, who were not scheduled to play mid-week, showed their eagerness to start as the entire team was dressed and warming up 10 minutes prior to face-off. The Panthers who started with dynamic attacking forward Danny Biggs unavailable, still fielded a very capable and mobile team.

The Buffalos took an early lead as captain Grant Budd lost his footing during an attack and slid across the Panthers crease on his knees. He still managed to deke the puck around a defender and the goalie to put his team in the lead. The Buffalos extended their lead before Panthers' captain Roddy Cordeiro unleashed a nice wrist shot, beating the Buffalos defence and goalie.

The Panthers' luck began to turn when Ian France was awarded a two minute penalty for use of the shoulder in a tackle. The power play enabled the Buffalos to start to move the puck, shoot, catch the rebound and start over. The Panthers held up well considering the plethora of shots released as the extra Buffalo attacker was free to fire one-timer after one-timer. However, Ian's sin bin time was cut short after the Buffalos inevitably found the net. Both sides continued to find their target but the Panthers' lack of marking was evident, as at the break the score stood at five - two, to the Buffalos.

The Panthers emerged with a bit of a task ahead of them as they faced-off against an upbeat and confident Buffalos team. The Buffalos ability to change all players, compared to the Panthers available subs was to be an important advantage that was not lost on Grant's team. They moved the puck around confidently making the Panthers, who remained on the back foot more and more as time drew on, work much harder.

A time-out was called by the Panthers: the 60 second count down ticked away as goalies re-hydrated, subs came on and quick team talks were had. The Buffalos continued to find the net but there was a feeling of urgency emanating from the Panthers' side. As the game time evaporated the winning margin continued to grow.

Uncharacteristically the Buffalos kept the offensive pressure up jumping on loose pucks and letting the puck do the work, increasing their endurance and ability to finish off moves. Despite the best efforts of the table leaders, the Buffalos walked away with an important win and goal difference, as the score stood at 9 - 3 in their favour.

The Falkland Islands Government provides funding to help people in the Falkland Islands to conduct activities which benefit and enhance the environment. Anyone can apply for assistance from the Environmental Studies Budget, including owners and managers of land, non-government organisations and international scientists that conduct research and conservation activities in the Falkland Islands.

Projects eligible for ESB funding must assist in the management or enhancement of the biodiversity of the Falkland Islands. Priority will be given to initiatives addressing the key three themes of the 'Falkland Islands Biodiversity Strategy', which are: environmental research, on-ground action and education.

The ESB has a formal application and decision making process with the Environmental Committee responsible for the allocation of funds. This year all the available funds will be allocated in one round in July 2010.

The deadline for applications is Monday 21st June 2010. The application form can be obtained from the Environmental Planning Department. Applicants are encouraged to discuss proposed projects with the EPD Environmental Officer prior to submission and he can also help draft your application. Where possible, some level of co-funding or in-kind costs (e.g. labour, equipment) is desirable.

Mum is lucky to be alive after hit-and-run drama

WHEN Sandra Short eventually went to bed late on Saturday night, she was nursing a swollen head and a badly bruised arm. But she was happy to be alive, and safely home with her husband and children.

The 37-year-old mother-of-three was the victim of a hit-and-run motorist who left her dazed and shocked, lying on the side of Stanley Bypass just before midnight. As she lay there alone in the dark, a friend ran in tears for help, not knowing the extent of her injuries. Finally, a taxi driver came to her aid and ferried her to hospital.

It was a distressing night for her family, and Sandra is still recovering from her injuries. But even more worrying is the knowledge that somewhere out there is a motorist who could have killed her.

Sandra Short

Sandra had been invited to a party at the FIDF Hall and, after finishing her waitressing shift at the Malvina House Hotel, she picked up her friend Alba Bastias and left her car at home after collecting a bottle of wine. Sandra and Alba were approaching Stanley Services when she was hit.

"It was very busy that night but it was easy to see the cars coming because you could see the lights," Sandra told the Penguin News. "Then I felt a very big bang.

"It hit me on the right side, on my arm. I can't remember very well but I think it pushed Alba by the side as well, and then I fell down in the road.

"It came from behind and carried on. It was just so quick. After that I was on the floor. I couldn't get up. There was pain in my arm and my head. I felt really dizzy. Alba was shaking. She didn't know what to do.

"The only thing I remember is that Alba said to me 'are you ok, I'll go for help', and she was crying."

When she reached the hospital a nurse attended to her and rang the on-call doctor.

"They went inside and called the doctor and the doctor didn't want to come to see me," said Sandra. "They gave me some ibuprofen and paracetamol, and told me to go home. The police were very helpful, but even they were surprised the doctor wouldn't come out."

Husband Derek, 41, said he was appalled the doctor did not see his wife: "It was a road accident. And a head injury. I wouldn't be exaggerating if I said the lump on her head was the size of a hen egg. It was unreal. And it could have been worse.

"At least if the doctor had been there and seen her, then fine. But to make that judgment over the phone I find appalling."

Derek later lodged a complaint with Assembly Member Sharon Halford, who has passed on his concerns to Director of Health and Education David Jenkins.

Mr Jenkins said: "Mrs Short's condition was assessed following the normal head injury protocol.

"The on-call doctor confirmed the course of action that he felt was appropriate. Although she had a large bruise there were no other serious injuries and she was in a satisfactory condition to be allowed to go home.

"It was entirely reasonable that Mrs Short's condition was assessed by the senior staff nurse on duty and that appropriate clinical decisions were made."

Cllr Halford said she was horrified that a hit-and-run could happen in the Falklands: "It is shocking to think we have had that sort of incident in the first place."

Despite Sandra and Derek's traumatic experience, they made an emotional plea to the driver of the vehicle which struck her.

"I would say to the driver to have a little more conscience, think about what he's done," said Sandra.

"I had a bottle of wine in a bag and the bottle knocked against the car when it knocked me over, so he must have heard the noise.

"We all make mistakes, and if that night he was drunk or he was scared about what he'd done, he should realise. What happened could be worse, and he could do it to somebody else."

Derek said: "If anybody knows something please come forward with any information you may have, and don't withhold it."

Detective Sergeant Dave Street said: "We would urge the driver of the vehicle to come forward and make themselves known. If your readers can assist that would be very helpful."

OIL WELL SPUDDER * SOVIETS 'SPIED' ON TASK FORCE * BUDGET ANALYSIS

Penguin News

ONE of the really good things about teaching in a small community like the Falklands is that you get to see the end product in adulthood. I am very proud of most of the human "products" of Darwin Boarding School and am sure that Jan Cheek feels the same, sitting as she now does at the same council table as two of her former pupils: the Honourable Emma Edwards and the equally Honourable Glenn Ross.

There was a touch of teacherly pride in Cllr Cheek's commendation of the work done by Cllr Edwards at the UN's New Caledonia decolonisation seminar. I was in agreement, up to the point where Cllr Edwards' remarks about independence had me shouting at the radio.

New Caledonia enjoys a unique status: it has an increasingly autonomous local government called the Territorial Congress, which will be entitled to hold a referendum on full independence, anytime it chooses after 2014. Until then, New Caledonia remains part of the French Republic; its inhabitants are French citizens, carry French passports and take part in French elections. In the eighties, I once landed in the capital Noumea to find the airport crawling with French marines and helicopters. They were there to put down a revolt calling for independence.

At the time, I was on my way to the Republic of Kiribati (formerly the Gilbert Islands) which, though economically a basket case swarming with more aid agencies than a dog has fleas, gained independence from the UK in 1979, is now a full member of the Commonwealth of Nations, the IMF and the World Bank and, since 1999, has had its own seat at the United Nations.

My point is that self-determination takes different forms and can be difficult to understand. However, the natural aspiration of any separate people, which is what we have to convince the Argentines that we are according to Jan Cheek recently, must surely be independence, however far off or difficult to achieve it may seem.

In the case of the Falklands, it seems to me and to many others - but obviously not to Cllr Edwards speaking on our behalf - that the mere utterance of independence as the ultimate goal for the Falklands, could go a long way to achieve the magic of allowing the British Government, the Argentines and ourselves to be extricated from the trap of history without losing face.

Promoting a healthy view of democracy

COUNCILLOR Emma Edwards returned to the Falklands last Thursday after promoting the Islands' "healthy democracy" to a UN seminar in New Caledonia attended by delegates from around the world.

A key objective of the seminar was to help the Special Committee on Decolonisation - the "Committee of 24" - to assess progress towards decolonisation.

Although little progress on decolonisation had been made in the past ten years, with only the host territory expressing a wish to become a new nation, the occasion offered an opportunity for Cllr Edwards to re-emphasise the wishes of Falklands residents to an international audience.

She said Islanders had repeatedly expressed their firm view that they were content with their current status, and noted that for a variety of reasons the alternative options of full independence, free association or integration with an independent state were "not suitable" for the Islands.

Cllr Edwards told delegates: "We are happy with the status quo, and do not like being told by others what to do. The Falkland Islands are currently not ready for independence, but we do express our right of self-determination with almost all of the people of the Falkland Islands wishing to remain and enjoy our British Overseas Territory status."

Cllr Edwards also outlined key aspects of the Islands' "healthy democracy." She said these included the November election, the new Constitution of January 2009, and "enhanced local democracy, establishing a greater degree of internal self-government and providing mechanisms for transparency and accountability."

She said while the Falklands had, like elsewhere, been affected by the global financial crisis, its economy remained strong.

The seminar was held from May 18-20. On her journey home via London Cllr Edwards attended the State Opening of Parliament, together with Falkland Islands Government Representative Sukey Cameron, and a reception hosted by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

Child rape charge to be heard by Supreme Court

MATTHEW John Newton (23) on Wednesday appeared before court to face charges including rape, rape of a child under 13 and sexual activity with children. The offences were alleged to have taken place between May 2005 and September 2008. Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said the matter would be referred to the Supreme Court, and adjourned the case until July 28. Mr Newton was released on conditional bail.

Two offences of common assault, committed against his former partner, cost Delroy Kevin Leo (20) a total of £980 in the Senior Magistrate's Court on Wednesday. Mr Leo was fined £300 for the first assault and £500 for the second, both occurring during April. Mr Trevaskis warned Mr Leo he had narrowly avoided a custodial sentence. He ordered him to pay £100 compensation to the victim and £80 prosecution costs.

Adrian Minnell, who had previously denied drink driving, said during a pre-trial review on Tuesday he might be forced to represent himself, as he had been unable to obtain legal representation. Mr Trevaskis adjourned the matter until today.

Deminers prepare to farewell the Islands

MORE than six months since the sight of groups of Zimbabwean deminers strolling the streets of Stanley or shopping in the West Store had become commonplace, the first demining project in the Falklands since 1982 is now over.

Operations manager Roger Gagen of BACTEC (Battle Area Clearance, Training, Equipment and Consultancy) says all the Lebanese deminers returned home to warmer climes in April, as did the majority of the Zimbabweans.

Four Zimbabwean deminers and Roger himself remained to complete the location and clearance of the final panel of 16 anti-tank mines at Surf Bay.

This work was carried out using a combination of an armoured excavator, operated by Bruce Humphreys, and manual clearance techniques using mine detectors operated by the Zimbabwean deminers.

The last mine was finally located and successfully cleared last Thursday.

Also remaining in the Islands but due to leave on June 11 has been Robin Swanson, Director of the Falkland Islands Demining Programme Office (DPO).

The DPO has been responsible for overseeing BACTEC's work and testing to ensure it conformed with rigorous international mine action standards.

As Robin explained to the Penguin News, the separation of the company doing the clearance from the company ensuring compliance and quality was normal procedure in commercial demining. As BACTEC has finished the clearance of each of the four task sites, they have been handed over to DPO for quality assurance checking before being handed back to the Falkland Islands Government, guaranteed mine and ordnance free.

Goose Greeners and deminers after removing minefield fence

Robin said the environmental aspects of the demining programme had been a major concern of his office, which had worked closely with the Environmental Planning Department to devise a remediation plan for the Sapper Hill and Surf Bay sites.

Three separate approaches were tried, with the aim of finding the best method of returning the disturbed ground to a condition where nature would do the rest.

On the Surf Bay minefield, they had been keen not to break the dunes if possible and, although the final panel had been close to the fence, they managed to avoid breaking through into the beach area.

A total of 190 recorded mines were located and disposed of at Sapper Hill, as well as two British cluster "bomblets." At Goose Green and Fox bay no mines were found but the clearance operation had proved the sites to be ordnance free.

At Surf Bay which, with more than 1,000 anti-tank and anti-personnel mines, was one of the most heavily mined areas resulting from the Argentine occupation, some of the mines were found buried up to 4m deep in the sand. Should there be future demining operations, it is reassuring that the records made by the Argentine forces who laid the mines have been accurate.

Speaking as a former Royal Engineer, who has both cleared mines and laid them in the past, Mr Swanson said any military force laying mines did so expecting they would themselves have to lift them at some stage.

He discounted as highly improbable the rumours that mines were scattered out of aircraft. Apart from any other considerations, he said, there would be no guarantee that they would land the right way up to be effective.

Roger Gagen described the project as an overall success, with a number of challenges, including the weather, overcome with the help of FIG, colleagues on the Islands and especially the community, who he praised for their hospitality towards the Zimbabwean and Lebanese deminers.

The deminers, he said, adapted well to the Falklands environment and worked assiduously to complete the project.

A final public confidence demonstration will be staged at Surf Bay at 12.15pm today.

Travel dates

COUNCILLOR Roger Edwards and FIG London Representative Sukey Cameron will attend the Liberal Democratic Conference in Liverpool from September 18-22 and will be joined by Cllr Jan Cheek for the Labour and Conservative conferences. The Commonwealth Parliamentary Association meeting in Kenya from September 10-19 will now be attended by Cllr Dick Sawle and not Cllr Bill Luxton as previously announced.

Tourist guide

THE Falkland Islands Tourist Board has posted a copy of the new Falkland Islands Accommodation Guide to every PO Box in Stanley. The guide features accommodation options in the East and West and outer Islands, as well as camping information. It is also available at the Jetty Visitor Information Centre and at www.falklandislands.com.

C&W refund

CABLE and Wireless is awarding a one-off compensation payment to broadband customers following the recent "intermittent internet fault" identified as originating within the equipment situated in the UK, and now resolved. All customers will be given a 10 per cent refund on their monthly package charge for the coming month.

Next steps

PETROLEUM Geology workshops will be held next week by Dr Phil Richards of the British Geological Survey. Aimed at non-geologists, the workshops will focus on the next steps for the Falklands hydrocarbons industry. All are welcome to attend. For details contact Pippa Christie on tel 27322 or at pchristie@mineralresources.gov.fk.

FLH wool sales

ALL the FLH wool has now been cored and test results are awaited for bales which have been interlotted with other farns. Apart from a lot of 23 bales of hogget wool, the remaining wools are all low value oddments. Total gross value of all unsold wools is estimated at £20,000 and wool sales to date have grossed £984,000.

Appeal fund

CHILE Earthquake Appeal funds totalling more than £26,600 are to be directed towards building 800 houses in the stricken town of Lolol in Colchagua Province. Fund organiser Celia Short thanked Islanders for their "fantastic" support and said she would report back on how the funds were being spent.

Rockhopper holds fire on results of latest exploration

INVESTORS waiting breathlessly for an evaluation of the size and quality of the oil discovery made in Falkland Islands waters by exploration company Rockhopper may have to wait a little longer.

On May 19 the company announced its Sea Lion well had been successfully suspended for future testing and announced that results would be available within 10-15 days.

Wednesday's trading saw Rockhoppers's share price take a switchback ride before levelling 10% down. The company said it was aware of significant share price movement, but knew of no reason for it. They blamed "air transport logistics difficulties for a delay in the analysis of oil quality."

However, the directors said, they had no reason at present to believe the outcome of the analysis would not meet their expectations with regard to potential resources.

The report added that a sample of oil from the shallowest oil sand in the well was subjected to a preliminary test in Stanley, which indicated a medium grade crude, broadly in line with the directors' expectations.

Meanwhile, the Ocean Guardian rig has passed into the hands of BHP Billiton and has been towed to the East Falklands Basin. The new well, Toroa, is described as having the potential to be a big discovery, which could yield up to 1.7 billion barrels of oil.

BHP Billiton's partner in this well, and the original owner of Licence PL15, in which it now has a 49% interest, is Falkland Oil and Gas Ltd (FOGL), who announced that the Toroa F61/5-1 exploration well was spudded on Monday.

The well is being drilled to an estimated target depth of 2,700m. Drilling is expected to take about 35 days and the company says a further announcement will be made once it is completed.

How budget hits families

LAST week we offered some very immediate calculations on the effect budget proposals would have on families, which were kindly sent in by a reader.

As might be expected due to the extreme haste with which they were prepared, a more leisurely examination has shown some errors and some miscalculation, but the general premise remains the same, namely that the fiscal elements of this budget favour most the higher-earning sectors of this community.

While there will be a delay before some of the elements of the new budget will come into play, the assumptions on which our revised calculations are based deal only with those elements which have to do with income tax, where the threshold has been dropped from £14,000 to £12,000, but rates remain the same, the re-imposed Medical Services Levy at 1% of gross income, Family Allowances at £60 per month, but not mean-tested and now taxable, and contributions towards retirement pensions (RPC), which have gone up from £12.50 per week to £13.50 per week. We have ignored the increased service charge as this is more or less universal, except for pensioners who only pay half.

On this basis, we find that a couple, who both work, earning £45,000 gross, will be £1,041 or 2.3% worse off, while a similar couple earning £61,000 between them will lose only £428 or 0.7% of their present earnings.

Worst off of all, in percentage terms, if we survey only families of four, are the couple earning £31,000 with one parent staying home to look after the children. They will end up £946 or 3.1% worse off. If both parents work, earning £31,000 between them, their reduction on present net earnings is £848 or 2.7%.

It would seem also that taking away the means test for Family Allowances, but making it taxable, may be a bit of a two-edged sword.

By our calculations, a working couple with no children eligible for child allowance, who earn £31,000 between them, end up only £14 better off per year than a couple with the same earnings receiving Family Allowance of £702 per year for their two children.

Talk of the town

Penguin News Vox Pop
First impressions of last week's Budget

Janet Robertson

My initial reaction was that I was pleased with the introduction of the Medical Services Levy now that they've finally seen how easy it is to make it appear as income in the Medical Budget. I am unclear about the Family Allowance. People like me who had lost it are now going to get it back and be taxed on it, while those people who had it because they needed it more are now going to be paying tax on it and be worse off.

Steve Pointing

On the whole I thought it was fairly well thought out. We always knew it was going to be a difficult thing as it has been elsewhere in the world.

Eric Goss

Haven't paid too much attention to it; they are always chiselling a bit here and a bit there. Keith Padgett is a crafty operator. I'm not too happy about the double whammy of MSL, particularly if we have to pay for prescriptions on top of it.

Alastair Jacobsen

I was a bit disappointed at the reduction in the tax-free allowance. I was also against the introduction of MSL. If we need to raise extra money for health it should go on income tax.

Geoff Pring

It was much as I expected. I was pleased that tobacco went up more than alcohol because I don't smoke.

Andy Brownlee

MLAs were between a rock and a hard place and did well to get the deficit down to around a million. There was a bit of giving with one hand and taking away with the other, but they did a decent job. I was astounded when the MSL was taken away.

Provided there's not a big administration cost, and the money goes to the hospital rather than into the big pot, people won't have a problem with paying it.

Bill Kidd

I think all in all it's reasonably fair. I'm against MSL. If we need to raise more money for health it should come from tax.

Keith Knight

FIGAS freight rates going up along with the recent increases in Concordia Bay is a pain. It will now cost me £110 to fly to town and back and the ferry is £70 instead of £50. It all adds up and isn't really in line with trying to keep people in Camp.

Andrea Clausen

I think they did well to almost balance the budget and keep the deficit to a minimum. It's unfortunate, however, that the least well-paid will suffer the most.

They pulled more out of the bag than I thought they would. As a retired senior citizen, it seems excellent to me.

GOVERNMENT plans to spend about £42.5 million on our behalf this year. If you wonder where it all goes, read on...

Taxing time for every one of us

I NOTE you made no mention of the 1.5 per cent proposed Employment Tax on Employers in your budget proposals review (Penguin News, May 28).

Call it what one likes - a tax on wages paid by employers is a tax on employment and nothing less, whatever it may be for.

Of course we as people need to contribute towards health care - user pays. Therefore I hope by the end of the budget debate it will be altered so that we as individuals do all the contributing - be it in a percentage of our incomes and/or some direct charges like prescriptions, etc (with relevant groups exempted).

Ideally every adult, whether in work or not, could pay an initial sum of say £5 per week and then an earnings percentage afterwards.

UK has deliberately shied away from a proposed employment tax increase plan, as they realise you need to create jobs to move the economy forward. Tax jobs and employers look to employ fewer people - not more.

Employment taxes hit the primary producers hard. They have less impact on say retailers and wholesalers. It hits hotels and restaurants who have a large wage cost as part of the product you buy. They need lots of staff to produce the beds or meals, etc.

It hits the primary production industry very hard, as they also need lots of labour input to grow/produce the product, and here they are limited: fisheries are mostly offshore so out of the tax reach; Camp agriculture and FIMCo are already struggling financially at best; market gardening - ditto above - and the biggest cost of producing crops is in labour.

POSSIBLY the only surprise about the budget is that it came as a surprise to anyone.

For those employers complaining about the reintroduction of a medical services levy, I can give an assurance that it was the least grim of all the options that we considered.

No-one took the decision without careful thought after weighing up the advice received.

There are no miracle fixes for the economic problems that we share with most of the world.

While the continuing search for a commercial oil find is encouraging, even if it happens, we are years from any significant boost to the economy.

Missing Links

Those who can will have to pass that increase in costs onto the local public - so we get inflation and back to square one.

Those who cannot pass on the costs will have to consider reducing staff and downsizing to just a basic core business.

I am all for contributing to our health care, but let's have it done by the users - us as individuals.

Branching out to MacAskills

I WOULD be delighted if you would publish the following in your paper. I am looking for descendants of George and Barbara Mackay.

George and Barbara arrived from Scotland in the late 1800s. They had 12 children and it appears the seven eldest stayed in the Falklands when the parents and the four younger children migrated to Australia.

Only three married: Donald, David and Eliza Jane. David had two daughters and two sons, all of whom married and have descendants living in the Falklands.

I have been researching the MacAskill family tree. John and Kate had four sons born in the Falklands: Peter Kenneth, Donald Ewen, Bannytine and Robert. Their eldest son Jack (John) was born at Kyles Scalpay, Harris, Scotland.

Jack married Jane Eliza MacKay in May 1911. After they married they moved to Goring House, Chartres. Jane Eliza was fondly known as Mrs Mack or Lottie.

I have been receiving wonderful information on Mrs Mack from Tansy at the Archives Department, and certificates from Carole Goss in Births, Deaths and Marriages. My Scottish cousins and myself have been most grateful for all this information.

My father Donald Ewen and his brothers always spoke fondly of the years in the Falklands, and I would love to hear from any descendants.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I hope that there is not the same uninformed international press hyperbole at the end of each exploratory well drilled as there was at the end of the first two. Apart from being misleading, it over-excites our acquisitive neighbours.

Budget now settled, after a process lasting months and involving many days of discussions, meetings and presentations by treasury, policy officers, directors and groups seeking subventions, there is a brief respite before the whole process recommences. My next task, apart from normal meetings, is wading through the latest draft report on the deep water port received a couple of weeks ago.

I had a strong burst of déjà vu as I put it into the "to do after the budget" heap on the study floor. It is not the first such volume I've handled and I've a feeling we're still some way from a satisfactory outcome in terms of funding as well as choice of site. Someone recently suggested to me that the Assembly policy of localisation of FIG posts is regarded by some as being critical of contract officers.

This is not the case, but localisation is a perfectly valid long term policy for any country.

We buy in expertise and skills that we do not have, but must in parallel develop home grown expertise and skills.

This week a small working group starts work on a policy for adult education which, with more coherent policies across further and higher education, should ensure sound investment in the future.

Writer claims '82 ships sunk with aid of Russians

A RUSSIAN author claims the sinking by Argentina of HMS Sheffield, HMS Coventry and the Atlantic Conveyor during the 1982 war was achieved with assistance from Soviet satellites in orbit over the South Atlantic.

Journalist and researcher Sergey Brilev says Russia launched a Kosmos 1365 satellite on May 15 1982, positioning it over the South Atlantic to provide strategic information to the Argentines about the British Task Force.

Brilev cites top Soviet military officers from the eighties – General Nikolai Leonov, who was then head of KGB analytical services, and General Valentin Varennikov, first deputy chief of Soviet forces in Moscow – as confirming the provision of regular intelligence aid to the Argentines.

He argues Moscow assisted the Argentines and their most "anti-communist" leader General Leopoldo Galtieri, in spite of the risks of a world conflict because of Soviet support in a war involving a NATO member. The detection of the Sheffield by Neptune aircraft, and its subsequent sinking by Mirages and Exocet missiles, claims Brilev, was "too patriotic" an explanation by the Argentines, given the Neptune was already old and had serious maintenance problems.

"I'm convinced the strategic information for the sinking of the Sheffield was supplied by the Soviets," he insists in his book, "Fidel, Football and the Malvinas."

Brilev, son of a former Russian diplomat in trade affairs, spent most of his youth in Latin America, Cuba, Ecuador and Uruguay.

Currently deputy director of Rossiya Television, RTR, he says it was intriguing that the launch of the Kosmos satellite occurred at the height of the war and a month and a half after Argentina landed in the Falklands.

And he says Soviet support was not limited to satellite intelligence. Brilev states that the Soviets used TU-95 intelligence gathering aircraft to follow the British Task Force as it sailed south in an area from the Gulf of Biscay to the Equator.

He says Soviet Colonel Georgiy Bulbenkov confirmed his participation as a pilot in these operations, sometimes flying as low as 40 metres above the Royal Navy vessels.

In an effort to pinpoint the powerbrokers behind the

Sergey Brilev

Russian spying missions, Brilev pursued Mikhail Gorbachov, who in the eighties was a member of the Communist Party Political Bureau which made all major strategic decisions.

Gorbachov, however, denied the claim, saying: "There was never a decision from the Central Committee to collaborate with the Argentine military Junta."

But Brilev concludes that in the early eighties the Soviet Union power structure was already under strain, and the strategic aid was a decision of the generals at military command level as a logical support for "the enemy of my enemy."

He recalls that only two countries did not join the 1979 US-sponsored international embargo on the Soviet Union. They were Argentina and Uruguay and, says Brilev: "The military were very thankful for that."

He says also the Falklands conflict will be remembered as "the first armed incident of a major dispute in Antarctica."

After visits to the Argentine, Chilean, British and Russian Antarctic institutes, Brilev suggests: "In a couple of decades we'll be facing a situation where the traditional sources of minerals and energy will be exhausted – and the last great important reserves are in the Antarctic continent."

"That is why the Falklands, as I see it, will be considered a first major conflict over Antarctica."

"The Falklands, after all, are the natural and privileged gate to Antarctica."

Old boys reunited at Luxton anniversary

WHILE the Stanley Boys' Brigade may be a thing of the past, having been supplanted in recent years by the Boy Scouts and the Sea Cadets, its members live on and treasure its memory.

In Stanley former members hold an annual dinner in December, which normally attracts some dozen members, but as organiser and ex-Boys' Brigade member Willie Bowles suggests, there are probably more former cadets living in New Zealand and Australia.

Arnold Betts, along with Ron Morrison and Ron Harries, one of three members from 1944-5 now living in New Zealand, sent us this photograph of former members taken at John and Gennie Luxton's Golden Wedding held last December in Auckland. On behalf of the group, Arnold wishes good health to all former members.

Belles of the bags: the Conservation crew promotes its message

No excuses not to go green

FALKLANDS Conservation, in association with retail outlets around Stanley, is continuing the campaign trail to try to reduce the number of plastic bags used in the Islands.

In recent months stores have had a variety of schemes to encourage us to use canvas, cotton and jute shopping bags rather than "grab the plastic" and there have been great improvements. But as a final push to get shoppers into the Bag for Life habit once and for all Falklands Conservation is launching a reward scheme to give green shoppers a pat on the back.

It's a simple scheme. Cut out the reward card from the Penguin News (above right) or collect one from the store when you do your shopping and each time you shop with a Bag for Life you will be given a sticker. Collect 12 stickers and enter your reward card into the prize draw to win a selection of Falklands Conservation goodies at the end of the month.

A very generous member of the community, who wishes to remain anonymous, has kick-started this campaign by purchasing 200 Falklands Conservation jute shopping bags to donate to members of the Watch Group and families at the Infant and Junior School. Many thanks to him for caring enough about the environment to do so. This means there really are no excuses for us not getting into the shopping bag habit.

Ali Liddle

Conservation tips:

- Keep a shopping bag in the car in case you need to pop to the shops at the last minute.
- If you do need a plastic bag remember they can be used again you know!
- Think before you grab a bag. Do you really need a bag to carry your sandwich and drink the 15 metres from the shop to your car?

Did you know?

13 BILLION plastic bags are given away in shops each year in the UK. That's 216 for every person in the country. If the statistics were similar in the Falklands our total would be 648,000. However if you go to three different outlets each day to do your shopping and take a plastic bag from each shop you would use 1,095 bags a year, taking our Islands total to 3,285,000!

In India plastic bag pollution is such a problem that people can be jailed for up to seven years for using a plastic carrier bag. For every square mile of ocean there are 46,000 plastic bags floating on the surface.

In South Africa there are so many plastic bags littering the countryside they have become known as the National Flower.

A Minke whale was washed up on a beach in France and was found to have over 2lbs of plastic bags in its stomach.

Walkers and supporters in the Town Hall car park after completing the night-long marathon

Jackie Summers, Louise Taylor

Midnight madness for charity

ELEVEN tired and wet marathon walkers finished the gruelling feat on Saturday morning, less than eight hours after they started. The Midnight Marathon, organised by local accountancy firm Wilkins Kennedy, raised approximately £2,000.

This impressive total will be donated towards the charity Aspire and the Stephen Jaffray memorial fund. The UK offices of Wilkins Kennedy set themselves a target of raising £25,000 for Aspire (a spinal rehabilitation charity) in 2010. So far they have reached £15,721, with the welcome addition of the money raised in the Falkland Islands.

The 15 walkers started outside the Town Hall at midnight to walk the usual marathon route, accompanied initially by a fair amount of sleet. Organiser Karen Lee said: "The weather was absolutely shocking when we started. The MET man at quarter past ten had 55 knots and sleet – by the time we started I think it got to Stanley, so it was pretty ghastly. He did assure me it would get better though, which it did."

Walking along the By-Pass road, very early in the morning

"It wasn't too bad at all, until probably the last two miles. My hips hurt a lot and I was possibly quite bored of walking. The most common comment of all the walkers is: 'Never again!'"

The group had support drivers for the route, who delivered drinks and snacks. "We couldn't have done it without them," Karen said. They were Nikki Buxton, Keith Biles, Mike Summers, Stephanie Middleton (who only had about half an hour's sleep all night) and John Birmingham who made the group hot pasties and hot buns at four in the morning.

Karen said she would like to thank the drivers, Stanley Services and FIGAS for letting them use their facilities, Government House and Synergy for donating the full cooked breakfast, Nikki Buxton and Greta Skene who cooked it, and Stacey Budd, who started and didn't finish due to injury, but helped with the breakfast.

The hardy souls who braved the 26.2 mile walk along with Karen, were Sharon Gilbert, Angie Harris, Carol Peck, Jackie Summers, Sarah Clement, Tracey Clarke, Sally Ellis, Miranda McKee, Louise Taylor, Andy Brownlee, Helena Shillitoe, and Stacey Budd, with Charlotte Ready and Lisa Ryan from Wilkins Kennedy in the UK.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross Sound ferry main operational area
146.625.....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report
27th May 2010

Ian Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands

The AWEX rose this week in both Australian and US Dollar terms which is good because it indicates a halt in the slow but steady drop over the last 6 weeks. Currency exchange rates are very volatile and due to changes in the Aussie/Pound rates the market indicator came down solidly to 504 p/kg. If trying to forecast the wool market was not hard enough, factoring in what is going to happen to exchange rates makes it even more complex at the moment.

The picturesque Welsh countryside, an excellent setting

Having a break next to the ET James support van

Winging their way to the roughest terrain in Wales

In deep water...

AN impressive portfolio of gold medals, bronze medals, wins, second places and team wins has inspired a second generation of motocross heroes to travel to Wales this summer to try and emulate the successes of Dereck Jaffray, Jonny Summers, Jan Clarke, Andrew Alazia, Shane Blackley, Arthur Turner and Andrew Newman.

Dereck Jaffray, our most successful rider, has an impressive two golds, one bronze, numerous firsts, seconds, thirds and fourths in his international racing career; in fact, Jonny and Dereck at one time were the twelfth and fourteenth fastest in the UK respectively.

Andrew Alazia with a first, Jonny Summers with "Best Overseas Rider" and all the other riders involved with "Best Team" wins etc. It is not surprising that another generation want a piece of the action.

Jay and Sean Moffatt will be joining Dereck and Shane this year to race in the Welsh Two Day International Enduro. One of the most arduous events in the UK enduro racing calendar, the competition attracts top riders from all over the world and is an event that lends itself for Falkland Islanders to do well in.

The two day trail takes place in Llandrindod Wells on the 24th and 25th of June, riding through forests, swamps, steep mountain climbs, rivers and over 150 miles (per lap) of the roughest terrain that Wales has to offer .....that's quite tame for our lads then!

With a lot of help from the local off road bike shop, ET James will again be on hand if our boys get into trouble with their bikes, arranging spares, fuel and expert advice. This close relationship goes back to 1994 and continues to the present day.

A few supporters will be winging their way from the Islands to support the riders, but if there are any readers in the UK at the time, get to mid Wales and wave those flags!

Team Tranquil workshops a big hit on the West

WINTER can be a miserable time, but not when members of Team Tranquil are around to help, and the group's "workshops on the West" are proving a popular way to beat those winter blues.

Carol Peck took very successful yoga classes in Hill Cove last month, with ten people benefiting from the sessions and having great fun at the same time.

Although not on the West, guidance on silk painting from Karen Armstrong-Ford at the Goose Green school yesterday also was well received.

Next on the horizon will be Reiki healing at Hill Cove, led by Jane Evans who is a Reiki Master.

She will hold the workshop over the weekend of June 18-20.

If you are interested in joining the group please get in touch with Shelley Nightingale on 41194 for more information and to put your name down.

Derek Howatt

You'll be able to dance the night away if you join the Scottish Dancing workshop to be held at Fox Bay from July 16-18, coinciding with the two-nighter at the settlement. Derek and Sue Howatt are dab hands at getting everyone up on the dance floor and are looking forward to coming over. Also in the pipeline for Fox Bay over the coming months are classes on water colour painting by Richard Cockwell and woodwork skills by Roger Edwards. Details of these sessions will be announced in due course.

The Team Tranquil programme is an ideal opportunity to get together with friends, learn new skills and have fun all at the same time, reinforcing the message that it is just as important to have good mental health as it is good physical health, and there are many ways to stop from getting bored or feeling isolated.

THE recently opened McKay Close Playpark is up and swinging, offering youngsters such as Fergus Crowie, Tyrese Caballos and Lachlan Crowie (above) their own recreation space in East Stanley. The equipment is mainly aimed at children from 5-11, although there also are toddler swings for ages 2-5. The Municipal Section of the Public Services Department will in spring install rubber matting and picnic tables, and carry out a little more landscaping.

Paul Lewis, presenting prizes on behalf of FIC, and Lenny Ford

A six-dart leg by Lenny Ford

WITH some big shocks in the early rounds, the FIC Darts Tournament held in the Town Hall on Saturday had a good turnout.

In the men's competition and through to the last eight was Chris Lloyd who beat David Ford 2-0.

Marvyn Ford went through to the next round after winning 2-0 against Alan Bonner and Richard Bonner won against Toot Ford with a score of 2-1. Mark Pollard's good run came to an end losing 2-0 to Colin Smith.

In the semi-final, Chris Lloyd beat Ian Jordan 3-1, while Richard Bonner lost 3-0 to Colin Smith.

Colin went on to beat Chris 4-1, to take away the first place prize in this year's FIC Darts Tournament.

In the quarter-finals for the ladies Ali Dodd proved too good for Avril Bonner with a score of 2-0.

Jenny McKay beat fellow Pale Maiden Cathy Jacobson (Snr) 2-0, and Corina Ashbridge lost 2-1 to Nora Smith. Jane Clement then beat Lynda Buckland 2-1.

Moving on to the semis, Ali Dodd won 2-0 against Jenny McKay, and Jane Clement won 2-1 against Nora Smith, setting up an all Wild Gunners final.

Ali Dodd eventually beat her teammate 3-2.

Along with some prizes presented from last season, and this year's FIC Darts Tournament victors, there was one more trophy on the cards. Lenny Ford was presented with the "Lenny Ford six-dart trophy," sponsored by FIC.

It was awarded for the six-dart leg Lenny achieved last season, an incredibly rare and impressive achievement.

First place lady Ali Dodd

First place man Colin Smith

Penguins on the slippery slope

ONCE used to winning, it seems the Penguins are now in the middle of a losing streak, with a 7-3 defeat by the Buffalos on Sunday.

There were signs of the old Penguins as they took the lead early with a lovely strike from Lennie and they continued to pressure the Buffalos. The Evans boys looked lively and were enjoying a lot of the play as they took on the Buffalos defence with ease, but could not find the killer pass to set up the forwards.

Eventually the Buffalos started to get into the game and equalised from a Barlow long shot as the Pen's keeper went into a coughing fit! This goal seemed to rally the Buffs as they pushed and worked hard to create plays with quick passing and one time shots.

The Pens were on the back foot and soon found themselves 2-1 down, mainly due to Budd's desire to win and the Buffalos stick skills. The Penguins, however, found some energy in reserve and fired in a few shots with Duane Evans hitting the post and his brother Kyran testing Duncan in goal, but unfortunately they could not get the equaliser.

Daille and Goss continued to press and fired in the odd long shot until finally Lennie again popped up to score the Pen's second goal of the game. This did not last long as the Buffalos once again, with their strongest line-up of Budd, Barlow and Rendell, linked up to score their third. The half-time score stood at 3-2 to the Buffalos.

The second half began with the Penguins playing well in flurries, and the Buffalos soaking up the pressure and hitting on the counter attack. With the Penguin's goaltender suffering from flu and outfielders nursing hangovers from Saturday night's darts tournament, they were not going to get much out of this game.

However, nothing could be taken away from the Buffalos who were tactically perfect with McLean, Miller and Ceballos soaking up Penguin's pressure before unleashing the Budd, Barlow and Rendell, who dominated every time they were fielded.

Goals galore went in as the Buffalos easily broke up the Penguins defence, slotting one-timers past Morrison, left isolated by his defence, to run up a 7-3 win.

With the Buffalos now three games unbeaten and first in the league, it would take some very good team performances to knock them off the top. The Penguins must now look to claim a much needed morale boosting win before the bottom of the table starts to look all too familiar once again.

Grades awarded to Karate students

THE adrenalin was flowing and the atmosphere was a little tense at the IJS Hall on Friday, as the junior karate club students proved that they had mastered their syllabus and could perform their kihon (basic blocks and attacks), kata (sequence or form) and kumite (sparring) successfully to achieve their next grade.

Supported by their families all students performed well on the evening. Students who did not attempt a grading this time can look forward to another opportunity to grade on Saturday June 26 at 2pm in the IJS Hall.

Later in the year the club will see the return of Chief Instructor Dave Wilkins. This year Dave will be accompanied by his partner and fellow instructor, 4th Dan Lauren Frearson. Lauren has extensive experience teaching junior students and will bring those skills to the Falklands. Lauren has also been awarded sportswoman of the year in Leicester among her previous achievements.

Dave and Lauren will be teaching the youngsters from the Rainbows about personal safety. They will also have more training sessions with the students at FICS and will have further self defence training with the FIDE.

As always there will be lots of training sessions for the Karate Club students, with a chance to grade and hopefully time for a competition too. Please check the website www.falklandskarate.com for updated information later in the year.

Karate is a great way of keeping fit and learning valuable skills of self discipline and self defence. It is a suitable sport for both boys and girls of all ages.

Karen Rimicans

Grades awarded to students:

9th Kyu (orange belt) Kirsty Lewis, Alison Short and her son Thomas Short.

8th Kyu (red belt) Craig Lewis and Dwight Joshua

7th Kyu (yellow belt) Gemma Webb, Carly East and Nikita Whistler

6th Kyu (green belt) Glyn Morrison

Police chief praised for softly softly approach

RECENTLY appointed Police Chief Gary Finchett has earned glowing praise from the councillor appointed to oversee the Community Safety portfolio.

Earlier this year Mr Finchett took overall responsibility for Police, Customs and Immigration, Fire and Rescue and the FIDF, as the government's new Director of Community Safety.

And he believes both police presence on the streets and work behind the scenes are reaping dividends.

In a report to mark his first five months in the job, he said: "Already, Heads of Service have found substantial efficiency savings without reducing the level of service provided to the public, and this work needs to continue to ensure we are as effective as we can be, bearing in mind public finances are extremely tight."

Mr Finchett said his priorities included increasing public confidence in the police, responding effectively to people when they were in need, preventing and investigating crime and disorder, protecting vulnerable people and effectively managing serious incidents.

Police officers, he said, were focusing on reducing the number of serious and fatal road traffic collisions, reducing crime and repeat incidents of anti-social behaviour and increasing the volume of crimes detected.

He also urged the public to help police and other emergency services make the Islands even safer by reporting crime and suspicious incidents, and by taking personal responsibility for their own safety and that of others.

This included driving at slower speeds and wearing a seatbelt at all times, enjoying alcohol responsibly, letting someone know when travelling in remote areas, and carrying some means of communication where practicable.

To boldly go: demining colleagues walk the former minefield at Surf Bay, now cleared of more than 1,000 mines as part of a six-month demining programme across the Islands. See story on page 4

"People here feel safe and have every right to do so," said Mr Finchett.

"Serious crime is very rare and, with the support of the community, we identify and deal with offenders quickly. However, there can be no room for complacency regarding community safety."

Much of his efforts have focused also on restoring confidence among police officers and staff who, he admitted, have "had some knocks" in recent times.

He told the Penguin News yesterday: "It has been mainly about engaging the staff in the things we are doing. They know how to do the job better than I."

"I think it's been about providing strong leadership and setting strong expectations of them. It's about vocation of service. They want to serve and protect the community."

"It's about restoring their pride and enhancing their confidence. It's about trust, and we have to earn that."

He also emphasised the need for the public to assist the police, not only through reporting crime, but also by getting to know his officers and staff, and discussing general issues of concern.

"People will always ring the police when they are in need," he said. "But I want them to ring us when they don't need to. We want to foster that trust. It seems at the minute to be working well."

Cllr Gavin Short said: "In his own very quiet way Gary has transformed the Royal Falkland Islands Police into a happy and fully-functioning unit which is visible and approachable."

"I am also very impressed at how quickly Gary has got a handle on the functioning of the other three departments for which he has responsibility, although I am pleased to say that in each case he has been fortunate to take on well run departments headed by dedicated staff."

Prior to joining the Falkland Islands Government, Mr Finchett served for 31 years as a police officer in the Cheshire Constabulary in the UK, rising to the rank of Chief Superintendent as Area Commander for Warrington, Widnes and Runcom.

Now living in East Stanley with his partner Alison, a nurse, he said: "You can see why so many people choose to live, visit and work in these wonderful Islands."

"There is, literally, nowhere else like it on earth. People are extremely resilient, self sufficient and look out for each other here."

He said he would continue his visits to isolated settlements and would be interested to hear everyone's views on "what we can do together to make the Falkland Islands even safer."

Tony Curran

DO you agree with Cllr Short's assessment? Are you satisfied with the level of service of the police? How can the police further lift public confidence? Write to editor@penguinnews.co.fk

THE so-called diddle-dee telegraph isn't always as informative as it pretends to be. Nor are some of its proponents as informed as they assume.

Baseless rumours predictably flew as soon as news broke of a hit-and-run on Stanley Bypass late last Saturday night. Some leapt to the conclusion that the culprit must have been an outsider because, in their opinion, no "local" would be so heartless as to drive away.

When we interviewed the victim and she spoke of her distress at not being attended to by the on-call doctor, the diddle-dee perpetrators were at it again. This time they claimed the on-call doctor could not have been an Islander because only a "local" doctor would care sufficiently to attend to a patient out of hours.

Such comments are both ridiculous and callous. And they serve only to drive deeper the nasty wedge which some narrow-minded Islanders seem determined to perpetuate.

At the centre of this incident was a couple who were extremely distraught (not that they contributed to any of these remarks). Nevertheless, as the Director of Health and Education assured us, all relevant and appropriate hospital procedures were followed.

Some people may not agree with those procedures, but none of them was ignored. And, of course, everyone in the Falklands would dearly like to see more doctors employed. But that is a different issue altogether.

What this particular incident serves to highlight is not merely the shock of a hit-and-run, nor the inevitable anxiety of the victim or her family. It is sadly the knee-jerk reaction of those who assume they know best, yet rely on nothing more than their own flawed suppositions.

As I see it, those who jump to ill-informed conclusions, those who cast judgment on events upon which they have no direct knowledge, and those who spread malice with no consideration to those whose ears their rumours will inevitably reach, perform a gross disservice to these Islands.

The diddle-dee telegraph is a potent tool. It is usually reasonably accurate, and it can also be remarkably helpful. But when it serves merely as a portal for thoughtless and misinformed comment, directed at individuals or non-Islander groups all too often used as colloquial punchbags, it really should carry a warning: ignorant gossip can damage the good health of this community.

OAS hears bid on sovereignty

THE Argentine sovereignty claim over the Falkland Islands was once again raised at the 40th General Assembly of the Organisation of American States (OAS), which was held over two days in Peru and finished on Tuesday.

The OAS is made up of representatives of all the states of the Americas, with the exception of Honduras. The General Assembly, which was attended by the foreign ministers of the 35 or so participating states, including Hillary Clinton for the USA, adopted a lengthy declaration, designed to commit the member states to peace, security and cooperation.

At the fourth and last plenary session, Argentina's Foreign Minister Jorge Taiana said: "The Organisation of American States has considered this question to be a subject of permanent hemispheric interest," adding that the OAS had "reaffirmed the need of the governments of the Argentine Republic and the United Kingdom to renew as soon as possible the negotiations on the dispute of sovereignty." He concluded: "Never has Argentina ceased to express the will to negotiate to find a peaceful solution."

Curiously, from the point of view of the Falkland Islands, and in the light of recent Argentine attempts to curtail our economic activity, Article 19 of the OAS Charter, which was reaffirmed in Lima, "establishes that no state or group of states has the right to intervene, directly or indirectly, for any reason whatever, in the internal or external affairs of any other state. The foregoing principle prohibits not only armed force but also any other form of interference or attempted threat against the personality of the state or against its political, economic, and cultural elements."

Liberation Day rehearsal set

A BRIEFING for Monday's Liberation Day Parade will be held at the Liberation Monument at 2.30pm on Sunday, followed by a rehearsal for Parade troops at 3pm.

Monday's commemoration of the end of Argentine occupation in 1982 begins with a Thanksgiving service at Christ Church Cathedral at 9.45am. Members of the public wishing to attend the 11am ceremony at the Liberation Monument are asked to arrive no later than 10.45am.

All are then welcome to attend a civic reception at the Town Hall from 11.30am to 12.30pm.

RAF officer awarded £16k

A FALKLANDS based RAF officer who claimed she was discriminated against when she was pregnant has been awarded more than £16,000 by an Employment Tribunal.

The UK tribunal found she suffered discrimination, and the force had unintentionally created "an intimidating, degrading, hostile or offensive environment for her."

When the officer told her superiors she was 12 weeks pregnant, her request to stay in her desk-based job was rejected, despite her RAF officer husband also being based on the Islands.

She was ordered to return to the UK immediately, and forced to take leave to return to the Falklands so she could visit her husband during her pregnancy.

Sukey Cameron with the PM

Cameron meets Cameron

FALKLANDS Government representative Sukey Cameron met her namesake the Prime Minister at a Foreign Office reception on Tuesday. David Cameron told her he had been talking about the Falklands that day with Baroness Thatcher who had visited him at No. 10. He also said he would like to visit the Islands, especially as RAF Brize Norton was in his constituency, although he recognised his diary would not allow a visit at present. Ms Cameron also met with the Minister responsible for the Islands, Jeremy Browne, and the Minister with responsibility for the Overseas Territories, Henry Bellingham.

Desire takes heart in Rockhopper funding

THE positive outcome of the preliminary testing of Rockhopper Exploration's Sea Lion well appears to have prompted a flurry of activity in the financial markets and the boardrooms of oil companies involved, as well as in the South Atlantic itself.

Estimates of the size of its Sea Lion prospect increased last week by 72 million barrels to a potential 242 million barrels recoverable, prompting media speculation that this could be the biggest discovery of its kind since the North Sea.

With shares in their company soaring over 52% on Friday and having risen over 500% in the past three months, Rockhopper went back to the stock market to finance its further drilling and testing programme, announcing on Tuesday that it had raised a further £48.5m through the issue of 17.3 million new shares at 280p each, just 10p below the closing price on Monday. This fundraising plan appeared to find favour with the market, which pushed the Rockhopper share price up to 293p.

According to market analysts Stockopedia, the new funds will provide Rockhopper with enough cash to complete its current drilling programme: £21m has reportedly been earmarked to flow test the Sea Lion well while £11m will be used to prove to the Falkland Islands Government that the company has the financial capacity to carry out work on the Sea Lion and forthcoming Ernest wells.

A further £16.5m is said to have been allocated for operational contingency, technical and engineering studies and working capital.

Desire Petroleum, the pioneer oil exploration company, which is also focused on the North Falkland Basin and shares some prospects with Rockhopper as its junior partner, has taken heart from the Sea Lion discovery. This renewed confidence is evidently shared by the stock market as Desire shares also have risen to almost their former height, before somewhat disappointing results from their own first drilling at the start of the present campaign caused them to dip sharply.

This week, shareholders at the Desire's annual meeting this week were told: "The Sea Lion discovery is very exciting, discovering oil in a good quality sandstone reservoir. This has significantly de-risked oil exploration, particularly on the eastern flank of the basin where Desire has a strong acreage position.

"Desire has identified a number of potential sandstone fans of the same type as Sea Lion, including the Rachel, Ninky and Anna prospects. It is now Desire's intention to drill the Rachel prospect as its next well, subject to all the necessary approvals, when the rig returns to Desire later in the year."

Though operating in a different basin to the south of the Falklands, global oil and minerals exploration giant BHP Billiton and partner Falkland Oil & Gas Ltd. (FOGL) have used the Ocean Guardian semi-submersible rig to spud their first exploration well, Toroa, on May 31.

It is estimated it will take some 35 days to reach the well's target depth around 2,700m. The companies are targeting what they estimate to be a 1.7 billion barrel prospect with operator BHP Billiton having a 51% stake and FOGL the remainder.

Chilean flight fears allayed

APPEALS to veterans of the Falklands War not to arrive in the Islands this weekend, which have been made by the ultra-nationalistic Argentine website El Malvinense, appear to have led to growing, but baseless fears in the Islands about alteration or even interruption to the weekly LAN flight between Mount Pleasant and Punta Arenas.

This Saturday, as on every second Saturday of every month since the 1999 Joint Declaration between the Argentine and British governments, the incoming LAN flight will make a stop at Rio Gallegos, and next week a similar stop will be made by the outgoing flight; the original purpose of this rather strange scheduling being to allow Argentine next-of-kin visitors to come to the Islands without the necessity of travelling via Santiago.

On many weeks this stop and the return stop on the following week sees no passengers embarking or disembarking.

But the writer of an article posted on the bellicose El Malvinense website says: "According to unofficial sources, Argentine war veterans will be on this flight, who have decided to travel on this date because they have received information from LAN employees that this will be the last flight to the Islands to stop in Rio Gallegos."

The prime purpose of the website article was to warn Argentine veterans that by arriving this weekend, before the celebration on Monday of the anniversary of liberation of the Islands from Argentine occupation, they might unwittingly find themselves being used as tools of British propaganda.

But the "unofficial sources" quoted, together with the tense climate created by the Argentine Government's recent attempts to isolate the Falklands, appear to have had a secondary effect.

Intentionally or not, their comments have cast doubts about the continuation of the Rio Gallegos stop and, by extension, the whole LAN service.

The Penguin News has received a number of calls recently, principally from members of the Islands' Chilean community, worried that their only direct link with home and family might be under threat. Jennie Forrest, proprietor of the local LAN agency, International Tours and Travel, said her office had taken a number of calls, but she assured the Penguin News that the Rio Gallegos stops and the LAN service itself would continue.

Ad deadlines

PENGUIN News deadlines have been brought forward for next week's edition because of the Liberation Day public holiday. Would all advertisers wishing to place colour ads please ensure their ads are booked and received by 4pm today. Black and white ads should also be booked by 4pm today. The office will be staffed on Monday. Thank you.

Rape trial

THE trial by jury of Stanley man Colin George McDonald began on Monday in the Supreme Court with Chief Justice Gardner presiding. Mr McDonald has pleaded not guilty to four charges of rape and one of indecent assault, all relating to children under the age of 13 and spanning a number of years from 1976 to 1992.

PM says thanks

MEMBERS of the Legislative Assembly on Monday received a letter of thanks from Prime Minister David Cameron, thanking them for their recent letter of support. Mr Cameron reiterated the support of the British Government for the freedom and self-determination of the Falkland Islands.

Oil rig safety

A ROUTINE health and safety inspection of the Ocean Guardian oil rig will be undertaken this month. The inspection will ensure conditions on the rig are as described in the safety case for the Falklands Offshore Area, prepared by Diamond Offshore. The cost is borne by operators.

Running total

THE total raised for the Run Together event held on May 9 was £3,919, in aid of Cancer Research UK. Sarah Preston of MPA raised the most money and won a weekend for two at Cobbs Cottage on Bleaker Island, courtesy of Mr and Mrs Mike Rendell, with return flights provided by FIGAS.

Poor yield

THE manager of Fitzroy reports mixed results from the potato crop and a very poor yield overall in comparison to previous years. He estimates the total crop this year will be about 15-20 tonnes (4.1-5.5t/ha), compared to 60 tonnes (16.5t/ha) the previous year.

Peter Millam

A FORMER Falklands Senior Anglican Chaplain died in the UK on Tuesday. The Reverend Peter J Millam, the son of a Falkland Islands mother, served in the Islands from 1966-1970.

Midwinter madness beckoning

WITH just over a week to go, there isn't much time to get ready for the Midwinter Swim, which kicks off at Surf Bay on June 19.

If you are brave enough to take part, be at the beach to register before 11am and to qualify for your certificate of lunacy signed by the Governor. There is no entry fee, but as this is a fundraising event for the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre and Stanley Sea Cadets, everyone is encouraged to raise some sponsorship or make a donation when registering.

Commemorative t-shirts and hot food and drinks will be on sale during the day, and after the event there will be mulled wine available at the Victory Bar. There are also raffle tickets on sale and a draw will take place at 2.30pm the next day in Millers Bar.

Organiser Siân Ferguson said: "Even if you aren't mad enough to take a dip on the day, come along to Surf Bay and support this worthwhile event fit for all the family." For more information, contact Siân on 21977 (evenings) or email skippy@cwimail.fk.

Argentines deported

TEN suspected football hooligans from Argentina have been deported by South African police, who say they were planning to disrupt the World Cup. The men, identified as members of the notorious "Barrabravas" gang, were arrested at Johannesburg airport and found to be on an entry blacklist.

"Intelligence indicated these persons would commit acts of public disorder, engage in acts of violence and provoke conflict with certain fans of opponent teams and other groups from Argentina during the World Cup," a police spokesman said.

THIS weekend we remember those who restored our freedom and whose courage and sacrifice allow us to live at peace.

Everyone has a different way of remembering, be it formal ceremonial, celebration or quiet reflection. I would not want disagreement over the conduct of memorials to sour these poignant and solemn occasions.

I was privileged, a few years ago, to host the mothers of two very young members of 3 Para who were killed in the last days of the war. It had taken 25 years for them to come and see where their sons died.

The courage and humour with which they joined some of their sons' old comrades on a visit to Mount Longdon emphasised how important these visits are.

I'm happy that plans are already underway for a different set of visits to mark the thirtieth anniversary of our liberation. Seeing the recent commemorations of the evacuation of Dunkirk reinforced my belief that we do well to remember those involved in such extraordinary events, not least because of what we can learn from them.

TWO Assembly Members head off to the UN shortly. It may seem a pointless exercise as most of the Committee of 24 have long held positions and are unlikely to change the way they have voted for years.

However, most years at least one or two will recognise our right to self determination and if we did not attend, the large Argentine contingent would simply present their distorted version of history in pursuit of their attempt to colonise our country. This irony seems to escape most involved in the decolonisation committee.

Our representatives present our case and then one or two Argentine stooges with slight Falklands connections read long speeches with convoluted accounts of their claim and tell us how much better it is to be Argentine. It is a charade but obviously important to Argentina who send their Foreign Minister and a whole raft of his minions.

Public at last reclaims the dunes of Surf Bay

WITH no hesitation, the 30 or so men, women and children who had put off their lunch to be present, followed the Governor into the former minefield, at the conclusion of the final demining public confidence demonstration, which was held at Surf Bay on Friday.

Described by Robin Swanson of the Demining Programme Office as having been by far the most complex and difficult task of the recent campaign, where people now walked and children scampered, had once been one of the most densely mined areas in the Falklands, with more than 1,000 landmines and three different types of terrain, from peat through to shallow sand and deep sand dunes. In the shallow sand area, some of the mines were buried up to 40cm deep because of the accumulation of sand over the years. In the dunes the situation was worse, with mines at the 1982 level now up to 4m beneath the surface and requiring the use of an armoured mechanical excavator to locate them. Mr Swanson says although this pilot phase has only reduced the number of mines buried in the Islands by five per cent, and much less in terms of area, the UK Government will now have a much better understanding of the challenges presented by the remaining 113 or so mined areas.

Badminton players to serve up a celebration

SATURDAY'S Liberation Dance at the Town Hall will revive many cherished memories for past and present members of Stanley Badminton Club, as the fundraiser is celebrating the club's 60th anniversary.

The club (SBC) was founded, with the approval of Stanley Town Council, on June 28 1950 under the chairmanship of Bert Livermore, and players met in the old gymnasium on Ross Road.

SBC became an associate member of the International Badminton Federation (IBF) in September 1956 at a cost of ten shillings per year membership fee, and has continued as a member ever since.

The IBF is now known as the Badminton World Federation and membership has risen to US$200 per year.

BWF has evidence in their archives that badminton was played in the Islands as early as 1907, and the forerunner to SBC, the Falkland Islands Defence Force Badminton Club, was founded in 1929.

This club was still running when the SBC was formed in 1950 and friendly matches between the two clubs were often held.

In 1959 Nick Hadden established a badminton club at Goose Green to which Stanley Badminton Club donated a net and shuttlecocks.

The SBC has continued to run apart from a break in 1982 during the Argentine occupation, when the town was put under curfew and the occupying forces took over the gymnasium.

From first forming, the SBC hosted an annual midwinter fancy dress ball, which was a very popular event in Stanley's social calendar until the 1990s.

Rosemarie King is the longest serving member, having joined the club in 1972. However, Rene

The way they were: members of the Falkland Islands Defence Force Badminton Club, forerunner to the Stanley Club, in 1931

Rowlands, who sadly passed away on June 28 2008, 58 years to the day from the club first being formed, had been one of the founding members and was actively involved in the club, having been elected life president in the 1990s, until she took ill shortly before her death.

Rene received a meritorious award from the IBF in 1986 and was invited to attend the IBF AGM in Guatemala in 1993. She then went on to the Isle of Wight that same year to support the Falklands team in their first competition in the Island Games, at which her son Neil was competing.

SBC has competed at every Island Games since the Falklands team first attended in 1993, apart from Gibraltar in 1995 and in 2007 when Rhodes did not hold a badminton event. However, a badminton competition was hosted by Greenland that year where SBC was represented.

A young team went to the Commonwealth Youth Games in Pune, India, in 2008 and a team will be going to the Commonwealth Games in Delhi, India in October this year. As well as representing the club in Delhi in October, and at numerous Island Games, Doug Clark has represented the club at the Commonwealth Games in Kuala Lumpur in 1998 with Bill Chater (although Bill was injured and didn't get to play) and also in Manchester in 2002 with Chris Eynon.

The club is fortunate to be able to bring a professional coach to the Islands this week. Rebecca Pantaney, a Commonwealth Games gold medal winner, will be here on her fourth visit to work with both the team and other younger members of the club to help develop the sport within the younger generation.

SBC would like to thank Commonwealth Games Federation, Falklands Holdings and Caribbean Alliance Insurance Company for their sponsorship, without which Rebecca's visits would not be possible.

If anyone would like more information on the club, or has some photos from the past, please contact Lynn Brownlee on 21891 or Rosemarie King on 21451.

1. What are your most prized possessions? My family and my home library... which I can't get to as it's in boxes under my bed. If I swapped those over I could read in peace!
2. What is the worst piece of advice you have ever been given? "They'll get easier as they get older." What a load of codswallop!
3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea with? I already love drinking tea and eating copious amounts of biscuits with Nell (6), which we do on pretty much a daily basis. School homework: it's a killer!
4. What is your happiest moment? Kissing my babies for the first time.
5. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? I would set up a business called Small Plant Hire and hire out some diggers.
6. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Taxi drivers... sorry Keith!
7. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? Leila "Crazy Cat" Gilding. I think she would spice things up a bit!
8. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Africa, because I really need to wash behind an elephant's ears.
9. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it? Girls Just Wanna Have Fun by Cyndi Lauper because Nell is the most wonderful dancer.
10. What's the best book you have read recently? Recently I have been reading lots of Dan Brown books. It's like a really unpleasant addiction. Sorry to all the Dan Brown enthusiasts out there, but he really is a bit rubbish (does anyone have The Lost Symbol I could borrow?)

Debbi lives in Stanley with her husband Kiffa, four animals (she means children!) and Minty the Sheep. ## Worse paid will be worse off

IN last week's article "How budget hits families" it was interesting to see examples of how the tax changes would affect the higher paid. Earnings of £31,000 to £61,000 were illustrated showing how those sample taxpayers would be worse off by percentages ranging from 0.7% to 3.1%.

However, the lower paid are more adversely affected in percentage terms and obviously in money terms since they have lower earnings to begin with.

For example, an employed person with annual earnings of £14,000 and in receipt of, say, one child allowance of £720 pays no tax now other than retirement pension contributions (RPC) of £650.

With no other income, disposable income is therefore £14,070.

Next year, following the combination of a reduction in the personal tax allowance, bringing the child allowance into the tax net, the reintroduction of MSL and the increase in RPC, disposable income in that example will reduce by a further £614 to £13,456 or 4.4% worse off. I'm sure Members of the Legislative Assembly were aware of all of the effects of the tax changes before making the decisions.

However, it does appear to be a severe hit for lower paid individuals with children, in particular at a time when the cost of tax free holiday credits for earners of all levels is still being met from the public purse and where £450,000 has been allocated in 2010/11 for that purpose (about £130,000 more than the total annual cost of family allowances)!

FIG Environmental Studies Budget 2010/11

The Falkland Islands Government provides funding to help people in the Falkland Islands to conduct activities which benefit and enhance the environment. Anyone can apply for assistance from the Environmental Studies Budget, including owners and managers of land, non-government organisations and international scientists that conduct research and conservation activities in the Falkland Islands.

Projects eligible for ESB funding must assist in the management or enhancement of the biodiversity of the Falkland Islands. Priority will be given to initiatives addressing the key three themes of the 'Falkland Islands Biodiversity Strategy', which are: environmental research, on-ground action and education.

The ESB has a formal application and decision making process with the Environmental Committee responsible for the allocation of funds. This year all the available funds will be allocated in one round in July 2010.

The deadline for applications is Monday 21st June 2010. The application form can be obtained from the Environmental Planning Department. Applicants are encouraged to discuss proposed projects with the EPD Environmental Officer prior to submission and he can also help draft your application. Where possible, some level of co-funding or in-kind costs (e.g. labour, equipment) is desirable.

Please contact the Environmental Planning Department to obtain an information pack.

A little less conversation

A FEW issues ago, I wrote about the big Falklands debate, or rather the lack of it.

I was not taking a personal position one way or the other about oil exploration in the South Atlantic, but – somewhat provocatively, I suppose – I did mention the strangely coincidental massive oil disaster in the Gulf of Mexico (which continues as I write) and the discovery of oil in Falklands waters.

It seemed strange to me then, and seems strange still, that that there was and is so little debate about whether oil is a good or bad thing for the Falklands.

This is despite the fact that the tourism, meat and fish industries rely heavily on the Falklands “brand” of unsullied freshness.

This is an image that is strong now but would be immediately and perhaps fatally devalued on first sight of an oil slick.

If there is a debate, it is a curiously sterile one. Perhaps it takes place behind closed doors, although I can see no reason for secrecy: both loving the seductive promises of oil and hating its duplicity are perfectly understandable sentiments.

In most parts of the world, opinions about such issues are openly polarised. On one side of an environmental/industrial argument, a minority will loudly argue the case against a development that may have potential environmental impact, while on the other side a group will argue that risks, if there are any, are worth taking because of the wealth they may bring to a community.

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound, founding editor of the Penguin News, looks at issues at home and abroad

Newspapers take sides. So do politicians. International bodies like Greenpeace and the WWF add their weight. People lobby their governmental representatives and even take to the streets if they have to. But, as I say, the Falklands debate, if there is one, is curiously sterile.

In response to my original piece, a representative of Falkland Conservation put pen to paper, and explained to me and other Penguin News readers that the group does engage with the government on issues of risk to the environment, but they do it quietly and rationally.

That approach, they believe, works better than megaphone protests and blanket opposition.

I am sure these dialogues occur, and they may work.

But it does seem that “Conservation” (as the group is known in the Falklands) has accepted that oil development should not be broadly opposed.

Perhaps they are choosing to fight only the battles they can win, a position in which there is some wisdom, but, I regret to say, little glory.

I commend the writer of the letter for his non-inflammatory response which, I’m afraid, I may fail to match. But, again, the letter brings to mind that word: sterile.

There seemed to be no passion of the type that one sees in other parts of the world when conservation butts up against business.

Correct me, please, if I am wrong, but I believe that some of the research work conducted by the main conservation body in the Falklands is funded by the Falkland Islands Government.

That being so, it would be understandable if Conservation avoided open conflict with FIG. Conservation may be right, and environmental protestors the world over may be wrong.

Perhaps it is best to pursue environmental goals through behind-the-scenes influence. But it is a peculiarly quiet, even secretive, way of working.

Despite the letter writer’s suggestion that anyone can join Conservation and influence its policies, the organisation still seems somewhat elitist.

Perhaps that is a public relations issue that they should work on.

I was a member of Falkland Conservation for some years, but left it because I felt that I had few opportunities for real involvement.

I did not seem to be wanted for any reason other than the moth-eaten contents of my wallet. I had joined when it was a populist, crusading movement, but it had evolved into a studious body in which there was no place for foot soldiers.

Perhaps the time is ripe for the creation of a lobby group which will provoke really exciting, loud, interesting and healthy argument.

Conservation could continue to get the science right, incrementally improving protection of species and habitats, while the new body takes a far more vocal position on the big issues, talking loudly and simply from the heart and the soul.

Gusty May reveals the sunny side of the stats

MAY was a dry, sunny but windy month with temperatures just above average, and much more sunshine than average. There were more gales and more days with gusts greater than 33 knots since MPA records began in 1986.

Temperature

The mean maximum was 8.4 Celsius compared with an average for May of 7C. The highest temperature recorded was 12.3C on the 9th and the lowest maximum was 4.5C on the 30th. The mean minimum temperature was 3C, compared with the 2.2C average. The lowest minimum was -1C on the 26th and the highest minimum was 7.5C recorded on the 18th.

Rainfall

The total rainfall for the month was 19.9mm, much less than the 49.5mm average and significantly less than last year’s total 105.4mm. The wettest day was the 18th with a total of 9mm. More than 0.1mm fell on 16 days and 1mm or more on eight days.

Sunshine

There were 104.8 hours of sunshine, compared with the average of 83.4 hours. The highest daily total was 7.8 hours on the 9th.

Snow/Hail/Thunder/Fog

There were six days when sleet or snow fell and four days with hail, less than average for both. There were no days with fog and none with thunder.

Wind/Gales

The mean wind speed was 14.7 knots, against an average of 13.4. The highest hourly mean speed of 38 knots was on the 27th and the highest recorded gust of 54 knots also on the 27th. Gales occurred on six days and there were 21 days with gusts in excess of 33 knots.

We heard it on the grapevine

HOLD on to your goblets: Falkland Islanders are officially among the top wine drinkers in the world.

According to the California Wine Institute, the Falklands boasts the ninth highest per capita wine consumption, with each resident gulping up to 60 litres per year over the five year period (2004-2008) of the survey.

Top of the plops is the Vatican, with the Norfolk Islands, France, Luxembourg and Andorra making up the top five.

Languishing well behind the Falklands average annual consumption of 42 litres is Spain with 33 litres, Argentina with 27 litres, Uruguay with 25, UK with 19 and Chile with 17 litres.

Pictures of concentration

SEVEN Camp women enjoyed a brush with silk painting last Thursday when Karen Armstrong-Ford hosted an early evening class at Goose Green School on behalf of Team Tranquil.

There was a quiet hush of concentration in the room as the women were so intent on their works of art, each producing at least one silk painting to take home with them.

"I think that all enjoyed themselves and some were surprised at how easy silk painting can be," said Karen. "We did have fun, although there were a couple of disasters, as there normally are with silk painting, and you can only learn from your mistakes."

"The majority of work was fantastic, especially for those first timers to the medium, and the prize for most improved student on the night has to go to Sheila Jones. I would like to thank Team Tranquil and the ladies who came for brightening a dark winter's evening."

The next Team Tranquil sponsored course at Goose Green School will be needle felting with Bonita Greenland on June 30.

Governor's right hand man bids a fond farewell to the Falklands

LAST Saturday's LAN flight saw the final departure from the Falklands of Government House First Secretary Paul Martinez and his wife Anne, after a week of farewells, both official and unofficial.

It is only just short of three years since Mr and Mrs Martinez arrived in July 2007, but it is probably fair to say that in that time they have made many friends here and their absence will be keenly felt.

Mr Martinez told the Penguin News he had very much enjoyed his time in the Falklands, listing among the professional highlights the visit of the Princess Royal when, in the absence of the Governor, he had to take on the role of Acting Governor and host.

Refusing to admit to any downsides to his stay here, Mr Martinez said among the best memories he would carry away with him was that of the "magical atmosphere" surrounding the 25th Anniversary of Liberation.

He had missed the early celebrations, but said the way in which the whole community had turned out to show their appreciation of the British veterans in November, in so many practical ways, left a deep and lasting impression on him.

"It was an incredibly unifying experience," he said.

As a fluent Spanish speaker with previous Latin American experience, Mr Martinez played a crucial role in the Argentine next-of-kin visits. This involved much complex negotiation between three governments, the local military and the Families Commission. That it all went well, particularly the second visit, remains for Mr Martinez a matter of considerable satisfaction:

"To get that LAN flight off, five minutes early at the end of the second visit, was a fantastic achievement by everybody concerned," he said.

Another satisfying aspect of the event was that as a Spanish speaker Mr Martinez became something of a focal point for the Argentine media who accompanied the next-of-kin visits. This gave him the opportunity to put across the message that the Falklands was a separate democratic country and that there were areas like fisheries conservation where it would be to our mutual benefit to talk and cooperate, to journalists who maybe started out with a very different view.

Mr Martinez's replacement as First Secretary is recently-arrived Rik Nye, who for the past four years has been Deputy Head of Mission in the British High Commission in Wellington, New Zealand.

Mr Nye is no stranger to the Falklands, having visited in 1994, when on the Falklands Desk at the Foreign Office in London.

Accompanied by his wife Alison and their ten-year-old son Ciaran, Mr Nye said he hoped one day to return to New Zealand, which he only left because the job in the Falklands came up, which he very much wanted to take.

Describing himself as "passionate about the outdoors," Mr Nye is a keen road cyclist and rock climber, both activities he hopes to be able to pursue during his time here.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies.

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross Sound ferry main operational area
146.625....Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6)....Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

156.800....Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 3rd June 2010

Jan Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands
The AWEX rose once again in both Australian and US Dollars terms which is particularly good because it builds on last week's increase.
The increase is seen as supply driven with a small Australian and no South African offerings last week.
Currency exchange rates are still very volatile but ended the week close to where they started and consequently the market indicator rose to 511 p/kg.
Unfortunately perhaps for many local woolgrowers the flattest market segment at the moment is the 23-25 p range.

Talk of the town

Penguin News Vox Pop
Readers' views on the World Cup

Matthew Clark

I think Spain will pip Brazil in the final. I'm supporting England, but I'm disappointed with some of the team selections. I'm taking all my annual vacation specifically.

Marlene Newman

I'd like England to be in the final with, say, Germany or Spain. As long as we knock Argentina out I'll be happy. I'll be watching games if I get home from work OK.

Jaydon Schreiber

A Spain and Argentina final. I'll be all over Argentina. I know I shouldn't be saying that in the Falklands, but I've put good money on it.

Fabiano Guimaraes

I'm supporting Brazil. I think there will be a Brazil-Argentina final. I'm very excited. We Brazilians wait for it very, very eagerly.

Rik Nye

I'm very excited. I'm supporting England. My only regret is there are no Leeds United players in the squad. I think it will be a Brazil-Spain final.

Bonnie Curtis

I will be supporting the Ivory Coast because I drew them in the World Cup draw at work.

Swift handling of planning applications

THIS month's meeting of the Planning and Building Committee was one of the shortest on record, lasting a little under 30 minutes.

Councillor Sharon Halford took the chair and was supported by fellow MLA Jan Cheek with four of the five lay members also present.

There were just six applications seeking planning permission and all were granted conditional consent. They were:

- Siting of a 20-foot container for storage at the Lighthouse Seamen's Mission on FIPASS Road, required during the refurbishment of the kitchen on the premises.

- Demolition of the existing dwelling and permission in principle for the erection of a new house at 6 John Street for Tony McMullen.

- Porch extension on the house at 5 Brandon Road for Ian Smith.

- Erection of one single-storey dwelling and a pair of semi-detached dwellings on land at 14-16 Goss Road for Richard Short.

- Erection of a 1.5-metre high timber batten boundary fence at 6 Davis Street East for Richard and Marlene Short.

- Erection of a single-storey side extension and single-storey rear extension to the house at 2 Fieldhouse Close for Stuart Duncan.

In the absence of Building Adviser Nick Stephens, who is on leave, Environmental Planning Officer Antony Payne introduced the list of 16 applications for building permits, 11 of which had been approved (some conditionally), with one exempt.

The next meeting of the committee is scheduled for July 1, at 8.30am in the Liberation Room.

Q CAN government please explain what principles, reasoning and logic guide the user pay policy in its application to the various services subject to that policy?

A THE user pays policy has been in place for several years and is being expanded incrementally.

Some services (such as electricity) have been calculated on this basis for many years and others (such as education) will probably never be calculated in this way. There are also services that will probably require ongoing subsidies for social or economic purposes.

The intention is to gradually move more services on to the user pays basis, where it is appropriate to do so. The principle on fees and charges is that where the particular service benefits an individual or group, they should be responsible for the costs of providing that service.

However, it is recognised that FIG is not a commercial enterprise and charges sometimes need to reflect social needs as well as the costs of direct service provision.

Q THE housing section of government makes an annual surplus of around £200,000 after taking full account of all costs including depreciation on housing assets that actually appreciate in value! However, budget approval was given to a further increase on the basis of catch up with the limited private sector housing market.

It is understood that the main purpose of the government housing stock is for accommodating public officers recruited from overseas and for social housing: ie, for qualifying residents who are unable to afford to rent from the private sector or become a home owner. Therefore government housing does not compete with private sector housing.

The increase will reduce the take home pay for overseas officers and must reduce FIG's competitiveness in what is understood to be a very competitive market for the recruitment of professional staff.

For FIG to remain competitive this will no doubt lead to an increase in their remuneration package and, as a result, to salary inflation generally.

In light of the foregoing does government intend to continue its policy of catch up and to what extent, having regard to the widening of the gap due to the higher demand for housing caused by the current increase in economic activity? If the answer is yes does this mean that government will adjust its house rents downwards in the event there is an economic downturn and private sector rents reduce to reflect a possible lower demand for housing?

A IT has been clearly stated for several years that government policy is to reduce the gap between private sector and public sector rents.

The assertion that the government does not compete with the private sector is clearly unjustified. The reason for this is that private sector rents are unaffordable for many, who therefore seek social housing. It is also apparent from the last budget that the government has not increased salaries for contract officers proportionately to the recently announced rent increase.

The widening gap caused by the current increase in economic activity has not been a factor so far. This would only be a factor if FIG rents were close to the private sector, which is not currently the case. Finally, future rent increases or reductions will be assessed when considering future budgets.

Q HOW is a contribution towards the cost of municipal services such as street lighting and park maintenance recovered in respect of commercial properties?

A NO separate charge is currently made to commercial properties for those services.

Q WHAT independent body is charged with the examination of the audit report on the expenditure of public funds on the operation of the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) and on assessing the public benefit of that expenditure with respect to value for money: ie, economy, efficiency and effectiveness?

A The PAC is an independent body established by Section 81 of the Constitution that reports to the Legislative Assembly and the Governor.

The PAC is required to submit its intended programme of work to the Legislative Assembly, including how it intends to apply its funds in carrying out the programme.

This, combined with the annual report to Legislative Assembly, will allow members (and the public) to determine the benefit and effectiveness of the committee.

Falklands cricket team visits Mexico

THE Falkland Islands cricket team leaves tomorrow bound for Mexico City to play in Division 4 of the International Cricket Council Americas League, against Mexico and Costa Rica.

This is an exciting development for cricket in the Falklands: it will be the first time a team has played in an ICC international tournament. In theory we could keep on being promoted and ultimately end up at the World Cup. Clearly that is not likely to happen in the near future but always remains a distant possibility. Arranging a mutually convenient date for all the teams has been difficult and sadly Cuba is not participating, we believe due to visa issues.

The team has been practising hard for the month, mainly indoors. Mexico City is at 7,500 feet altitude and will be hot and humid, so we may find the conditions difficult to acclimatise to.

It will be a busy week with 50-over matches on Tuesday and Wednesday and two T20 matches on Thursday with the team flying back on Friday.

None of the teams has played each other in the past, so no-one is sure how each country's standard compares with the others. It will be interesting to see how the Falklands fare in the competition.

The 13 man squad is: Elliott Taylforth (Captain), Craig Paice, Daniel Biggs, Ian Betts, Kevin Clapp, Martin Collins, Mike Barton, Mike Summers, Richard

Marlor, Wayne Thompson, Roger Diggle, David Pickup and David Hewitt. On return from Mexico the team will travel to Scotland in July to play in a triangular tournament of the three Falkland teams: Falkland (Fife), Falkland (Newbury, Berks) and the Falkland Islands, to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Falkland Fife CC.

Next year the ICC is hoping to hold an under 17s competition in St Kitts in the West Indies. The Falklands are hoping to send a team, which will be hugely exciting for the younger cricketers.

Later this year the Cricket Association is intending to appoint a Development Officer. It is an ICC requirement of membership that from 2010 all members must have a full-time employee. The ICC provides a substantial contribution towards the cost of this post. Stanley Services have been extremely generous with their support, and Cable & Wireless has offered a free telecommunications package. However, we are still looking for sponsors who could help with provision of accommodation and also a vehicle.

We hope that this appointment will significantly increase the number of adult and junior players, male and female. We also hope that other sporting associations may be able to make use of the development officer to assist with their junior coaching programmes.

Roger Diggle
Chairman, FICA

Stanley Golf Club draws with HMS Portland

ALTHOUGH currently in the off season, other than the monthly medals, Stanley Golf Club played HMS Portland on Saturday May 29 in a cold and blustery wind.

With eight players from each side the match ended in a draw at six points each. Format for the day was Pinehurst Foursomes where teams of two play each other in a matchplay format.

In match one Rodney and Carole Lee teamed up against Toyah Willcock and Stu Arkley and, despite having to give away 17 shots, Carole and Rodney managed a creditable half. In match two Ian Stewart and Adam Glanville played Chris Wood and Chris Crooks and with some consistent play helped by 13 shots, the HMS Portland team won by five holes.

Match three saw Drew Irvine and Stuart Haines pair up against Marshall Scott and Max Wall. In a very close match, tied going into the last hole, the visitors won when Marshall sank a great put.

In the final match Bob Gilbert and Ady Lowe got off to a great start getting seven holes up and eventually winning by six holes to tie the whole match. After the match HMS Portland presented the club with a photo of their ship.

The club's annual meeting was held on Sunday afternoon. Members should note that it was agreed to increase the competition green fee to £5 in order to cover increased catering and clubhouse running costs.

The 2010/11 committee is as follows: Captain Tony Rocke, Secretary Adrian Lowe, Treasurer Sharon Gilbert, Greenkeeper Rodney Lee, Handicap Sec Steve Vincent (aided by Bob Gilbert), House Ian Stewart and Junior Wayne Thompson. Glenn Ross, who sits on the committee as the immediate past captain, was thanked for his tremendous work for the club over the past two years.

The Décor Services June Monthly Medal was postponed last week due to a waterlogged course. It will be held on Sunday.

Chamber survey says C&W must try harder

THE business community appears less than impressed with the quality of the internet and telephone services they receive, according to the results of a recent survey of members - but a study commissioned by FIG seems to indicate recent improvements have had a positive impact.

In the wake of significant increases in bandwidth implemented by Cable and Wireless (C&W) in December 2009 and April 2010, the Chamber of Commerce ran a survey among its members, the results of which have just been published.

This survey runs parallel to the Quality Observation project carried out by monitoring company Actual Experience (AE), which was sponsored by the government.

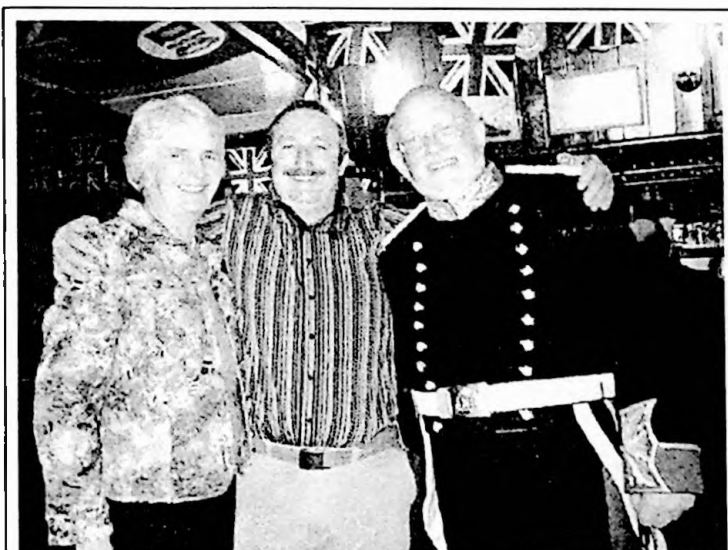

Of the 87 members of the business community polled, 55 (63.2%) replied to some, if not all of the five questions posed. More than one in four respondents (82%) were Stanley based and the rest in Camp.

Only 7% of respondents felt the speed of the internet service had improved after the December upgrade, all of whom were based in Stanley. A large majority (69%) had experienced no change and 24% felt it had deteriorated.

Fewer still (4%) considered the reliability of the internet service had improved, while 44% felt it had deteriorated. One respondent said: "Reliable high speed internet is critical for the economic and social growth of the Falklands."

More than a quarter of respondents felt the accuracy of billed internet usage had deteriorated since the December upgrade, with 62% believing there had been no change and only 4% seeing any improvement.

Similarly negative responses were obtained in regard to the telephone service. Asked if reception quality had improved since the Barman Bob Short greets Governor Alan Huckle and wife Helen at The Rose on Liberation Day. More coverage: pages 3, 10 & 11

December upgrade, 73% reported having found no difference, with 25% claiming it had deteriorated. Only 2% had observed an improvement.

No respondents had perceived any improvement in telephone service reliability since December, with 31% claiming it had deteriorated. A large majority (75%) felt accuracy of call billing had remained the same, with 16% claiming deterioration and only 7% seeing an improvement.

The biggest perception of deterioration in the service provided by C&W came from the question about directory inquiries, with 49% of all respondents claiming the service had deteriorated and 12% of all comments received ascribing this deterioration to the relocation of the service in Saint Helena.

One correspondent wrote: "Since relocating the Directory Enquiries service it has proved costly and uninformative... names not recognised and you are kept waiting, and being charged, often to be told they can not find the name. This was much better as a local service."

C&W emerges best from those sections of the survey dealing with the interface between customers and local C&W staff: fault reporting, customer services and account queries.

Two out of three (66%) respondents found the fault reporting service either excellent, good or average, dropping to 64% in their appreciation of customer service and to 59% for the response to account queries. Fault reporting and customer service was rated as excellent by 13% and 15% respectively.

The recently released report by Chris Gare of AE on the Perception of Quality Observation run by his company in the Falklands, with the help of volunteers and the cooperation of C&W, suggested an overall improvement of 10.8% as the result of the C&W upgrade of their satellite link which took place on the night of April 28.

Legislative Assembly Member Dick Sawle told the Penguin News he did not feel there was a conflict between the findings of the Chamber of Commerce Survey, which was subjective, and the AE Observation, which was scientific and analytical.

Justin McPhee, C&W Chief Executive Officer in the Falklands, said he was pleased by the positive comments in the AE report, even though the company had encountered severe technical problems during the month of the observation.

Referring to the Chamber of Commerce survey, Mr McPhee said C&W would continue to work to provide the best service possible for its customers and welcomed comments from any source which helped achieve that aim.

Cllr Sawle admitted there was still a long way to go to improve telecommunications quality, particularly in Camp, but said one of the encouraging aspects of the AE Observation was that software installed in the computer of one volunteer, whose Perception Quality Score (PQS) was significantly lower than the rest, was able to identify a problem, which C&W was then able to fix.

That there might be a finite limit to possible improvements in Falklands telecommunications is suggested by the caveat which introduces the AE report.

This states that even at times when reception should be optimum, the performance of the internet service in the Islands would not be as good as that experienced in the UK due to the use of a geo-stationary satellite.

A UK-based website Perception Quality Score, when observed from the UK, would usually be classified as excellent, but when the same site was observed from the Falklands it would be classified as fair, at best.

TOTS CELEBRATE * CHILE CHEER * RETAIL PRICES SURVEY * LAW REVIEW

Penguin News

IN last week's Penguin News I wrote an opinion piece in which I was critical of "narrow-minded" elements of the community who peddle unsubstantiated and baseless rumours, particularly those who broadcast jaundiced views directed at individuals or groups of people (and to avoid any misconceptions, the phrase "non-Islanders" referred to contract workers, of which I am one, and not to any ethnic groups).

It is a sad fact that no community is immune from malicious or ill-informed rumour-mongering. Those who do so are thankfully in a minority.

It also is my considered opinion that the Falklands is no different in this regard, and I ended my opinion piece by commenting that "ignorant gossip can damage the good health of this community."

I thought that was a fairly decent, level-headed and supportive statement to offer on the subject. Taken in its intended context, I also considered my criticism constructive. However, it appears I have upset a number of readers. That was not my intent.

My intent was solely to be critical of those who spread such ignorant and hurtful gossip - no more, no less - and, in order to explain, I made reference to examples I had come across.

That my opinion piece could be construed as something far more invidious could not have been further from my mind, and I am sorry it has been interpreted by some in this manner. To those who my article has upset, I sincerely apologise.

On a different subject altogether, Liberation Day ended with many surprised viewers glued to their TV sets well into the early hours, including yours truly.

Once BFBS had signed off on its World Cup coverage at 11pm, I flicked through the channels in search of something to watch with my cup of cocoa.

I caught the end of "The Islanders' War," perhaps the most poignant and dramatic documentary of all on the 1982 invasion and its legacy. There then followed striking battle footage from the BBC, an account of how MPA was built, and another feature on the war.

It appeared KTV had dedicated one of its "spare" channels to the TV event, and I am sure many who stumbled upon this programming wish it had been promoted in advance. Nevertheless, it was a fitting end to a momentous date in the country's calendar.

Households to be surveyed for new RPI

BUYING habits from 150 representative households in Stanley, selected at random, are to help determine future cost of living wage and charge increases.

The householders will be contacted during July, and asked to record their daily household expenditure for four months in the year (and larger purchases over the complete year).

Information gathered from the survey will be used to compile an up-to-date Retail Price Index for Stanley, due to be reviewed from September 1 through to the end of August 2011.

The review is being carried out because the current index, which is based on a review undertaken in 1996-97, no longer accurately reflects what the average Stanley resident buys on a day-to-day basis.

At the last revision, services such as broadband and mobile phones were not available. In addition, the range of goods available, the buying patterns and the structure of the population also have altered since then.

Ensuring the index is as accurate as possible is important, particularly as it is used as a basis for cost of living wage and charge increases.

Householders will be offered an incentive payment to take part, and they will be provided with specially prepared forms or computer data entry spreadsheets for those households with computers, to simplify the process.

Synergy Information Systems Limited, which undertook the previous survey and regularly monitors the current index, has been commissioned to carry out the review on behalf of the Government.

They say participation of a wide range of people is important to ensure the success of the project so that the new index accurately reflects the cost of items purchased by typical Stanley residents.

Identity of the volunteers and the information on their expenditure will be confidential.

For more information, contact Michael Poole in the FIG Policy Unit (28427) or Nikki Buxton at Synergy Information Systems (22051).

Gary Clement to be awarded MBE

GARY Clement was told three weeks ago by Governor Alan Huckle he was to receive an MBE for his work as Chairman of SAMA 82. He told the Penguin News he was "shocked, surprised and delighted" to have been nominated and selected for such a prestigious accolade.

He has opted to receive the award at Buckingham Palace from the Queen or Prince Charles.

Gary first started working for SAMA in 2003, when the then chairman Terry Peck had to leave the Islands for a month, and asked Gary, who had helped with the 2002 pilgrimage, to stand in for him. Since then, he said, he had been a part of the organisation, being voted in as chairman by the board when Terry Peck became ill.

"In one way or another, since then, I've probably helped 800-1000 returning veterans," he said. "I've received emails this week from veterans congratulating me, from all over the world."

Gary also is helping to organise upcoming pilgrimages. In November a group of 13 - five couples and three single men - are due to arrive, and planning for the 30-year anniversary of the Falklands War is also underway. Also, he said, about 70 HMS Glamorgan veterans would return in February, to place a stone at Hookers Point.

Sukey reinforces FIG role to deny claims

ARGENTINA was urged to accept the Falkland Islands' "expressed, democratic wish to remain British" when the government's UK representative, Ms Sukey Cameron, spoke at the Falkland Islands Annual Reception.

Over 250 guests attended Wednesday's reception, at the Great Hall in Lincoln's Inn, including several government ministers and the Governor Designate, Mr Nigel Haywood.

Individuals and representatives from numerous organisations associated with the Islands attend each year, including the Falkland Islands Association Chairman David Tatham, who read out a message of thanks from Her Majesty the Queen, and Baroness Thatcher who received a very warm welcome upon her arrival.

In her speech to those assembled Ms Cameron mentioned the return of an oil rig to the Islands, which she described as "the most visible and potentially transformational change to the economy of the Islands."

She said: "Argentina has used the new round of oil exploration in the most unprincipled fashion, to renege its spurious claim to sovereignty." She detailed the various actions taken by Argentina, including going back on the 1999 agreement to conserve fishing stocks, the ban on charter flights, and the attempt through a Presidential Decree to control the maritime access to the Falklands.

Describing the new UK coalition Government's stance as "immensely reassuring" and detailing the efforts made by the Falkland

Louise Haywood, Nigel Haywood, ex-Governor Donald Lamont and former Civil Military Liaison Officer Major Simon Hopkin

Islands Government and new Legislative Assembly to get our message out, Ms Cameron said: "The Falkland Islands Government is determined to play its part in resisting the colonial aspirations of Argentina."

"The message is simple and unequivocal. We are a distinct community with our own identity and separate government."

"We have the right to self-determination, the right to decide our own future, unhindered by any interference from any other government; and our expressed, democratic wish is to remain British. It is time the Argentine Government accepted that."

Ms Cameron went on to say: "Our gratitude to those who fought for our freedom is unbounded and undiminished."

"Twenty eight years after the war, it is appropriate that we should re-emphasise our wish to seek peaceful cooperation with our neighbours as full participating members of the South Atlantic community, to ensure that never again will the tragedy of 1982 be repeated."

During her speech Ms Cameron also made mention of the UK election, thanking Sir Nicholas Winterton and others for their support over the years. She observed the Falklands' budgetary position remained "uncertain" and said although the fishing, farming and tourism industries have long been the mainstays of the economy, they required further development.

Ms Cameron's response to a letter printed in the Guardian on June 9 by Simon Jenkins, was printed on June 14. She informed him of the actual cost of Falklands defence, and described his use of the term colonies as "both anachronistic and inaccurate." She said we are proud of the strides made in developing our economy and if oil were discovered, we should be able to make an even bigger contribution to the cost of defence.

Police report

POLICE had a quiet weekend with only one incident, a road traffic accident reported at 10am on Sunday. It appeared a vehicle had reversed into another, either that morning or the previous evening. They are also still investigating the hit and run, which took place late Saturday, May 29. If anyone has any information on either incident, please contact the police on 28100. Also reported was the disappearance of RPC Emma Edwards' jacket, which was deemed a "non-event" by Sergeant Dave Roberts. It was picked up in error, he said, and was returned to the correct address by the mother of the person in question.

Twilight sports

TWILIGHT Sports, free sporting activities for all Community School children, will start next Friday with an "It's a Knockout" session and a free Barbecue, from 8-11pm in the Stanley Leisure Centre. Volunteers will be present, but the children will manage the events themselves. Activities will take place every Friday evening, including hockey, squash, swimming, darts and basketball. For further information contact the Stanley Leisure Centre reception on 27291 or email admin.leisure@sec.gov.fk.

Fliers available

TWO fliers on hydrocarbon exploration are now available from the Department of Mineral Resources by contacting nllloyd@mineralresources.gov.fk. The first explains in laymen's terms how an exploration well is drilled, the second explains the next steps of hydrocarbon exploration, following worst to best case scenarios, and provides a timeline of activity should commercial quantities be discovered.

Remembrance

THE annual Service of Remembrance for the Falkland Families Association took place in the Order of the British Empire Chapel, in the Crypt of St Paul's Cathedral, London, on Saturday, June 12. Some 50 relatives of those who lost their lives in 1982 attended. Following the service, floral tributes were laid at the Falklands Memorial outside the chapel.

Jury discharged

THE jury in the case of the Crown versus Colin George McDonald was discharged by Chief Justice Gardner in the Supreme Court in Stanley on Thursday. Consideration is being given to the possibility of a retrial.

SCB team undertakes training

ON Saturday June 5 all 20 members of the Stanley branch of Standard Chartered Bank participated in a one day Teamwork course run by Eileen Davies and Jock Elliot from the Training Centre.

Throughout the day in four teams of five, the group undertook a number of exercises to put into practice various team-working skills such as effective communication, cooperation and sharing knowledge and skills with others.

This was an excellent follow up to a previous course on Customer Service which the Training Centre ran for SCB two years ago.

In summing up the day's events, Eileen said that she and Jock were very impressed with the enthusiasm shown by the bank staff during the training day and their commitment to their organisation as a whole.

The winning team: Gina Tyrrell, Julie Ford, Steph Ferguson, Lizzie Newton and Nicole Jonson

Eileen was also very impressed by the fact that the bank had introduced some tangible improvement for their customers following the previous course they attended and hopes that the Teamwork course will produce similar results.

If any other local companies would like to take advantage of the training offered by the Training Centre, please contact Eileen Davies on 27133. She will be happy to hear from you.

Employment law review a high priority

A COMPREHENSIVE review of employment legislation in the Falklands is to be undertaken by the Government's Policy Department.

The current Employment Protection Ordinance, which covers all the key employment law elements, was drafted in 1989 and based on UK legislation from even earlier in the eighties.

A review of the existing law to bring it in line with best practice elsewhere in the world was a high priority of the present Legislative Assembly, said FIG's Senior Economist Michael Poole, who stressed that the intention was not to implement irrelevant EU or UK legislation, but to strike the correct balance between having as little legislation as possible and ensuring there was no exploitation of labour. The first focus of the review will be on the need for a minimum wage and any cost implications, while the second will be the terms and conditions for casual and temporary workers.

These, said Mr Poole, were the priorities put forward by Members of Legislative Assembly, but a questionnaire has been widely distributed to help the Policy Unit decide whether these are the correct priority areas and what should be looked at next, after those two areas have been addressed.

Employment law can cover areas from health and safety, leave, including sick, maternity and paternity leave, discrimination, dismissal and arbitration.

Comments from the general public are welcomed by the Policy Unit, which has assembled a consultative forum with representatives from the Chamber of Commerce, the Rural Business Association, the General Employees Union, FIG, the Attorney General's Chambers and MOD.

The first stage of the Review will result in a paper to Executive Council in August of this year giving recommendations on the first two priorities listed previously.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

THERE was great turn out at the '82 memorial on a damp grey day; a day as always of mixed emotions, sorrow and thankfulness uppermost. When I was a teenager in the mid sixties WW2, which ended 20 years before had seemed like ancient history, yet 28 years on, the events of the war here in '82 are still vividly etched in people's memories.

HOUSING is still high on the agenda with the tranche of plots at Mink Park now out for bids. FIG must house contract officers and also provide some social housing. Rent rebates are available for those in real need. It is the unanimous wish of this Assembly to encourage more people to house themselves by ensuring the availability of land and accessible mortgages. In the long term individuals are far better off paying a mortgage on their own property than paying rent for years with no asset at the end. A quick calculation shows that a rent of £500 per month is the equivalent of £90,000 over 15 years. I hope that provision of plots in various sizes will prevent some of the unsightly and anti-social infill that we have seen in recent years. We have ample space and a little lateral thinking on plot shapes will keep servicing costs as low as possible.

*****

I HAVE often wondered why we do not stay on summer time all year round, for extra minutes of daylight after working hours. Perhaps someone can explain the reason to me.

*****

LAST week was total immersion in oil affairs, with a briefing and workshop for all MLAs and a meeting of the Mineral Resources Committee. Those who pontificate from afar might do well to take a close look at the effort and expertise being dedicated to ensuring the safe and efficient conduct of the current exploration round.

*****

THIS week and the next few, when time allows, I intend to immerse myself in football. My family and cats will be subjected to the unseemly spectacle of someone old enough to know better shouting at the television.

Student exchange: not the end, but the start of something good

THERE were some sad faces on view at the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) two Fridays ago as the three week long visit by students from schools in Punta Arenas came to an end and newly made friends had to say goodbye.

Teacher Elena Barria Ampuero, who had accompanied the group from Punta Arenas, said she thought the visit had been a great success.

Mrs Barria was sure that all the pupils would have improved their English but, equally importantly, all now had a better understanding of the Falkland Islands.

Apart from making new friends in the Falkland Islands, Mrs Barria said she felt lasting friendships had also been forged among the Chilean students themselves, who, coming from different schools, had not met each other before the visit.

Mrs Barria told Penguin News that she was very happy to return to the Falklands, having worked some years ago with her husband in the tourist lodges at both Port Howard and Pebble Island, which is where, she says, she learned her first words of English.

FICS Head, Alastair Baldwin, said the students' host families had been fantastic in looking after their charges and integrating them into family activities. This had helped the visit to go well, despite the weather and the shortage of daylight at this time of year restricting the possibilities for trips and out of school activities.

Given sufficient interest among parents and children, he hoped there would be an opportunity for students from FICS to make a reciprocal visit to Punta Arenas, possibly in March of next year.

The Town Hall crowd at the Civic reception

A time to remember, a weekend to celebrate

THE 28th anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands from Argentina fell on a Monday this year, and with the start of the World Cup in South Africa, the long weekend created by the public holiday offered plenty of choices for enjoyment as well as quiet reflection.

The official celebrations began with the Liberation Dance at the Town Hall on Saturday, organised by the Badminton Club to celebrate their 60th anniversary.

Thanks largely to the presence of live music from the Light Cavalry Band and excellent tapas provided by Falklands Brasserie, this event was a sell-out success. Musical tastes from swing to Sugar Babes were catered for as the big band gave way to the Light Cavalry's rock section and kept most of the two hundred or so present on the dance floor all night.

After a flat calm Sunday, the morning of Liberation Day lived up to tradition by dawning grey and drizzly, and remained so for an hour or two before beginning to rain really hard at times during the traditional wreath-laying ceremony at the 1982 memorial.

Those who squeezed into the Cathedral for the service of remembrance and thanksgiving were able once again to enjoy the music of the Light Cavalry Band.

Following the thanksgiving service, a large crowd defied the elements to meet at the Liberation Monument, where wreaths were laid by His Excellency the Governor Alan Huckle, Commander of British Forces South Atlantic Islands Cdre Philip Thicknesse, and members of the Legislative Assembly, along with representatives of other groups and families who had lost comrades or loved ones.

The traditional parade swung along Ross Road to the Light Cavalry Band, featuring contingents from the Falkland Islands Defence Force, the Royal Navy, and the Royal Air Force.

Poignantly, this year the army contingent was provided by the Welsh Guards, returning to the Islands for the first time since suffering grievous losses in 1982. Members of the Merchant Navy and youth groups also attended.

The civic reception held after the ceremony and hosted by the Falkland Islands Government pulled in the crowds, with the Town Hall filled to bursting.

A winter walk for wildlife

MEMBERS of the Watch Group will be doing their Winter Walk for Wildlife tomorrow. We invite you to join us to raise funds for the new oiled penguin facility that Falklands Conservation are hoping to build next summer.

At the moment when oiled penguins turn up around the islands we have very limited facilities for cleaning and housing them, a simple shed with no running water or electricity. It isn't ideal, although we have had high success rates for rehabilitation of oiled penguins.

Members of the military based at MPA are going to assist in the build and are doing their own fundraising as well but anything we can do will help to make this dream a reality.

We're also hoping to buy some satellite tracking devices to attach to penguins that are cleaned and released. At the moment the last thing that staff and volunteers at Falklands Conservation and the Department of Agriculture see of the penguins is their tails as they head out to sea after release.

We want to track them to see where they go. Do they go straight out to sea to feed or do they head back to their breeding colony? How long does it take them to get back to their colony?

A satellite device will give us all of this information and more importantly give us an idea of the survival rates after they are released.

The Winter Walk for Wildlife will begin at 9.15am at the Jetty Centre car park and will finish at Surf Bay in time to watch or take part in the mid winter swim.

Our route will take us along Ross Road East towards the Narrows Bar where we will then take the coastal path down past the Seaman's Mission then along the coastline to Boxer Bridge. We will then cross the bridge and walk along the track to Surf Bay.

This year, rather than badgering friends and family for sponsor money all we ask is a £5 entry/walking fee from each walker.

Walkers will receive a certificate and sticker to mark their achievement.

The walk is open to all members of the community but please bear in mind you will need to be collected from Surf Bay at around 11.15am, just after the madness of the midwinter swim.

The tracks along the coast are quite wet and muddy so please wear sensible footwear.

See you on Saturday.

Ali Liddle

The spice of Falklands life

IN defence of the Diddle-Dee Telegraph: "chill out," Mr Editor, or, more colloquially, "don't get your knickers in a twist."

Gossip, or as we Islanders fondly call it, the Diddle-Dee Telegraph, is but one of the threads that keep our society together.

Some of the others being good neighbourliness, charity, adaptability, cheerfulness in adversity and our tolerance of newcomers who don't quite "get us" during the first months of their apprenticeship into "Immaculate Falklandship."

Sadly not everyone graduates. Thankfully most do and live to tell the tale!

The Diddle-Dee Telegraph isn't "so-called," it's alive and kicking and actually the forerunner of Facebook and Twitter.

There may be the odd malicious gossip-monger among us, but I think they are in the minority (and of course they couldn't be "local"). Joke!

The Diddle-Dee Telegraph not only means gossip. It also explains how quickly "news of note," whether true, false or wishful thinking, spreads so fast across the Islands in the days before technology: a bit like the shrub its name derives from.

Sometimes our idle talk can be self-deprecating, sometimes it can border on the ridiculous or impossible, often delivered with a deadpan expression (keep an eye out for that twinkle), which is just the way our humour works. Mostly it is informative, speculative, enlightening and just plain fun!

So, for any delicate souls out there who have led sheltered lives, here is an empowering Falklands tip: practice that eloquent Falkland shrug and say: "Well, while they're talking about me they're giving some other poor bugger a rest."

Think of it as a verbal Hello magazine: after all, you're nobody

Penguin News: Missing Links

Not a World Cup squad, but Don Bonner's photo of a Stanley team from the late 1940s. Can you name the players?

Jill Harris, Greta Skene and Eric Goss tell us that the photo from our archives printed on June 11 showed their parents Bill and Grace Goss in their wedding finery, but not on their wedding day, when the weather was too awful for photography. The couple were standing outside what is now Cartmell Cottage accompanied by bridesmaids Joan Spencer (left) and Heather Miller (later Hills). Eric believes that the picture was taken in July 1936, but says he can't be certain because he wasn't there.

until you've graced those illustrious pages! Get this down to a fine art and you'll graduate in no time!

Gossip, ignorant or otherwise, has and always will add a bit of spice and humour to often dire situations (ask anyone of the 1982 era) and, if you come across the occasional malicious person, well...that's life!

In fact gossip has sustained mankind for millennia.

The Diddle-Dee Telegraph has flourished in the Falkland Islands since the beginning, and the place would be somewhat sterile without it.

I don't think there is any danger of the good health of this community suffering in anyway... except perhaps from too much political correctness, paternalism, or humourless moralising.

So chuck the chip, chay...laugh a little!

Liberation for two countries

TO the people of Stanley: this June 14 I shared Liberation Day with you at the Cathedral Service, at the Monument and in the Town Hall.

You might ask yourselves why? The reason is that it was not only the Falkland Islands that was liberated on June 14 1982, but also all of Argentina was freed for ever from the grip of the military dictatorship.

This day I came to celebrate here with you and, if possible, the year ahead.

I am ready to face the cost in Argentina of thinking in this way.

Thanks to everyone who has helped me day by day. You are very friendly.

Remarks were irresponsible

REFERENCE your editorial (Penguin News, June 11). You recently accused Cllr Bill Luxton of having a sense of humour failure when he took you to task about your silly editorial in a previous Penguin News about supposed heckling of Assembly members at public meetings.

I go to most of the meetings so I knew it was rubbish, but this paper goes far and wide and we have no desire to be perceived as rabble rousers.

Now in last week's paper you've done it again with your spurious remarks in your editorial about a divide between what you refer to as "locals" and "outsiders" and I, and many others, have what you would call a sense of humour failure if that's how you see it.

You obviously listen to "baseless rumours." If there were to be any divide, remarks like yours only help to widen them which, in your position, is totally irresponsible.

I have every sympathy for Sandra Short and her husband and family. We all know that in the heat of the moment when people are shocked and hurt things are said, but to suggest that the perpetrator couldn't have been a "local" is a nonsense.

I would guess that whoever it was had had a beer or two over the odds and would scarp in panic, wherever they came from, or it could have been an accident given how dark the area is and with no road markings where it happened. My point is that it could have been someone of any nationality.

I haven't any doubt that the procedures followed by the hospital were relevant and correct and the staff attending were fully qualified to deal with such emergencies, even if it didn't seem so to the family at the time.

I know how distressing these things are. Having just had an accident myself, caused by gale force wind resulting in a broken pelvis and a stay in hospital, I have nothing but praise for the care and professionalism I received.

My grateful thanks to all the staff: from being picked up and taken to hospital as painlessly as possible by ambulance driver Taff and Sister Jacqui Bailey to the excellent medical and nursing care and attention (and meals) during my stay.

Last but not least my thanks to my wonderful family both here and overseas. There's an old saying that you reap what you sow.

All I can say is that we must have sowed some damn good seed, and all the people who have sent me cards and messages I'm glad to report I am zooming around on my Zimmer frame quite comfortably, if a bit slower than usual!

Joyce Allan

Editor's clarification: Neither Sandra Short nor her family made any reference to the origins of the perpetrator, nor was his/her nationality raised in the editorial.

Welsh Guards first return to salute their fallen comrades

FOR the first time since 1982, when they lost 36 of their men in the aerial attack on the RFA Sir Galahad, the Welsh Guards are back in the Falklands.

Taking over from the King's Royal Hussars as the Roulement Infantry Company at MPC, 3 Company Welsh Guards' arrival in the Islands coincided with the Fitzroy commemoration service held on Tuesday 8th June.

In 1982, the Welsh Guards commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel John Rickett formed part of the 5th Infantry Brigade. The Guards were on board the ill-fated Sir Galahad, accompanied by Sir Tristram, waiting to be landed at Bluff Cove, when they suffered an air attack culminating in a dreadfully high number of fatalities and burn casualties.

Major Nicky Bott, Quartermaster, is the last Falklands War Veteran serving in the Welsh Guards. It is his first return since 1982.

Major Bott, 47, was on the Sir Galahad along with his brother Billy, and pointed out the sheds in Fitzroy where they had the spent the night, when they had reached land after the brutal bombings.

A salute to fallen comrades at the Welsh Guards monument

"The Service was very moving for me; it was really nice for the young lads to meet the Falkland Island people and understand the history behind the cap badge."

Billy is now the Garrison Sergeant Major of London District. His younger brother Johnny also joined and was the Regimental Sergeant Major. They followed the footsteps of both of their parents who served with the Royal Army Medical Corps and the Women's Royal Auxiliary Corps. Nicky hopes to return with Billy in the not too distant future.

Major Daniel Gallimore, Officer Commanding 3 Company, Welsh Guards, expressed his delight with the Fitzroy service and with the chance to meet Fitzroy residents later at the social club:

"It was fantastic for our young lads to have the legacy of the regiment so explicit and touchable."

"The hospitality of the residents of Fitzroy really was second to none and was overwhelming for some of the guardsmen. I think some of them were quite shocked! We were really wonderfully well looked after."

Major Gallimore commented on how the land of the Falkland Islands is very similar to that in North Wales.

He added: "This deployment as the Roulement Infantry Company has been a fantastic opportunity, very poignant for us and it has been good to get out on the ground after a particularly heavy tour in Helmand last summer."

After the service the 3 Company returned and Sgt Peters laid a wreath on the sea. His stepfather and step-uncles were on Sir Galahad; one of them lost his life.

The Welsh Guards have been exceedingly busy over the last few years, including doing ceremonial duty in London, exercises in Belize, Canada and Germany, the Queen's Birthday Parade and deployments in Bosnia and Afghanistan.

Banks in Buenos Aires Picture: Complimentary/Gilson Pereira

Banks in BA to return trumpet

FALKLANDS veteran and now millionaire care home owner, Tony Banks, who visited the Islands recently, had been on his travels again, this time to Buenos Aires to return to its owner a trumpet he confiscated at the end of the Falklands War.

Tony Banks was a Scottish paratrooper ordered to dispossess Argentine troops of everything except their clothes after the fierce battle for Goose Green, and Omar Tabarez was an army musician who was forced to hand over the trumpet he was carrying.

The two veterans will come face to face again in Buenos Aires on Wednesday when Banks, 48, will hand back the trumpet in a ceremony endorsed by the Argentine government, which has said it would honour the entrepreneur for his gesture and his "good attitude" in returning to the country with the instrument.

Community is praised for a magnificent charity effort

REFERENCE to the close links which exist between the Falkland Islands and Chile was made by Legislative Assembly Member Dick Sawle on Thursday night, at a reception held in Government House for those who had helped with the recent fundraising response to the catastrophic earthquake which hit Chile on February 27.

Cllr Sawle paid tribute to the generosity of the Falkland Islands community and the hard work of those who contributed to the fundraising effort, but particularly to Mrs Celia Short, who was the principal organiser of the relief fund.

"On Saturday February 27 this year, Chile was devastated by an earthquake of magnitude 8.8 in the early hours of the morning at about 3.30pm when most people were asleep," he said.

"Over 500 people were killed and many others were left homeless and without power, in some cases for many days. It is hard for us to imagine the experience of movement, noise, dust and panic that this must have caused.

"It was only a few days later that Celia decided to set up an appeal fund to raise funds in the Falkland Islands – funds that would not just be a message of sympathy and support but also funds that would make a real difference and be remembered.

"But fundraising was not enough for Celia. She was keen to see that the funds would be targeted and used somewhere where it would be remembered and would make a very real difference."

A giant cheque for £26,600.19, the total in the fund when it closed

Celia Short at Government House holds the giant cheque as Cllr Sawle speaks on June 1, was presented to Mrs Short by Teresa McGill of Standard Chartered Bank.

The money raised is going to go specifically to the town of Lolol, which is in Colchagua province in Chile's Sixth Region.

With a population of about 6,000 people, and described as a small rural town with strong links to its colonial past, Lolol, which was situated close to the earthquake's epicentre, lost something in the region of 800 homes when the earthquake struck.

The intention of the appeal's organisers was to identify an area where there was much devastation and an extreme need for assistance.

It was also the hope that by supporting a single community the benefit of the funds raised in the Falklands could be seen and, perhaps, a permanent link established between the two communities.

Mrs Short said the decision to devote the funds to Lolol was the result of much research.

The need to act quickly and provide housing is paramount because the winter is coming.

Cllr Sawle said: "But there is more to it than just raising funds. Chile has always been a very close neighbour of ours – not just geographically but also in spirit.

"The Falkland Islands, with a population of half that of Lolol, has embraced and welcomed many Chileans into its community, and it is that sense of friendship and brotherhood that has led to such a huge support from the community here in the Falklands.

"I would like to thank His Excellency the Governor and Mrs Huckle for hosting this important occasion and would finish by asking all of you to show your support and thanks to Celia, and also to yourselves, for this magnificent achievement."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that in the event of an emergency where no other form of communication are available, that the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the following frequencies

VHF 2 metre Band

147.725 (Duplex - 0.6).... Mount Caroline repeater, covering the north of the West Falkland including the cross Sound ferry main operational area
146.625... Stanley to Mount Alice
147.825 (Duplex - 0.6).... Mount Alice repeater, covering the south of West Falkland.

Marine Band

156.800... Channel 16 (Stanley area)

2.182 MHz HF

In the event that communications fail on all the above frequencies then the RFIP may be contacted direct on 153.650 (duplex + 1.6). It is unlikely that this frequency will be functional from West Falkland.

It must be stressed that calling the Royal Falkland Islands Police on any of these frequencies must only be done in the event of an emergency

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 10th June 2010

Ian Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands

The AWEX rose once again in both Australian and US Dollar terms which builds on the last two weekly increases.

The market indicator rose to 514 p/kg

Once again it is seen as supply driven with the smallest Australian offering in 12 months.

Seeing good clearance rates. The South African wool selling season has ended now and will resume in a couple of months.

Talk of the town

Penguin News Vox Pop
Do you think the performance of the police has improved in the last six months?

Verity Livermore

They're better, but there's still room for improvement.

With the police walking around the streets more, there are a lot less underage kids about at night time.

Cara Jordan

You see them drive around and not walking that much, but what do they actually do?

Lucy Ellis

As I haven't actually clapped eyes on them, I wouldn't have a clue to be honest.

Ian France

They come into the electrical store to look around as part of their community service, but to be honest I haven't seen them much, apart from outside the pubs on a weekend.

Viv Briones

I haven't noticed any difference to be honest. You used to see them on the beat, but I haven't for a while.

Scott Betts

Working with the pub staff they've improved safety at Deano's. There are a couple of better looking ones now, so I would say yes!

Jock Sutherland

I haven't heard anything about them. I don't know what they're doing at the moment. They're very quiet.

Tamara McCormick

I think they have improved because they've been checking up in the pubs and making sure no fights are going on.

Jelly Tots set to celebrate a fun 21 years

JELLY Tots under five toddler play group celebrated its 21st Birthday on May 23 this year. To honour this Jelly Tots are holding their annual Fancy Dress Party and 21st Birthday Party this weekend in the Town Hall from 2-4.20pm.

It seems such a long time since its humble beginnings following its creation after a public meeting. Fifteen mothers and Phil Middleton decided on the first committee which consisted of Christel Mercer, Marilyn Hall, Stella Middleton, Sharon Zuvic, Vanda McDonald and Rosemary King.

Shortly after the public meeting in 1989 the group first met in the refreshment room of the Town Hall and decided to run on a Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 2-3.30pm.

As the group became more popular they were forced to move and found a new home in the KEMH Day Centre in July 1989.

Some notable committee members over the years have been people such as Fran Biggs, Leann Harris, Anya Coffrey, Diane McGill, Sue Wilks, Miranda McKee and many others who have worked tirelessly for Jelly Tots over the years. Without all of their hard work there would not be a Jelly Tots today to enjoy.

Thank you to all committee members for keeping it going.

As the Jelly Tots group got busier and busier a decision was made to take on a helper and on September 11 1992 Keva Hanson joined the Jelly Tots Group to take on this role. The role involved putting out the toys and tidying them up, making drinks and snacks for snack time and making the mothers, fathers or carers cups of tea and coffee, a role that Keva continues today 18 years on. Jelly Tots would be lost without her. Thanks Keva for all the hard work.

The highlight of any Jelly Tots session is snack time. I'm not sure who enjoys it most, Keva or the children.

After a brief stint at St Mary's Church Hall Jelly Tots finally moved to Christ Church Cathedral Parish Hall in 1995 and has been there ever since.

On December 1 1999 Jelly Tots became a registered charity thanks in part to the work of Leann Harris.

They have hundreds of toys to play with such as bikes, scooters, cars, tricycles, tractors, slides and even a rollercoaster. The current committee includes Rosie Bright, Michelle Stephenson, Michelle Trowel, Catherine Catton, Angie Harris, Kelly Morrison and Jo Turner.

Every year the group holds a Christmas Party for all of the under fives in Stanley. They also have an Easter Party and the annual Fancy Dress Party which does pre-date the formation of the Jelly Tots Group.

They have a cake stall at most occasions throughout the East and West and are always looking for good quality large toys or donations of any kind.

Sessions are on Tuesdays 1.45-3.30pm and Thursdays 10-11.30am. Prices are 50p for under 1s, £1.50 for ages 1-5 and tea and coffee is 50p.

Don't forget the Fancy Dress and 21st Birthday Party are on Sunday June 20 from 2-4.30pm in the Town Hall.

Moto-X prize giving dance

THE FIDE hall was positively bouncing on Saturday June 5, and the early hours of Sunday, as the Falkland Islands motorcycling elite along with their extended families assembled for the first FIMA annual prize giving dance in a long time.

Highlights of the evening had to be the motorcycle racing, watching Harold Neilson earn fifty pound for FIMA by wearing Sammy Hirtle's jeans without injuring his family jewels and the great choice of music by Stacy Bragger.

Winners of the night were the riders and helpers who helped to make the 2009/10 season a resounding success.

But a couple of guys that received no trophies or accolades were Jay Moffatt and Chris Hawksworth the President and Secretary. Their many hours of selfless time involved in organising these events was reflected in the enjoyment the season brought to so many people, be they racers or spectators. So well done boys.

Aside from the first, second and third placings there were a number of other awards given. Best AOT went to Scott Roberts, Most Entertaining Rider to Dominic Watson and Most Improved Riders to Nathan Gemmill, Travis McGill and Roger Shillitoe.

The Murray Walker award was given to Andrew Newman for his outstanding radio commentaries, and finally a special lifetime membership award was given to Jimmy Moffatt for his long association in helping to promote Moto-X in the Falklands.

Many thanks to all the land owners, sponsors, lap-dancing girls, the medical team, all the marshals and of course the riders and spectators and anyone I may have forgotten that has made this season one to remember.

Richard Marlor and man of the match Elliott Taylforth

Elliott inspires historic victory

THE Falkland Islands blew away Costa Rica in the International Cricket Council (ICC) Americas Championship Division 4 game played at the Reforma Athletic ground in Mexico on Tuesday.

A devastating spell of medium pace bowling from Elliott Taylforth caused all the damage in the 50-over match. He took six wickets for 14 runs including a hat-trick and completed the overs by taking another wicket for a four wicket maiden.

The Falklands Cricket team left the Islands on Saturday to fly to Mexico, for the first match they have played internationally since 2007 against Chile.

The Falklands team's innings had folded with 11.3 overs remaining for 131 runs, the game looking all but lost at that stage. However, they never gave up hope. Spirits were lifted when Taylforth had Costa Rican Tim Baker caught by Collins without a run on the board. Ben Smith then threatened to take the game away from the Falklands, but went caught at midoff to leave the Costa Ricans on 44 for 2.

After the break for lunch the game went backwards and forwards until the 29th over. Costa Rica was poised at 92 for 6, in need of 39 runs for victory, when the later named man of the match

Elliott Taylforth stepped up. Described by a spectator as the most exhilarating finish to a cricket match, the ICC website reported, Taylforth came back into the attack from the northern end of the ground and, with his first ball of the over, had Richard Illingworth caught at gully by Ian Betts.

This success encouraged the Falkland's to go on an all out attack with two slips, two gullies and all fielders inside the circle. The second ball of the over brought Garth Tweedale forward only to see the ball being snapped up by Richard Marlor at one of the two gullies.

With Taylforth on a hat-trick, the perfect delivery saw next man Sheriff groping forward and again Marlor in the gully did the honours.

The Falkland Islanders were jumping and screaming with delight for captain Taylforth but also at the sight of a well deserved victory. The Costa Rica innings ended with the score of 92 to give the Falkland's victory by 39 runs.

The Falklands have now played four matches in their first ICC-sanctioned international tournament. They played Mexico in a 50 over match on Wednesday, and yesterday played both teams in 20 over matches.

Great winter's day golf

A CONTRAST to the previous week. Sunday dawned as a perfect day for low golf scores. Those on the course were playing in the Decor Services sponsored June Medal.

Ten players went around on a great winter's day; enough players for everyone to at least get a point.

In second place with a score of 65 net was Stewart Haines, but with his all-time best round of 73 gross and a 61 net was Tony McMullen also getting two birdies on his card.

All new handicaps will be posted up before the next medal, weather permitting, on July 4, 2010. Thank you to Decor Services for their sponsorship.

New contract secured for CE on second vote

ALTHOUGH word had been on the street for some time that the contract for Chief Executive Tim Thorogood was likely to be extended, the official announcement on Friday was still met with some astonishment by the public.

In the lead up to the November election, seven of the eight successful candidates made public their displeasure with the government review and, in some cases, Mr Thorogood himself.

When it came to the deciding moment, which was on a second vote and after the Governor had reminded members that both he and the Attorney General would be leaving the Islands later this year, only three Assembly Members voted against the contract being renewed.

In the first vote, five had been against and three in favour, but the Governor's reminder had been enough to sway Mr Thorogood's two most vocal critics.

In the lead up to the election Cllr Sharon Halford likened FIG to a tree with branches spreading everywhere, some of which were getting well overgrown. She said: "This tree needs a thorough and good pruning, without which it is likely to topple over through sheer weight of management." She made no bones about her careful choice of words.

Cllr Bill Luxton said the previous council had been completely supine in the face of an "aggressive Chief Executive building up his own empire," adding that he was "an extraordinarily unpopular figure with both the civil service and the public."

Almost eight months after being elected, both Cllrs Halford and Luxton are now of the opinion that Mr Thorogood had and continues to act only on the direction of the Assembly in power.

Cllr Luxton told the Penguin News: "Since being inside the tent as it were, it is apparent that in fact the CE never made a move that was not driven by the previous council. That is the way he works and every single decision and action was at the instigation or with the approval of the previous council.

It was cold, it was icy, it was sheer midwinter madness: see centre pages

"Perhaps the electorate saw this and that is why they were all voted out." In the past eight months everything the CE had done had been with the approval of the majority of present Assembly Members, he said.

Cllr Luxton said he was persuaded it was not in the best interest to have three senior posts change in such a short time, but added he had approved a one year extension only, that the final decision was by a majority of MLAs, with views covering all the possibilities.

"It's a critical time for the Islands with Argentine pressure and oil development potential," said Cllr Luxton, and to be advertising the position at this time would have attracted a "swathe of carpet baggers with lots of personal ambition."

He concluded: "I think it is now in the Islands' best interest for all MLAs to pull together and go forward from here in what is a very difficult time for the Islands."

Cllr Halford declined to answer any direct questions from the Penguin News, saying she had already explained the full process of Mr Thorogood's contract renewal to the members of her electorate and others in her weekly round-up.

In the final vote Cllrs Roger and Emma Edwards along with Cllr Glenn Ross maintained their opposition to the proposal.

Cllr Ross said the debate had been "full and frank." He agreed the CE had had Executive Council approval for his earlier actions, and had worked closely with the new Assembly in forming new policies. He had accepted and moved on when a proposal sponsored by him had been turned down, he said.

However, Cllr Ross did not agree that the departure of the Governor and Attorney General were contributory factors to renewing the contract: "In each role the individual can bring a style or personality, but ultimately, in the case of the Governor, you are in the room with the FCO, and the Attorney General will advise on the law of the land," he said.

Cllr Ross said he voted in the way those who had elected him would wish. He said he accepted the majority decision and looked forward to working with the CE in the same vein as the first months of the new Assembly.

Cllr Roger Edwards said he had not been in support of the renewal as, by January 2011, Mr Thorogood would have completed three years. He said he felt there was a need to move away from a government background to a business one, especially with oil on the horizon.

"We are as a body looking more and more at posts being given to Islanders," he said. The changeover of Governor and AG did not impact on his decision, he said, but as a democracy, the majority view must prevail.

Cllr Emma Edwards consulted her constituents and acted on the majority response which was not in favour of contract renewal.

She said she stood by what she had said prior to the election, that super heads were not right for the Islands: "When they come up for renewal, I will stand by what I have said and not agree to the post being continued," she said.

Mr Thorogood is currently on holiday overseas and was not available for comment.

Penguin News

MEMBERS of the Legislative Assembly were elected on a surge of support from an electorate seeking change, transparency and a return to simplified governance. Voters argued the previous Assembly ignored their concerns and conducted too much business behind closed doors. They also were dismayed with the Chief Executive's sweeping review of the civil service, and the installation of "superheads."

The new councillors promised to recognise the groundswell of opinion, and most shared the community's dislike of Tim Thorogood's changes.

So why did they extend his contract by two years – which will be seen as effectively endorsing those changes – and how can they hold their collective heads high when so many of them were so vocal in their opposition to his top-heavy reforms?

Six members were openly critical of the Chief Executive's review during the hustings and a seventh, Glenn Ross, indicated this week he did not want Mr Thorogood to stay on.

Bill Luxton was perhaps his fiercest critic: "The last council seem to have been completely supine in the face of an aggressive Chief Executive building up his own empire," he wrote in his manifesto.

Sharon Halford likened FIG to "a tree with branches spreading everywhere." And she picked her words deliberately: "This tree needs a thorough and good pruning, without which it is likely to topple over through sheer weight of management."

Jan Cheek was more circumspect than her colleagues, and said nothing in print about the issue. But she did emphasise: "People must know that their views are being given due respect and attention."

Well, have they? Or is this decision a collective contradiction of some of the sentiments which swept them into their posts? You tell us... that is, if your employer allows you.

And another thing...

THIS week's magistrate's court proceedings were originally listed for 10am on Wednesday – until a late change was announced, shifting the time to 2pm. Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said "certain representations" had been made to him, as a result of which "we have decided that it would be more convenient for the court hearings to take place in the afternoon." England kicked off their final group game in the World Cup at 10m on Wednesday.

Man jailed for underage sex

MOUNT Pleasant man Rico Jaye Anthony (19) was sentenced to 12 months' detention in a young offenders institution in the Senior Magistrate's Court on Wednesday, having pleaded guilty to a charge of sexual activity with a child.

The offence took place early this year.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said: "I have regard to the facts that the defendant has shown no genuine remorse and committed the offence deliberately and in full knowledge of the age of the victim, and I find that the risk of re-offending is therefore significant." He reminded the court that the purpose of section 9 of the Sexual Offences Act was the protection of children from sexual exploitation as well as punishing those who exploited them, and that sentencing could act as a deterrent. He said the offence was such that a non-custodial sentence could not be justified, and that there were no mitigating factors.

Due to Mr Anthony's early guilty plea Mr Trevaskis reduced the sentence, which would have stood at 21 months, by one third, and allowed a reduction of a further two months to reflect the age and previous good character of the defendant.

Window collision

TRINA Bernsen (40) of Stanley was ordered to pay a fine of £200 and prosecution costs of £80 on Wednesday, when she pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without due care and attention.

The offence took place early on the afternoon on May 4, when Ms Bernsen drove into the Seafish Chandlery car park. The vehicle was not travelling at excessive speed, it was believed by a witness at the scene.

Her Land Rover Discovery mounted the concrete kerb and collided with the shop window which smashed.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson said Ms Bernsen was deeply sorry for the incident, and was blank as to what might have happened, although she did believe it was possible her foot may have touched the accelerator when she was reaching for the brake, as the vehicle was new to her.

Momentary lapse

ALASTAIR Crawford Baldwin was fined £400 plus £80 costs after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without due care and attention on March 18.

The court heard that Mr Baldwin had collided with a scooter on H Jones Road at 7.30pm, resulting in broken kneecap and cuts and bruises for the driver.

Mr Baldwin said it had been dark with no street lights and he had not seen the scooter approaching.

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis gave Mr Baldwin full credit for his early guilty plea and said the conditions described had demanded a greater degree of care. However, he accepted there had been a momentary lapse in concentration.

Pleaded guilty of assault

FINED £200 and ordered to pay £70 compensation and £80 prosecution costs, Stanley man Clint Short pleaded guilty to a charge of assault on Wednesday in the Senior Magistrate's Court.

The assault took place in the Victory Bar on May 23, against Mr Rhys Clifford. Crown Counsel Elliott Taylforth said Mr Short believed the victim said something behind his back and, after the victim refused to go outside, Mr Short had head-butted him.

Mr Short said: "It was a terrible mistake, I'm really sorry. I shouldn't have done it, it was out of order."

Senior Magistrate John Trevaskis said it was out of character: "It was a single blow, albeit to the head" he added.

Members defend the decision to back CE

ASSEMBLY Members Jan Cheek, Dick Sawle and Gavin Short joined Bill Luxton and Sharon Halford in supporting the extension of the contract of Chief Executive Tim Thorogood at a second vote.

Prior to the election Cllr Cheek made it clear that any criticism she had was of some of the policies of the previous Assembly and not of any of the individuals paid to implement them.

She said she continued to give due respect and attention to the views of people who approached her on any subject and would continue to do so.

When asked for the reasoning behind her vote and how the decision was made, she told the Penguin News: "Many issues are decided on a majority vote and it is not for me to go into details of any such vote."

Cllr Short, who is currently in New York attending the C24 conference, said the contract renewal provided continuity: "A case maybe of the devil you know," he quipped in his inimitable way.

Before the election Cllr Short was adamant a new Assembly would have to initiate a review of the whole government, including "each and every contract post from the Chief Executive down." He said posts that could be done without should be eliminated and those deemed necessary scrutinised to see just how quickly a local person could be in place. He anticipated a degree of resistance but, he said, "not from the general public."

He said he was still of the view that super heads were not necessary, but didn't think he had been "braying for the CE's head" then, and had taken a pragmatic approach since.

"Since the election, I cannot fault the CE in any way as he has always kept us in the picture and carried out our instructions to the letter," he said. "We are entering an extremely delicate time in my humble opinion and one that requires continuity."

As to the civil service, Cllr Short said: "The CE will do as we ask him and, if that includes us de-super heading the establishment, then so be it."

Cllr Sawle also was critical of the government review in the lead up to the election, saying local knowledge had been lost in yet another review process that had achieved "little other than add more complication and additional layers to the system." A new Assembly, he said, needed to "listen more and take account of what people are saying."

Asked how he could justify those comments in the light of the latest decision, he said he had listened and had made enquiries more recently.

"The result of the review is with us, whether or not we like it, and I am happy that the CE's review was properly undertaken and broke no rules," he said.

"The review has caused much upset - there is no doubt about that - but it was done and we must move on. The review of government, which was quite rightly questioned, has been explained to me and I am happy that it was approved at all stages by the Assembly members at the time, and that no 'rules' were broken in carrying it out."

Cllr Sawle had stated publicly he was in favour of offering a new contract from the offset, and he was in favour of continuity at a time when there were to be changes in three senior positions.

"The risks in making changes at this time outweighed any desire for change," he said.

Asked by the Penguin News if this move would achieve the desired boost to morale in the civil service he had mooted pre-election, he said: "I believe morale has improved with the new Assembly and the change of leadership this has brought about. I believe that our change of style has also been reflected by the Chief Executive."

Taiana resigns

ARGENTINE Foreign Minister Jorge Taiana (60) has resigned, and will be succeeded by Argentina's ambassador to the US, Hector Timmerman. Mr Taiana was a political prisoner for seven years, and was released in 1982, a year before the end of Argentina's last military regime. He recently testified in a human rights abuse trial against leaders of the dictatorship.

IAP membership

THE Falkland Islands Government's legal department has been granted organisational membership of the International Association of Prosecutors. As the only worldwide association of prosecutors, with more than 130 members, it aims to develop cooperation to enable offenders to be more effectively brought to justice while promoting universal standards for the rule of law.

Two-nighter

GOOSE Green will be hosting a two-nighter on Friday and Saturday July 2 and 3, with all money raised donated to the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust. On the Saturday morning there will fun events for the children, and the afternoon will be spent at the club, with adult fun and games.

Child allowance

EXCO yesterday confirmed Family Allowance would no longer be paid for children who have reached their 16th birthday. Subject to a Bill to amend the ordinance, the change is due to come into effect on July 1, at the same time as other changes to Family Allowance, and will include 16-year-olds who are still in compulsory education.

Raleigh's blocks

HMS Raleigh's four new accommodation blocks at the Royal Navy training base at Torpoint in the UK have been named Antelope, Ardent, Sir Galahad and Conqueror, paying tribute to the units sent to liberate the Islands in 1982.

Swim take two

THERE is to be a second midwinter swim tomorrow to allow the military to participate. Everyone is welcome. Registration is between 10am and 11am at Surf Bay, and the swim will take place at 11.30am.

Good supply

DESPITE a slow start, supply to the Abattoir for the 2010 export season has gone well, with FLH supplying 12,143 sheep, 7,745 lambs and 42 beef.

Fans gather at nailbiters

THE World Cup has had England fans in the Falklands on the edge of their seats. Having qualified on Wednesday, England now face Germany on Sunday and - if they win that - they can expect a titanic tussle with Argentina at 10am on July 3.

A busy weekend with fire and ice

ON Saturday the police and fire service were called to attend a fire in a portakabin in Ian Campbell Drive.

The police station received the 999 call shortly before 11am. When the services arrived at the address, it was apparent an acetylene bottle was on fire.

The portakabin also contained other dangerous items. Chief Supt Gary Finchett said, such as other oxygen and propane cylinders.

"We quickly decided we needed to evacuate a number of houses," he said. "About 20 houses were evacuated and about ten families were displaced to the Stanley Arms whilst the fire and rescue service fought the fire, and the police managed the cordons to make sure nobody got into that dangerous area."

The situation took over 24 hours to resolve, with families from three houses unable to return to their homes overnight. Later, Chief Supt Finchett said, they could see the cylinders were cooling well, but precautionary measures had to be taken. He thanked the Stanley Arms for looking after people during the incident, and the public for their cooperation.

There were also several minor road traffic "near misses" reported to the police during the bad weather. On Saturday afternoon two vehicles left the MPA road, one by the wind turbines and one by Boot Hill, and on Sunday a Land Rover ended up on its side in a ditch on the Mount Kent road near to Johnsons Harbour.

Chief Supt Finchett advised drivers to "slow down, wear your seat belt, use headlights and just use caution" during poor weather.

THE timing of the resignation of Argentine Foreign Minister Taiana is interesting with the Committee of 24 meeting this week. His replacement is the son of Jacobo Timernan, a newspaper editor locked up during the dirty war.

Timernan senior was fortunate to be released to the US rather than disappear like so many of his compatriots. His book "Prisoner Without a Name, Cell Without a Number," along with the writing of Anglo-Argentine journalist Andrew Graham-Yooll, alerted us to the murderous excesses of the Junta. It is good to see that at least some in that country recognise the fact that the military defeat in the Falklands was a first step back to democracy. I guess it is too much to hope that Timernan junior, with his strong association with human rights organisations, might recognise our right to self-determination.

Legislative Assembly Diary

Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

AS well as the usual monthly round of meetings, four MLAs met with the Year 11 students who have just finished their GCSE exams. It was fascinating to hear from them the careers that are currently in vogue, I'll follow their future progress with great interest and hope all earn success. Unfortunately it appeared that none is interested in an apprenticeship. I think the trades are often undervalued by parents and students alike; another reason to look again at the "modern" apprenticeships to ensure that they really do satisfy the requirements of employers and the apprentices.

THERE seems to be confusion about the role of Assembly members in appointment of government officers but I can confirm that the only post where we have input is that of Chief Executive. This is because a major part of that role is to oversee the implementation of Assembly policy. The Assembly can vote money to fund other posts, or choose to remove posts from the establishment, but plays no part in appointments to those posts.

Exco occasionally deals with requests to extend contracts beyond two terms until an individual qualifies to apply on local terms.

PLEASE note that due to a swap I am spokesperson until the July public meeting.

Edwards and Short to address UN committee

EMMA Edwards and Gavin Short were yesterday preparing to defend the rights of Falkland Islanders before a United Nations committee, as Argentina also prepared to flex its muscles on the sovereignty issue.

The two Assembly members are in New York to address the UN Decolonisation Committee, or C24.

Media agency UPI quoted diplomats saying the meeting was "an annual ritual, notorious for a lot of talk and little action."

But it anticipated Argentina to up the ante on the back of its argument over oil exploration in Falklands waters.

Argentina also recently won support for its cause from the Union of South American Nations, a grouping of nations that want to see US influence - and by implicit extension the UK - removed from South America and South Atlantic region.

And, UPI claimed, military defences on the Islands were being bolstered because of Argentine pronouncements.

However, the new British coalition headed by PM David Cameron and Deputy PM Nick Clegg has again reinforced its support of the Falklands right to self-determination and to develop its own hydrocarbons industry.

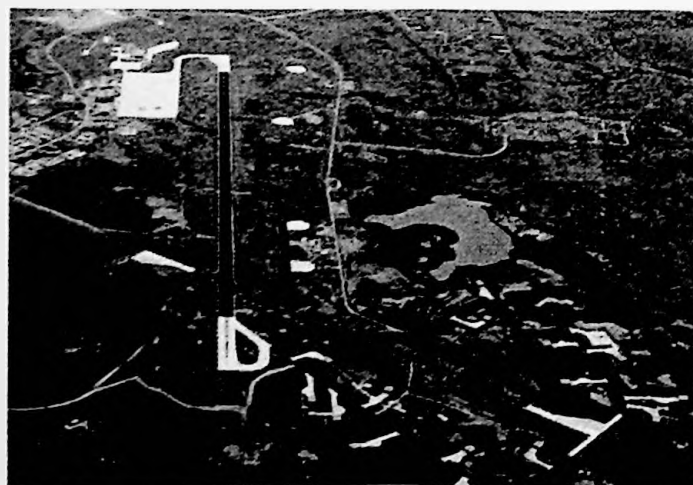

Last Friday Mr Clegg said: "We will not compromise the rights, preferences and sovereignty of the Falklands."

"We clearly want the Falklands to remain as part of the United Kingdom."

Ms Edwards and Mr Short were expected to present vigorous arguments to the committee to counter the latest series of Argentine claims.

Assembly members have long argued that if Argentina cooperated on the issue of hydrocarbons then the whole region could benefit. But, given their track record on breaking promises, this was unlikely.

Business as usual as MPA gets a makeover

Mount Pleasant Airport awaiting resurfacing later this year

TWO 767-300s have been confirmed as the aircraft to be used for the South Atlantic Airbridge while the Mount Pleasant runway is being resurfaced later this year.

Engineering company SOLAS has been contracted to carry out the work between September and the spring of 2011.

The 25-year-old runway and some taxiways are to be resurfaced. However, an operating window for large aircraft will open each weekend throughout the project.

Work will cease on the runway each weekend to allow the airbridge and LAN flights to operate and the full South Atlantic Airbridge will continue to operate on a restructured schedule for both passenger and freight flights.

A military spokesperson said everyone in the Falklands should be reassured that throughout the project's life the Quick Reaction Alert aircraft and Search and Rescue helicopters would continue to be in position to launch at any and all times.

He said: "In short, British Forces South Atlantic Islands will be able to operate its full military capability including air defence."

Should you have any questions about the project contact Squadron Leader Kev Eaton on mpafiaw-sengo@mountpleasant.mod.uk in the first instance.

Photographer, shearer and artist gain awards

QUALITY of life in the Falklands is set to be further enhanced this year with visits from a shearing instructor and an artist, while a young Islander is off to South Georgia and a sponge taxonomist is to return.

These awards are in addition to the four Academic Awards announced by the Shackleton Scholarship Fund last month.

The Shackleton Scholarship Fund Quality of Life Awards provide funding to people whose visits to the Falkland Islands, or from the Falkland Islands to other parts of the world, benefit the region and enhance the quality of life off the Islanders. In the past these have included top class sports coaches in swimming, golf, fly fishing, shooting and horsemanship; musicians and artists.

Doug Lambie, an aptly named shearing instructor with over 30 years experience, will be in the Falklands for about four weeks in October and November. During that time he will visit Goose Green, the North Camp and West Falkland providing instruction to beginner, novice and advanced shearers.

The second award went to artist Bruce Pearson to assist with his project Troubled Waters: Art and Conservation in a Creative Partnership.

Shackleton Fund secretary Sally Ellis said Mr Pearson's work produces visual art forms which explore species, habitats and broader conservation issues with an aim to raising environmental awareness.

The Falklands part of the project will concentrate on seabirds, particularly albatross and the dangers they face within the fishing industry. In return for funding Mr Pearson has agreed to donate two pieces of artwork for display and subsequent auction, with the proceeds being donated to relevant charities in the Falklands and South Georgia.

Mrs Ellis said the Committee were also delighted to provide funding to Falkland Islander Adam Howe for a photographic project on South Georgia entitled Familiarity in a Foreign Landscape.

Adam is currently doing a BA Honours in Photography at Southampton Solent University.

With this project he aims to explore the association of all areas of the South Atlantic and produce conceptual images which could be used widely in marketing many industries.

Mr Howe will hold an exhibition of his finished work and have pieces available for purchase.

A fourth Quality of Life award was not taken up, so the committee decided to provide funding to returning academic award winner Dr Claire Goodwin, a sponge taxonomist, who will be working with the Shallow Marine Survey Group to enhance their Darwin Initiative Project funded survey, off the northern coast of South Georgia in November and December.

Young Westers fly the flag in honour of 1982 veterans

WEST Falkland youngsters put their excess energy to good use on Liberation Day when they took on a 27 mile cycle and raised £120 for SAMA in the process.

Dale and Niall Evans, 14 and nine years old respectively, decided that they would cycle to Fox Bay from their parent's farm Spring Point, and that it would be fun!

Donna said she and Mike gave the intrepid youngsters a couple of hours before catching up with them at the Fox Bay Malo, where Amanda McGhie (10) and Shaun Evans (12) unloaded their bikes from the pickup and started pedalling too! Gareth McGhie took up the chase on foot but also got to cycle later on.

Dale managed to do the total distance into Fox Bay in five hours and 45 minutes.

Later at the club they were praised by West Falkland residents who had gathered to celebrate, for their enthusiasm and efforts and generous donations were made to SAMA for their efforts.

The young cyclists presented a cheque to Chairman of the Falklands branch of SAMA Gary Clement, accompanied by 1982 veteran Curly Elstow on Wednesday at Stanley House Hostel.

Mr Clement congratulated the young people, especially Dale who had cycled the entire distance. He said: "I would like to thank them for thinking of such a poignant charity on such a fitting day."

Preservation of the Lady Liz

RECENTLY there has been some conversation and exchange of emails on the "Falkland Reunion / Chay's stop for Smoko" Facebook site, started and managed by Rock Berntsen, which as of today has over 470 members, in regard to the preservation of the wonderful heritage of old ships that exists in the Falklands.

Dee Jennings, a Falkland Islander and well known artist presently living in Ireland and who has done quite a lot of fact gathering on the subject, has suggested that the Lady Elizabeth would be a good subject for consideration for some preservation activity, before final disintegration takes place and any effort at recovery becomes impossible.

We have seen in recent years, to all intents and purposes, the demise of the Charles Cooper, the disintegration of the fore part of the Jelhum, with the after part no doubt soon to follow. In earlier years the Fennia was also rather disgracefully lost to the Islands and the world by a series of bad decision making.

It is easy, no doubt, to overlook maritime heritage when other more pressing matters are at hand; equally it is also just as easy in my mind, given the rapidly deteriorating condition of the now meagre remains of old ships in Stanley Harbour, to envisage a harbour which will have no maritime heritage left other than a few wooden knee joints and some rusty ribs to remind us vaguely of a proud past.

In about 1970 a survey apparently showed that the Lady Liz could at that time have been repaired and re-floated and put into reasonable working condition, sadly it would seem that with the passage of time that option is probably no longer open to us as her deterioration has advanced so much. It seems that apart from the broken jib boom some plates are rusted through, wooden decking is turning to powder and if her substantial cross tree is not soon lowered to deck level it may fall of its own accord and literally destroy the ship amidships for once and for all.

What to do? There has been a suggestion on 'Chay's Smoko' that money should be raised to at least take some minimum precautions to prevent any further deterioration of the condition of the Lady Liz. Such as lowering the cross tree as a matter of urgency and building a breakwater or coffer dam connected to the shore, to protect what is left of the hull from

Penguin News: Missing Links

THE above picture, of a Catalina float plane, was brought into the Penguin News office by Robin Goodwin. What was the plane doing here and when did it visit? If any of our readers have any information, please call on 22709 or email editor@penguinnews.co.fk.

GERALD Cheek, Ron Binnie, Ron Morrison in New Zealand and Edith Summers, named the footballers picture printed in the Penguin News on June 18. Ron Morrison also said it was taken in either 1949 or 1950.

Standing are, Harry Bonner, Gene Williams and Ron Morrison, middle row Andy "Jock" Campbell, Bill Jones and Joe King, and front, Bob Wallin, Steve Reive, Doug Morrison, Don Clark and Billy Cletheroe.

Don Bonner and Robert Rowlands both contacted the Penguin News regarding the missing link featured on June 4, of the harmonica band. They both agreed the man named as Frank Smith, was in fact Frank White (also known as Dodger). It is believed the picture was taken in 1937.

Richie's mother Celestina on her wedding day the elements so further preservation work could be carried out in stages.

There can be no doubt this would be in the long run a very expensive operation but it could also be the beginning of a Maritime Heritage marina and a great tourist attraction in the Stanley area.

From my own point of view any organisation founded to preserve Maritime Heritage would need to be a local Falklands based organisation dedicated to retaining what is left of the old ships in the Falklands itself for local and visitor benefit, which of course would not prevent overseas Kelpers and others contributing their fund raising efforts and spreading the word in support of this local organisation.

The ownership of the Lady Elizabeth is of course currently vested in FIG who would be key to any permissions for such an effort to commence, hopefully supported by corporate organisations locally and across the world, as well as individuals who have an interest in the Falklands and particularly in shipping and the preservation of our ancient maritime heritage.

Summer time debate goes on

IN response to Jan Cheek's comments about summer time in last week's PN where Jan says she has "often wondered why we do not stay on summer time all year round, for extra minutes of daylight after working hours. Perhaps someone can explain the reason to me." I thought I might make comment.

I could be wrong, but this is a well worn subject and I think it has done the rounds here on many occasions... question is, should we change it?

I suspect the FI follows the UK, so the question is why doesn't the UK have BST all year round? The answer to that is that many years ago (1960's I believe) a small group of Scottish MPs held the balance of power in a minority UK government. They used that bargaining power to force through their objection to the (sensible) proposal that the UK should have BST all year round.

They were lobbying on behalf of a powerful group of Scottish farmers in the far north of Scotland who basically are the only ones to benefit from putting the hour back because they are so much nearer the north pole.

And so the rest of us are stuck with it, even though almost everyone agrees with Jan's comments. Is there an appetite for change?

Transparency no consolation

WHEN I was home in Stanley just a month or so ago, I was told by an Assembly Member, whom I probably should not name, that he/she feared most councillors would be unable to maintain opposition to the Chief Executive's grim campaign for change in the Civil Service.

This was despite the fact that they had come to power on a wave of anger among their constituents about prematurely imposed retirements and the demoralisation of locally-employed civil servants, and about a rolling-back of social change achieved since 1982.

The source was right. Councillors have invited the Chief Executive to serve a further two years, effectively endorsing his ideas. Apparently this was not a unanimous decision. But that makes little difference. The great unhappiness over the Chief Executive's strategy will probably now be forgotten, as will the Civil Service careers and ambitions that were sacrificed. It will now be possible to argue that, such was general happiness with the great management experiment, that the man behind it was asked to continue his work. How odd that seems.

Councillors Sharon Halford and Dick Sawle were at least open about the process by which the decision was reached. Sharon explained the process in detail in one of her regular emails which must reach hundreds of people, and Dick discussed it on his facebook page (which now has a few hundred friends). Embracing "new media" in this way helps transparency greatly. In the old days, decisions would be made without any sense that the public deserved an explanation.

Bound Ungagged

This is little consolation, however, to a very large proportion of people in the Falklands, who must feel badly let down.

Chays stop for smoko

If you are signed-up to Facebook, then you have probably already discovered the digital gem that I am about to talk about. If not, then my advice is to get thee to the web immediately, swallow some pride and sign up.

More and more Islanders – both the widespread diaspora and residents – are signing up to the Face Book site "Falklands Reunion/Chays Stop for Smoko. And no wonder. This is a treasure trove of memories, both photographic and written, among which Islanders of almost any age can discover the past or bathe in pleasant nostalgia.

Some truly remarkable historical photos have been posted on the site, many of them with a nautical flavour. The debates over which ship is which, why it was in the Falklands and when, are taken up by Islanders separated by thousands of miles. And all are loving the online yarns.

Even more interesting than the windjammers are the group photos of May Queen finalists from the '60s. I don't want to be ageist or sexist here (OK, I am), but some of those girls were, and still are, lovely. Must be something in the water.

Great Falklands folk singer and guitarist Rock Bernsen is the man behind Falklands Reunion/Chays stop for smoko. So a big bouquet of Diddle-dee to him.

Farewell to my friend Rab Lee

LAST Friday, I joined a large number of people to say farewell to, and celebrate the life of, a friend. Rab Lee was Annie Keenleyside's partner of many years, and he had passed away after a struggle against that damned disease, cancer. Rab had seemed to be responding well to treatment, when something went wrong, and he slipped away sooner than had been expected.

Rab died just before his 53rd birthday. He was six months older than me. Needless to say, this has made me think. Rab enjoyed life hugely, believing that it is a journey to be enjoyed. I'm taking his life as an inspiration.

His farewell ceremony was a humanist event. There was no religious aspect to it, although if anyone wanted to pray, they were free to do so.

The music was not at all "churchy," although it was poignant. At the end of the ceremony, the chapel was filled with the sound of the Blues Brothers belting out "Shake a Tail Feather".

Later, at his rugby club, his mates held a celebratory party. The guys started singing the songs that go with any rugby event, although I think the dodgier ones were avoided.

The club members sang with gusto, but every word was infused with sensitivity. I felt that Rab would have been smiling – and, in all probability, shaking a tail feather.

Penguin News Vox Pop
Costs of living: What items have risen most in price over the last few years?

Marcus Morrison

Now that I've got a baby, I'd say baby food is expensive, along with other items: family allowance doesn't help really. Rent has gone up a bit, but not too bad, and the price of food is terrible. For just a bag of shopping the price is ridiculous, it's amazing how much it's gone up

Lani Lennie

Fuel I would say, food, cigarettes and rent. Electricity has gone down though! I would say most things have risen. It's impossible trying to buy a house now as well

Caris Stevens

Cereal has risen an atrocious amount. It's unhealthy, I don't eat breakfast anymore because of that

Jo Turner

The cost of fuel and food has risen a lot, and the cost of nights out. A lot of events are £25 per ticket, after paying for two tickets and a babysitter it's so much. And the cost of eating out, you're looking close to £70, a lot more than it used to be. The new services Alex is introducing at the Brasserie are good, it's going to make it a lot more affordable

Alison Howe

Everything has risen. If you look at the situation in France, people are having bags of food delivered from Tesco's and Sainsbury's, because it's cheaper at only 15% above the cost on the shelves. So why does it cost so much here?

Trudi Felton

I would say fuel. It seems to go up every month

Bill Kidd

To be honest I don't know, as I don't do the shopping! The cost of living has definitely gone up though, fuel has gone up a lot

Toni Stevens

I guess for farmers the price of fuel has put a big cost on. Some farmers are considering going back to solid fuel - because of the cost of kero and diesel

Caribbeans and Kelpers forge an alliance in the oil business

THE world of work is becoming everyday more international, but it was with some surprise that the Penguin News learned of the presence in Stanley of a Trinidad based company helping the current oil exploration.

In an office close to the lay-down area for drilling pipes and mud silos, we finally tracked down John Campbell from Trinidad who, with his Scottish colleague Graham Hird, forms half of the four-man team from ASCO Trinidad.

They have been sub-contracted by local firm Byron McKay Port Services to manage the logistics, safety and quality control of the services required by the oil exploration teams.

The other half of the team, Scot Bob Rankin and Trinidadian Hugo Brown, rotate with Campbell and Hird on a 28-day basis.

In a report in the Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, Mr Brown is reported as saying that the company had been very impressed by the work ethic of the Falkland Islands' workers.

"We encountered crews across there that have no problem with working long hours, in the rain and so on," he explained.

"Across there, they're working in rain and the limited daylight you get. They also multi-task.

"You would see someone driving a forklift one minute, next minute he is operating a crane, next minute he is driving a truck. That is a big plus, especially at the stage of the operation we are at now."

John Campbell, one of the four-man team from ASCO

This versatility of the workforce and the "fantastic teamwork" of the Falklands is something that has also impressed John Campbell.

He said that particular aspect would be one of the things that his company would be hoping to introduce back home where, he said, "a truck driver is only a truck driver, a crane driver only a crane driver and a fork lift operator only a fork lift operator." ASCO Trinidad is one section of a global oil and gas logistics company which has its home base in Aberdeen but has been operating in Trinidad since January 2001.

Although the company has previously worked in Suriname this is the first time its operation has been managed from out of Trinidad, where the global economic turnaround has caused an equal turnaround in oil-related activities.

"The Falklands was something we were looking for and when we got it, it was a big morale booster," said Mr Brown, adding that it has been challenging.

"When we first arrived there, there was nothing. We were starting from scratch.

"There were no offices, no warehouses, nothing. They were actually in the middle of constructing offices, etc.

"The biggest challenge for me was not having a proper office and communication tools, like the internet. I was actually operating out of my vehicle."

Shore-based operations entail managing the supply of equipment and materials delivered to the drilling rig.

Everything, from pipes to food, has to pass through the shore base on its way to the drilling rig, and because drilling is very costly, materials have to be shipped on time to ensure that there is no downtime offshore.

This unique Caribbean and Kelper alliance is getting the job done.

An artistic celebration of Falklands endemic flora

"ART has the power to inspire." This belief was the driving force behind Falklands Conservation's exhibition, "A Celebration of the Unique Flora of the Falklands."

Many people may not be aware of the plant species which are found here in the Falklands and nowhere else in the world, or may know of them but not have had a closer look. The opening day at the Malvina House Hotel was well attended by a lively and enthusiastic crowd.

Now on display at the Jetty Visitor Centre until June 27, the artwork covers all 13 endemic plant species in a diverse display of styles and media. Oils on canvas, felt works, landscapes, close-ups and interactive pieces offer a feast for the eyes.

A majority of the artwork comes from a very talented local art community and is available for purchase. Why not stop and take a look on your way past? The Jetty Centre is open today from 11am until 2.30pm and tomorrow and Sunday from 10am until 3pm.

Falklands Conservation would like to thank everyone who helped set up the exhibition.

Midwinter loons plunge into the icy South Atlantic for local charities

YOU would think the raging snowstorms with white-out conditions and horizontal blizzards the day before the midwinter swim, should have been enough to make even the most dedicated dippers hurl their swim suits in the back of the cupboard and take to the settee with a duvet and cocoa. But not so.

A popular Falklands expression is: "You can't let the weather stop you or you'd never get anything done," and for the fourth consecutive year organiser Siân Ferguson never faltered in her tireless arrangements for the midwinter dip in the South Atlantic. And despite her initial misgivings that no one would turn up, her efforts were rewarded on Saturday with a surprisingly good turn out of scantily clad, hardy souls intent on diving into the freezing cold waters of Surf Bay, near Stanley Airport.

Siân said 58 took to the roaring surf, scrunching through ice on the beach to make the required submersion in the near zero temperature sea.

Unfortunately due to the severe weather conditions the previous day, the road to Mount Pleasant was still closed to military vehicles and the strong contingent from the armed forces were unable to make the journey into Stanley.

They are not to be let of the hook though, and a second, somewhat smaller event is to be held in their honour tomorrow at 11.30am (registration closes at 11am). It is not restricted to military personnel however and anyone who didn't have the opportunity to take part last Saturday is welcome to go along and take the plunge. There may even be some suffering from a particularly severe bout of midwinter madness who will be unable to resist the urge to make it a double whammy.

All registered swimmers will receive a certificate of lunacy signed by His Excellency the Governor Alan Huckle and although there will be no charge for taking part, Siân said donations however small would be gratefully received for the local charities Lighthouse Seamens Mission and Stanley Sea Cadets.

The total raised so far is not yet known and Siân urges everyone to collect their sponsorship money and get it to her as soon as possible. There is a top prize of a meal for two at the Falklands Brasserie restaurant for the person who raises the most money and returns it to her by July 30.

For more information about tomorrow's event or to make arrangements to deposit your sponsorship money call Siân on 21977 or email skippy@cwimail.fk. There is also a dedicated Facebook page.

Department of Agriculture Wool Market Report 17th June 2010

Ian Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Falkland Islands
 While the AWEX EMH Index dropped in Australian Dollar terms significant movements in exchange rates once again made a mockery of price movements.
 The market indicator rose significantly to $26 p/kg Oddments are hard to sell at the moment but medium strength (22-24 micron wools) are selling well in Australia which augers well for Falkland Island wools.

Where birds of the Falklands flock together

A RECENT addition to the Falkland Islands Tourist Board's website www.falklandislands.com is a whole new section showcasing the birds of the Falklands with information on where and when to find them and all accompanied by striking images.

More than 50 regularly sighted birds of the 227 species in the Falklands have now been added to the Bird Gallery and it is already proving a popular hit with visitors to the site. Just go to the Birdlife section on the home page and follow the highlighted link to the Bird Gallery.

The Falklands are regarded worldwide as having significant importance to seabird and marine mammal populations, a reputation that draws people from all corners of the globe to view and photograph the abundance of wildlife in the most natural of settings.

General Manager Paul Trowell said that while the entire site is designed to give visitors an overview of tourism in the Falklands, there is also a wealth of information about the Islands and lots of ideas for where to stay and what to do.

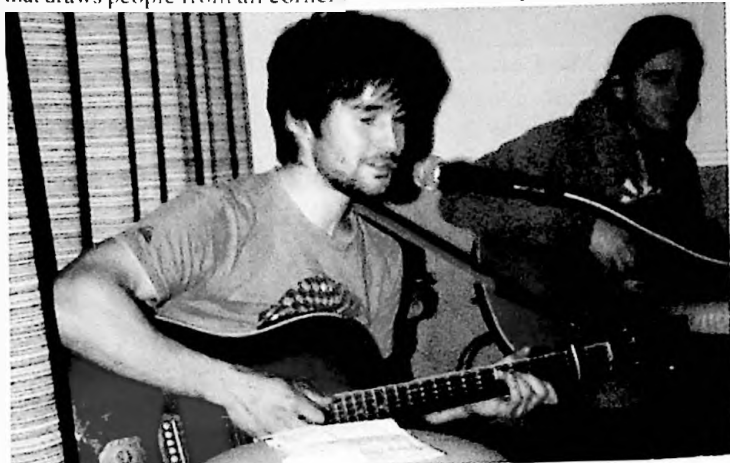

"Combined with some stunning images the site is well worth a visit as are the many local tourism destinations listed on it and within our recently distributed Accommodation Guide.

"There's some great looking places out there and I'm certainly looking forward to getting out and about with my family," said Paul.

A wine bar winter

WITH a tangible atmosphere and an abundance of talent, the Falklands Brasserie's night of live music, wine and complimentary nibbles, held on Friday June 12, was certainly one to be remembered.

As a prelim to the opening of the first wine bar licence in the Falklands by the restaurant, Manager Alex Olmedo recruited Andy Felton and David Ashbridge to wow his clientele. Playing electric acoustic guitar, the two created musical magic, with eyes closed, and their voices weaving a bit of something special.

Later in the evening Paul Howes stepped up and had a go, by which point, diners and wine bars enthusiasts alike had crowded around the performers. What a stroke of genius, an amazing Friday night's entertainment.

Alex told the Penguin News he hoped to hold more entertainment evenings during the winter months. He explained the wine bar licence now permitted the Brasserie to serve wine to customers who weren't there to dine, with early opening on Fridays at 5pm.

The menu has also changed, to include tapas as well as main courses, for those who only fancy a light bite. "We're really excited" he said. "So far we've had a very good response from clients."

Hot competition at the tots fancy dress

FIFTY-six children entered the fancy dress competition at the Jelly Tots Fancy Dress and 21st Birthday Party this year.

The event, which was held on Sunday, raised more than £600 for the Jelly Tots group.

The most hotly contested category was Groups and Pairs with first place going to Kai Heathman and Toyah Wilson showing how Noddy and Big Ears should be done. The Babies category was also very competitive with Jaden Scipio-O'Dean dressed up as a sheriff taking first place in the category.

The costumes this year were the most spectacular ever. Some of the most outstanding costumes included Rebecca Harris as a giant mobile phone and Ryan Morrison job of keeping the children entertained during the judging and the party games. The judges were Alison Nye, Alison Atkinson and newly arrived medical student Sophie Johns, all of whom had an extremely hard job trying to choose the winners.

A raffle was held with the tickets drawn towards the end of the afternoon. First prize of two nights for two people at Pebble Island Lodge went to Catherine Catton.

Jelly Tots would like to thank Cable and Wireless for sponsoring the event, everyone who helped out on the day, all of those who gave to the raffle, and everyone who came and supported the Jelly Tots Group for another year.

THE Falklands Health Promotion Group presents the first in a series of columns aimed at making our lives longer, safer and healthier...

THE risk of falling increases as we get older and represents over half of hospital admissions for accidental injury among older people in the UK. The most significant injury this leads to is a fracture of the hip. Even non-injurious falls can lead to people being afraid of falling, which can reduce their mobility and independence. There are known risk factors that increase your risk of falling. By being aware of these and proactive in making simple changes in your daily life you can considerably lessen your risk of falling and hurting yourself.

- Avoid walking on slippery surfaces in socks or tights.
- Assessments are available for pendant alarms which are a good way of attracting help if you do have a fall
- check your home environment – good lighting is very important, particularly if you have stairs. If you need to get up during the night switch on a light to make sure you can see where you are going.
- Have handrails fitted to your steps and stairs if you find them difficult to climb.
- Keep the floor clear of trailing leads, rucked up or fraying carpets or anything else you may trip over or slip on.
- Make sure your walkways in the house are free of clutter, especially the stairs

- A non-slip mat in the bath can help you keep your balance when getting in and out.

- Take your time to get up out of chairs or out of bed as sometimes getting up too quickly can cause you to feel faint or light headed.

- Use a step ladder when changing light bulbs or curtains etc. or ask someone to help.

- Watch out for uneven paths and slippery surfaces in the garden.

- If you have a pet think about giving it a coloured collar or collar with a bell so that you will notice it more easily

What can I do to lessen my risk of falling?

- have your eyesight checked regularly
- manage your medications – let your doctor know if you feel faint or unsteady after taking your pills.
- Wear suitable footwear – high sided footwear with low heels and thin soles with a good grip will give you extra stability. Try to avoid slippers which are loose and worn-out or which don't have backs.

PRINCIPAL COMPLAINTS COMMISSIONER

Applications are sought for the post of Principal Complaints Commissioner.

Chapter IX of the new Constitution provided for the appointment of Complaints Commissioners from time to time to investigate complaints of maladministration in government and any other matters prescribed by Ordinance. The Complaints Commissioners Ordinance 2010 prescribed the functions, powers and jurisdiction of Complaints Commissioners and also provided for the appointment of a Principal Complaints Commissioner.

The appointment of a Principal Complaints Commissioner will be a major step in ensuring the good governance of the Falkland Islands. It will provide a further avenue of complaint once existing avenues have been exhausted, will allow an independent check to ensure that complaints have been handled properly and fairly, and will provide for a greater degree of transparency in the complaints process, where appropriate.

Complaints Commissioners will be entitled to a daily attendance allowance when engaged on their functions. No-one can be appointed as a Complaints Commissioner if they are a member of the public service or the Legislative Assembly.

Those wishing to apply for the post of Principal Complaints Commissioner should write to the Governor at Government House by Friday 23 July with their name, address and contact details, the nature of their current employment, and a brief explanation of their reasons for applying and the skills that they would bring to the post.

Q IN a recent letter to parents, the Head of FICS outlined the arrangements being put in place to cover MLA Edwards' teaching responsibilities while she attends an overseas conference.

What is the total cost of bringing in the Geography Specialist mentioned in the letter?

The answer to this, and the following three questions were provided by Director of Corporate Resources Keith Padgett.

A £4,350 including flights.

Q WHO is covering this cost?

A THIS has been funded from savings at Gilbert House as a result of reduced Members' Allowances claims.

Q DO the Assembly not feel that this money, in such tight economical times, could have been better spent with a different MLA attending the conferences?

A AS is always the case. Members considered carefully who should attend that conference. In this instance, bearing in mind the political situation with our neighbours, it was considered important that one of the two people who would later be attending the UN Committee of 24 should attend for consistency. The other Member who will be attending that committee was unable to attend both.

Q WHAT specific plans are in place for the arrangements being made following the start of the 2010/11 academic year when MLA Edwards becomes a part time teacher, specifically what plans are in place for KS3 students?

A THE arrangements have not yet been formalised but the intention is to amend the timetables to ensure that students are not disadvantaged and allow Ms Edwards to fulfil her role as a teacher as well as her Legislative Assembly commitments.

Q IF a contractor is employed by FIG, and extends their contract, at what point will they have to transfer on to local conditions?

Personnel Officer Jennifer Smith provided the answers to this and the following question.

A AT Executive Council on 23rd May 2006 it was agreed that the maximum period over which overseas contract officers may be employed on full overseas terms is seven years, subject to the approval of Executive Council in each case: to the post being advertised locally during the period of six months prior to the fifth anniversary of the commencement of employment; and to there being no suitably qualified and experienced local applicant.

Q IS it possible, for example, for them to remain indefinitely on overseas conditions (with the additional pay, flight and gratuity benefits that implies), although they have lived in the Falklands for a considerable length of time?

A NO. There may be circumstances where an individual's contract of employment continues beyond the seven year period, due to them having had extended breaks between contracts, or for other reasons associated with leave entitlements, but those conditions end when that contract does and any new employment would be offered on local terms and conditions.

Q WITH the disaster of Louisiana continuing to unfold, it begs the questions:

What are FIG's contingency plans for such an event occurring here?

An FIG spokesperson has provided a response to this, and the following six questions.

A IF an event such as a blowout, like that recently experienced in the Gulf of Mexico, were to occur in the Falklands Offshore Area then the initial response would be provided by the offshore operator concerned, as detailed in their Oil Spill Contingency Plan (OSCP).

Each operator produces an OSCP, which FIG must approve before permission to drill is granted. Operators' oil spill contingency plans complement the Government's National Oil Spill Contingency Plan, which was revised last year.

The Contingency Plans detail three different categories of response arrangements (tier 1, 2 and 3). The response that would be adopted is determined by the characteristics of a particular spill (size, location etc.). An incident like that experienced on the Deepwater Horizon rig in the Gulf of Mexico would be a tier 3 spill (the most significant and important).

As a tier 3 incident the Oil Operator would activate the arrangements they have in place, as a condition of operating here, to call in their tier 3 response. This involves using a specialist oil spill response company which has the capability to respond to a tier 3 spill. This would involve mobilising equipment and people from elsewhere.

FIG's oil spill plan is geared to dealing with relatively minor oil pollution events, but events which are quite likely. These include accidents involving vessel types commonly operating around the Falklands where any single pollution event is unlikely to exceed 200 tonnes. FIG's limited resources can be deployed to assist in combating any larger pollution event.

Q DO we have sufficient resources already in place to deal with such an occurrence? (Presumably miles of oil booms and sufficient shipping assets to deploy them)

A NO, but there is some oil spill response material available in the Islands, to deal with at least an initial response. The Government holds a limited amount of dispersants and booms in order to deal with a small scale spill, and the oil operators have response material available in order to be able to respond to a minor spill, or to provide initial response to a major spill.

Sea conditions around the Falklands are such that the use of booms is only likely to be effective in sheltered areas.

In the event of a major spill, the oil companies have agreements with dedicated international oil spill response agencies and other organisations which ensure that further supplies can be directed to the Falkland Islands at very short notice if necessary.

There are normally at least three vessels supporting rig operations, which could be used to deploy booms and dispersant in the event of a spill. In the event of a large scale spill, the oil spill response organisations would deploy additional assets to deal with the spill, such as aircraft capable of spreading dispersant from the air.

Q WHO foots the bill for the above materials?

A IF the oil spill were caused by oil industry activity, then under Falkland Islands legislation the oil industry is liable for the costs of any clean up, and to pay compensation as calculated.

Q WHAT would be the procedure to assess the damage to the environment and wildlife?

A IT is probable that wildlife at sea would be most affected by a spill, as the oil is very unlikely to reach the shore. The degree of impact would depend on the time of year and the species affected.

In the highly unlikely event of such an incident FIG will take the lead on assessing damage to the environment and wildlife. Local resources will be mobilised and these could be supplemented with additional resources if necessary. This should include both the immediate response and longer term monitoring. Costs will be recovered where possible.

Q DO we have the capability and assets to decontaminate vast quantities of wildlife?

A NO. The National Oil Spill Contingency Plan anticipates a capability to treat small numbers of oiled birds; 30 or less. In a crisis larger numbers could be treated, but the logistics of collecting, transporting and maintaining significant numbers should not be underestimated.

External resources can be mobilised which may assist where there is an ongoing spill. Such resources are unlikely to be available in time to respond to initial wildlife casualties.

Q WHO would foot the bill?

Q HOW would FIG assess the financial damage to tourism?

A IN the event that there is a major oil pollution event, apart from the immediate damage to the environment and wildlife, a number of industries may be impacted: fishing and tourism being the most obvious candidates.

FIG will work closely with these sectors to assess the damage arising from any such pollution events.

Note: In the unlikely event of a major oil spill, the Falkland Islands sea conditions, being generally rough, would mean that any spilled oil would be dispersed naturally relatively quickly.

Furthermore, in their Environmental Impact Statements, the oil companies detail the results of modelling they have undertaken to calculate the worst case scenarios in the event of the loss of diesel or crude oil.

This modelling shows that, even in a worst case scenario with sustained periods of abnormal wind directions, the probability that an oil spill would impact on land environments is very low.

This is primarily because the prevailing wind and currents will tend to push any spill to the north east and away from land. Wildlife at sea may be affected, depending on the time of year, wildlife and specific locations.

The answers given refer to response in the event of a spill, but the Falkland Islands regulatory framework and significant resources are directed at prevention of such incidents. FIG works with the UK Health and Safety Executive and the UK Department of Energy and Climate Change to assess Operators' proposals to drill.

Permissions to drill are not granted unless FIG is satisfied with the drilling plans.

A cricketers future for the Falklands

"We know what we've got to do to be better" Chairman of the Falkland Islands Cricket Association Roger Diggle said to the Penguin News, after the team's return from Mexico.

They played in the Americas Championship Division 4, where they won against Costa Rica in a 50 over match, with a score of 131 ahead by 39 runs, and lost against Mexico by 211 runs.

In the 20 over matches against the two division four teams Roger said they performed well: "We did think Mexico were beatable," he said. "We know what we've got to do to improve, we didn't disgrace ourselves, we came away performing better than we thought we might." They lost by 29 runs to Mexico, and 65 to Costa Rica.

Describing the man of the match Elliott Taylforth's game as "stunning" Roger said: "It's very, very unusual for a bowler to get four wickets in one over," however he did stress that this was also down to the efforts of the rest of the team.

The Falkland Islands Cricket Association hope to introduce cricket to the junior school curriculum from next year, with the help of Regional Development Officer Wendell Coppin from Barbados. They also aim to develop a junior cricket league. For further information on the cricket association, contact Roger Diggle, Elliott Taylforth or David Pickup.

Pictures and a report on their achievements will be featured in next week's Penguin News.

I would like to say a big thank you to all the kind people who helped me and my family, while I was in Bristol having laser operation and radiotherapy for throat cancer. To name a few: Dr Rollands, Janice Dent, Teresa Clifton, Cllr Sharon Halford, Colin and James in FIGO Office, Susanna and Paul for running my Rat and Earwig business, Alva, Tom, Olaf, Mark and Sue, Valerie and Ian, Patrick Watts. My son Kevin and Claire who looked after me for four months and everyone who sent me cards and phoned me and not forgetting the Cancer Support who helped my family with telephone calls. As I have lost 1/2 my voice now I can't shout out, so a big thank you to you all.
