Knife toting youth jailed

IN the Magistrates Court on Thursday, Stanley man Cameron Neil Goodwin (18) was sentenced to six months in a Young Offenders Institution for possession of an offensive weapon in a public place.

Mr Goodwin had been remanded in custody on March 21, following a breach of bail condition when he did not appear in the Court for trial as instructed. The trial was later held on April 11.

Recounting the facts Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis told the court how the incident took place in the early hours of December 29, when Mr Cameron received what Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley described as a, "grossly unpleasant," text from a 16 year old, which was interpreted as a threat to his family.

Following an exchange of calls and text messages, the youth, which reporting restrictions prevent us from naming, and friends in a vehicle, met with Mr Goodwin who was walking on Snake Hill around 2am. When asked if he was carrying a knife Mr Goodwin confirmed that he was and approached the vehicle, but did not proffer any threats. The youths then reported the incident to the police.

Mr Gumsley said there was a high degree of provocation by the individuals whose behaviour he described as, "pathetic."

Passing sentence he told Mr Goodwin that this was no excuse however for choosing to seek out his, "so called friends," confronting them and carrying a knife.

"Your actions were stupid in the extreme," he said.

Mr Gumsley said he had been working in the law for 25 years and had dealt with many cases of murder, many of which had originated from somebody going out with a knife not intending to do any damage.

Mr Goodwin had opted to defend himself in court and had done it well, showing a proper respect for which he should be commended, said Mr Gumsley.

"You're not daft, but what you did that night was stupid," he said, adding that he hoped Mr Goodwin would take advantage of all help available during his time in custody to deal with any anger management issues.

Team Falklands announced

FOLLOWING last weekend's Stanley Swimming Club Gala a team of six young people were announced as the team to compete for the Falklands at the Bermuda NatWest Island Games this year. ## Falklands fishery silence on Pescanova problems

FORMERLY one of Spain's most successful food companies, the now insolvent Pescanova, which has long had links with some Falklands fishing companies, has had its Board ordered to stand down by a Spanish court, and administrators have been proposed.

The court last week acknowledged the company's inability to continue and accepted the company's debt pile which is cautiously put at anything between 1.2 and 1.5 billion euros.

In March the company announced it had found, "discrepancies," between its accounts and its actual bank debt.

The Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association (FIFCA) the Falkland Islands Government Fisheries Department and those Falklands' companies approached by Penguin News all declined to comment on what impact, if any, Pescanova's ongoing problems would have locally.

Pescanova faces a number of accusations including that in declaring the amount of their liability, they concealed an amount estimated to be at least a third of their real debt by losing it amongst other companies based outside Spain.

Five companies: American Shipping, Medosan, Epripel, ASF and El Porvenir, it is alleged, have masked a proportion of that debt.

However, according to news reports, included in the companies on which suspicion has fallen, are allegedly Lafonia Seafoods, Worldfrost, Cuvimarket and Polar Ltd.

Falklands company Polar Ltd is a joint venture with Falklands company Seaview Ltd which fishes in partnership with Lafonia Seafoods.

Seaview Ltd owner Alex Reid declined to comment on the situation, "at present."

Falkland Islands Government Director of Fisheries John Barton and FIFCA Chair Cheryl Roberts also declined to comment.

Pescanova filed for bankruptcy protection on March 1, 2013 after failing in an effort to divest some assets to help meet its debt refinancing obligations.

Also in March Pescanova shares were suspended by the Spanish stock market regulator CNMV. Reports say the stock lost 58 per cent this year before trading was halted on March 12.

Former chairman, Manuel Fernandez de Sousa, is said to have sold half of his stake in the business in the months leading up to the crisis without informing the regulators.

More new homes than new people

THE release of data last week from the 2012 Census shows that the Falklands continues to work its magic on immigrants who may have arrived with short term plans but have settled for ten or more years and that the ratio of women to men in the islands has increased considerably over the last four decades.

The 2012 Census took place on April 15 and provides an up-to-date snapshot, which helps paint a picture of the Islands and its characteristics in 2012. The Census findings are important in helping to identify the needs of the Islands; aiding FIG decision-making and service planning; and informing the design and implementation of future strategies.

On the night of the Census the total usual resident population was 2,931 of which almost 75 per cent was resident in Stanley. At 2,120 persons, the population of Stanley has grown by less than one per cent since 2006, however Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham noted that this increase may be understated due to the high numbers of persons overseas at the time the Census was conducted.

This opinion is possibly backed up by the fact there has been a 12 per cent increase in the number of households since 2006 and a massive 81 per cent increase since 1986.

Excluding those living in communal accommodation a total of 1,237 households was recorded.

The Census shows that 218 house owners have additional homes to those they live in making a total of 268 additional homes. 59 per cent of additional homes in Stanley are rented out to tenants which, Mr Fotheringham said demonstrated a strong rental market in Stanley as additional home owners perhaps see their second dwelling as an extra source of income.

He further commented that the number of holiday homes which usually remain empty for large parts of the year, could be another factor behind the increase in the number of households in the Islands while the population has remained almost static. There was, he added, insufficient data to provide a direct comparison between 2006 and 2012.

Penguin News

Comment by Deputy Editor John Fowler

GIVEN the habit time has of accelerating the older you get, it hardly seems any time at all since November when I resumed this squeaky chair in the Penguin News office. Now the increasingly dark mornings tell me it's time to hand over mouse and keyboard to Sharon once again.

Odd as it may seem, one of the chief pleasures of going away from the Falklands for a while is the anticipation of the pleasure of returning. As one of our correspondents kindly pointed out recently, I am not a Falkland Islander by birth, but I am one by choice. This, I think, may give me an even finer appreciation of things that those born here, may take for granted.

The other day, just driving to work down Philomel Hill with the dawn hardly broken and the early horizontal sun giving extra intensity to every colour and extra clarity to every shape, it occurred to me that I have never lived anywhere more beautiful than the Falkland Islands at its best.

Natural beauty apart, the Falkland Islands is also becoming an exciting place in which to live, something I would not have dreamed possible when I first arrived here in 1971.

In the last six months, quite apart from the simultaneously exhilarating and terrifying prospect of facing up to an oil-rich future for the Islands, we have had the equally exhilarating business of the referendum, but what has excited me almost as much was the tour of the new museum that I was privileged to take just last Saturday.

The exterior design fits so snugly with the Old Central Store and the Blacksmith's Shop that it will look as if it has always been there and is a credit to the design genius of Project Director Gwen Thomson. It conceals an interior that will amaze and delight as well as inform. Placed as it is at the historical starting point of our town, I am sure that the central hall with its soaring peaked ceiling will soon become a sought-after location for a whole range of community events.

For me the recent referendum was all about our right to claim a separate identity. The new museum is an unusually local project which will make a strong statement about our unusually local history as a component of that identity. Its importance to tourism is, in a sense, incidental.

More new homes than new people

The population in Camp has continued to decline – decreasing by 3.3 per cent since 2006 to stand at 351 persons, but this is a much slower rate of decline than experienced in the past.

The most populated settlements in Camp are Goose Green (40); Fox Bay (22); Port Howard (22); North Arm (20); and Hill Cove (16).

The ladies have still got more to pick and choose from with the sex ratio of the population at 111 males per 100 females in 2012, compared with 113:100 in 2006, reflecting a slight increase in the proportion of females in the population. This figure is somewhat skewed however by the high proportion of males at MPA (68 per cent of MPA residents are male).

Excluding MPA residents, the sex ratio within the Islands is more balanced with 101 males per 100 females compared to 1972 when the ratio was 123 males per 100 females.

The trend is for an aging population, particularly in the Camp where more than one in five (22 per cent) residents are aged 60 or older. In Stanley the percentage is lower at 16.7 and the number of under 15 year olds has remained constant at 471 since 2006.

For the first time, the 2012 Census asked people to state their National Identity. This was included to ascertain the cultural group that people most closely identify with (and need not be related to the person's place of birth or citizenship).

The results showed that 57 per cent of residents consider their national identity to be 'Falkland Islander'; 24.6 per cent consider themselves British; 9.8 per cent St. Helenian and 5.3 per cent Chilean.

There were 89 respondents who described their national identity as 'Other' and the eight per cent of the population who were born elsewhere originated from 57 other countries, with the largest concentrations from Argentina (1.3 per cent), Philippines, Germany, Russia, New Zealand and Ascension Island.

The Census revealed there had been a 25 per cent decline in the proportion of the population born in St Helena since 2006. This decline may be attributable to the new airport development in St Helena, which may be attracting some Saint Helenians back to take up new employment opportunities there.

However the majority of work permit holders from St Helena have been in the Islands for six years or more, suggesting a longer term commitment to the Islands and a reduction in economic migrants from St Helena in recent years.

There is an apparent trend for both St Helenian and Chileans to settle in the Islands with 81 and 67 per cent respectively living in the Islands for more than 10 years.

Although MPA has a high proportion of short term residents, some 18 per cent of MPA residents have been in the Islands for 10 years or more.

There has been some movement in Stanley and Camp populations over the last 10 years with 81 people moving from Stanley to Camp and 93 from Camp to Stanley, although age groups would indicate that those people moving to Stanley do so when nearing or following retirement.

It should be noted that none of the figures referred to within this report include any military personnel serving in the Falkland Islands or their dependents (such individuals are not required to participate in the Census). Hence, references to 'MPA' (Mount Pleasant Airport) mean civilian contractors based at MPA, not serving military personnel.

Choice made on road route to new port

THE access route for a road leading to the new port to be built at Port William will, "avoid potential heavy load traffic from entering and exiting, and be effectively hidden from Stanley," Director of Central Services assured Penguin News this week.

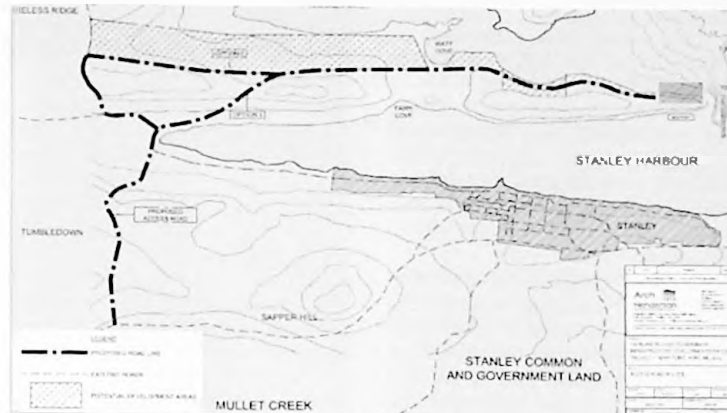

The road will link the Mount Pleasant Road and Moody Brook, and then run to the north of Mt Tumbledown and to the south of Sapper Hill. It will join the MPA road 2.5km from Sapper Hill.

At Moody Brook the road will be routed north east over the ridge and continue east to the new port to be built at Navy Point. One downside to this route (Option 1) noted a paper on the subject, is that the road would be visible to the residential area across the harbour at the north west corner of Stanley, and may be detrimental to the expansion of residential development on the north side of Stanley Harbour.

Option 2 would have been for the road to follow the route of the existing road from Moody Brook up Wireless Ridge. Once over the crest it would run due east and be less visible to Stanley. The disadvantage to this option would be the longer route, and the greater height gain would require realignment to reduce the gradient.

Asked why Option 1 was chosen Mr Fletcher said, "We undertook topographic surveys out to the peninsula where the port will be located; following which Option 1 came out as the best engineered route, offering the least gradient resistance for what is regarded as the most acceptable, direct route."

"Option 1 is shorter and is expected to be the cheaper of the two options. Depending on how the port and other infrastructure to support it develop in the future, the road route could readily be extended to become Option 2 if required."

The two options for route to the new port - option 1 was chosen

The start date for the road build is dependent on funding, which is currently not in place, said Mr Fletcher, and also on the timing of the port build itself, "given it will serve the port specifically and is intrinsically linked to it."

He added that the road would need to be started ahead of the port, "and we think would take between 12 - 15 months to build as part of a programme to deliver the new port, on current thinking, by early 2017."

The Port

Executive Council also agreed on April 24 to develop two options for the new port layout. The first option looks at a 'land reclamation' approach, which involves building out from the shore line to create the quay facilities and berthing requirements as work proceeds. This would involve dredging the seabed.

The second option considers a 'causeway and jetty' concept, which involves building an appropriately sized causeway to an isolated quay and berthing facility off shore and would not require dredging the seabed.

Both options show the new port protected by a breakwater located at the east end. Each concept has phased construction options, with the first accommodating the oil support industry, the second general harbour use and the third will accommodate additional users as demand dictates.

The new port is to be designed to accommodate the requirements of several separate industries, including oil, fishery, fuel supply, commercial freight, wool trade and the cruise ship industry.

However, it will initially concentrate on the oil industry and potential fuel tanker deliver requirements.

Big developments at Planning and Building

OUTLINE permission for a camp to house 200 temporary workers, with laundry block, canteen, recreation room and management office for FIC Ltd was approved by the Planning and Building Committee yesterday.

FIC Ltd applied to build the camp at three different sites and it was agreed that the land adjacent to the Training Centre, Dairy Paddock Rd and Darwin Rd would have the least impact on residential areas. Environmental Planning Officer Anthony Payne said there was a clear need for a camp and explained that though some members of the public were not confident it would be temporary, FIC would have to reapply to a future committee if they wanted to extend past five years.

Other applications approved were outline planning for warehousing and external storage yard/hard-standing at land between the SAAS container park and 1-3 Boxer Bridge Rd, and Plots 4,6,8,10,12,14,17,19 and 1,3,5,7,9 east of Boxer Bridge Rd for FIC Ltd; development of common land south of Megabid for use as a spoil dump for FIG; off-street parking at 82 Davis Street for Mrs Livermore; 'Clyde' to be written in large white-washed stones on the Camber; alterations and a conservatory at Cobb's Cottage on Bleaker Island for Mr Rendell; amendments to the Fitzroy Rd 26 apartment development including construction of a boiler room and a relocated bin store for FIC Ltd.

Construction of a laydown and storage area was approved for MorrisonByronMarine Consortium (MBMC) at 1,2b,3,4,5,6,7,8,9,10,12,14,17,18,19,21 and non-allocated land bordering Airport Road but permission for operatives' accommodation was denied as the industrial area was considered unsuitable for accommodation. MBMC was granted permission for laydown and storage facilities at the rear of 3,5,7 and 9 Gordon Lines Rd.

Plot 8 Coastel Rd became a talking point for the committee with MBMC applying for use as a laydown area with other facilities and FIC Ltd applying to use the same plot for external bulk storage tanks and silos. Chief Fire Officer Fiddes made the committee aware that over-development of the area, which aligns the fuel depot, would pose a fire safety risk and make fighting any fire in the area difficult by restricting access.

A member of the public also objected to that application and others for reasons that land was being designated for use in oil development and not being kept available for smaller private sector business. Both applications were deferred so the risks can be further assessed with more detailed plans from the developers.

Earwigs beware

THE earwig epidemic that plagues the residents and the plants of the Falkland Islands may eventually be a thing of past.

On Wednesday the Environmental Committee unanimously agreed a recommendation to Executive Council that funds are approved from the current financial year towards the testing and cultivation of biological control agents for the potential control of the pest. They will also recommend to ExCo that further funds be made available next financial year to complete phase 1 of testing.

Earwigs were accidentally introduced to Stanley in the early 2000s and since then have decimated many garden vegetable crops and crept in to residents houses. "Many gardeners around Stanley have simply given up growing certain vegetables," said Tim Miller of Stanley Growers who reported that his business also suffers with £10,000 a year lost in crops they have to discard.

Spraying of properties helps keep the pests at bay. The Department of Agriculture has a dedicated budget of £5,000 annually to protect the homes of the elderly and those on low income but concerns are rising over long term use of the pesticides.

Dr Norbert Maczey of the Centre for Agricultural Bioscience International (CABI) paid a visit to the Islands last year to produce a feasibility study on the use of biological control agents.

If ExCo accepts the Environmental Committee's recommendation then parasitoid tachinid flies from Northern Europe may be introduced to the Islands following tests at a CABI laboratory. If cultivation and testing is successful and approved by FIG, the agents will be released at locations in the Islands over the next two consecutive summers.

"The concern from the public is that biological control may do more harm than good which is why intensive research is necessary. It's important we reassure the public that we aren't going to be replacing one invasive species with another," said MLA Dr Barry Elsby who explained at a recent public meeting that it had been shown that the fly only feeds on the earwig thus is unlikely to effect any other part of the natural environment. The fly would not wipe out the earwig but keep it under control.

Total funds required for Phase 1 laboratory cultivation and testing research are £25,436 (from existing department budgets) and would be undertaken from May to October 2013 in Europe. If successful, consideration could be given to the release of control agents as early as November of this year.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

LAST week was very full with GPC, EXCO, SFC and finally Budget Select Committee to look at the requests from organisations who receive subventions. This week we have had another run through the budget preparatory for the final budget deliberations in a few weeks time. Many of the impacts that oil will have on budgets still cannot be fully quantified so the budget is more complex than usual.

This week is a little quieter but we have two law related presentations, the first by people who have been looking at the court structure to see if it can be made more efficient and secondly on law revision, a huge project and one where many fellow Overseas Territories also have work to do. The cost will be considerable but it is essential that we have an updated set of laws and that they be constantly updated.

Also this week we have all the usual meetings with the Chief Executive and Governor, plus in my case Environment, Lands, Planning and Building and Health and Medical Services Committee. It is this huge range of subject areas dealt with in any one week that make the role so fascinating. It involves much reading and the ability to absorb a fair amount of detail but certainly keeps the grey cells well exercised. I hope people are giving serious thought to standing for election in November by which time we hope to have arrangements in place which will allow them to stand for election to serve on a full time basis.

A minimum wage was one of our aims early in the life of this Assembly, it has been a long time in the making but the last pieces have now come together for consultation.

Please do not miss your chance to suggest how we may remember Baroness Thatcher. If thinking of a scholarship it is worth remembering that she studied chemistry and law so a scholarship for science or law studies might be appropriate. Many and varied suggestions have already come in, and we would welcome more of how we can make a fitting tribute.

Falklands superior squid

SOUTH Atlantic Squid and Igueldo Fisheries Director Cheryl Roberts, has received the Superior Taste Award for Marfrio's Patagonian squid caught in the Falkland Islands.

The award was presented on April 23 at the XXI edition of Seafood Fair in Brussels.

In their second year of entering for the awards, one of the most prestigious internationally, explained Mrs Roberts, Patagonian squid has managed to improve its rating and move from one star to two stars.

Marfrio Chief Executive Officer Pedro Otaegui, was chosen to receive the award for floured squid, produced by Marfrio from Patagonian squid, and in its first time entering also achieved the distinction of two stars. The breaded squid strips, (also awarded in 2012) paella and squid ring were raised by one Superior Taste star.

Mrs Roberts said Marfrio was once again the premier Galician and Spanish frozen fish company honoured by the International Taste and Quality Institute, whose taste recognition is the only one granted by opinion leaders, such as Michelin starred chefs and sommeliers.

She added: "This distinction helps to strengthen the loyalty

Cheryl Roberts receives the award in Brussels of their customers, who a few months ago and for the second consecutive year, have put their trust in the breaded squid strips, floured squid and delicious battered seafood rings, rewarding them with the seal Taste of the Year 2013 Award, which reflects the high quality standard of all the company's products.

"With this professional recognition Marfrio gives added value to their products and sets them apart from their main competitors in an increasingly globalized market."

At this year's fair Marfrio introduced for the first time their new breaded Swordfish snacks. This is viewed as a top quality product presented in a handy format that allows the consumer to prepare easy, healthy and tasty dishes in less than 10 minutes. It will soon become part of Marfrio's main product range. As in previous years, there were also samples of their main product range.

Whole lotta cash for charity

WITH all funds collected from this year's Costa Lotta fishing competition. The Cancer Support and Awareness Trust and The Stephen Jaffray Memorial Trust have now benefitted by £616.50 each.

The competition was held in March during some very bad weather reported organiser Derek Pettersson, and very few fish were caught. However Turpin Ford claimed the prize for most fish caught and Michael Goodwin won the under 16 prize. Ted Jones caught the biggest fish of the day. Derek said: "This was a fun prize this year as he had to rescue Marie Ross from the mud in the creek." In the evening a raffle and auction was held and the amazing sum of £1,233 was raised.

Derek and Trudi said they would like to thank everyone who supported the event and also those who donated prizes. We look forward to seeing you all again next year.

Road limits

WEIGHT limits imposed annually on various East and all publicly maintainable highways on West Falklands roads came in to play on Wednesday May 1. The limit is 15 metric tonnes and will be effective until September 30. More information can be obtained from the Public Works Department.

MLA pay brief

THE pay review panel on 'remuneration, role and responsibilities' of the Members of Legislative Assembly will shortly brief the public on their findings and why and how decisions were reached. The recommendations in the first paper were accepted by ExCo at the April 24 meeting.

Web gifts

WINNER of the 2013 Falkland Islands Tourism Award for Outstanding Customer Service, The Harbour View Gift Shop launched a new website this week. The site features products that are available in the shops and that are available for mail order. Check out <http://www.falklandislandsgifts.horizon.co.fk/>

Too rosy credit union or effective solution?

FOLLOWING a comment from a reader who suggested that last week's interview with Dwayne Naylor on the subject of credit unions was, rather too 'rosy', Penguin News submitted a number of questions to the Falkland Islands Development Corporation (FIDC).

Acting Infrastructure Development Manager Michael Betts responded.

PN: On average 10 to 20 credit unions in the USA fail each year and by the beginning of February this year there had been 12 failures.

One was as big as $300 million while smaller ones offer greater risk of failure.

MB: There are approximately 7,300 credit unions in the United States and credit unions can fail just like any other business, but this is more usually caused by poor leadership than the credit union model itself.

During the same period mentioned, 10 banks have failed out of approximately 7,010 banks in the US market. This means that over 14,280 banks and credit unions are being managed well. However, managing a credit union requires hard and consistent work to be successful.

PN: Would a credit union in the Falkland Islands need to be guaranteed by the government in order to succeed?

If this were to be the case then there seems little difference in risk management for the government between funding projects through FIDC or through a guaranteed credit union.

There would be a benefit in not having to fund the loans but for a government so apparently awash with funds this does not seem to be much of an advantage.

MB: No position has been made on whether the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) would be required to 'guarantee' the possible credit union.

This decision is dependent on the conclusions of the initial feasibility report and the business case.

At the moment, FIDC only provides business loans, and only as a 'lender of last resort'.

If a potential credit union were to be funded indirectly by FIG, through FIDC, the credit union will be able to offer many more services than just the business loans FIDC currently offers, such as personal and savings accounts, and personal loans.

This would increase access and options for financial services in the Falkland Islands.

FIDC's main objective is to assist the economic development of the Falklands, and not to be a commercial lender. FIDC has become involved in commercial lending due to circumstance.

PN: If the credit union is not to be guaranteed then it offers a higher risk for depositors, duly reflected through a higher rate of interest they might expect.

MB: Insurance on deposits, up to a maximum, has been identified as a key component in the study for providing credit union services. Discussions with the government and other private insurance providers will need to be researched.

Perhaps the solution will address the credit union's and the bank's ability to insure deposits in the Falkland Islands.

The mission of a credit union is not to increase risk but to decrease risk of the members. It is important to remember all of these decisions are made by the Board of Directors in response to their members' needs.

PN: Mr Naylor commented last week that, "credit unions were subject to the same international standards and secrecy acts as any other financial institution."

This might be true in the USA but do you not need to look at the Falkland Islands' Banking Ordinance, which is very simple, and whether it is ready to cover a credit union?

When your bank is an international bank regulated by the Financial Services Authority (or its successors) in the UK you can rely on that umbrella regulator.

If you have something locally incorporated you may have to expand on that local ordinance.

As a first step would you not need some sort of anti-money laundering regulation and where would the credit union stand on Basel II and III (recommendations on banking laws and regulations)?

MB: The Falkland Islands Banking Ordinance, as well as the Cooperative Societies Ordinance, has been reviewed.

Also, Dwayne Naylor met with Mark Lewis, Attorney General, during his visit to the Falkland Islands. The initial discussion suggested that the two ordinances would not be able to adequately regulate the credit union and there would likely be a requirement to either draft a 'Credit Union Ordinance' or to add a section to the Banking Ordinance specifically related to credit unions.

A successful credit union must be supported with effective legislation and, just as importantly, regulation and oversight.

It is important to emphasize that the credit union must be transparent in its operations, procedures and governance.

In the article, Mr Naylor referred to international regulation. Any activity that requires transfer of money internationally must operate within the regulation of the remittance system, which addresses money laundering, etc.

In terms of Basel II and III, the standards of operation must be set by the regulator and the Board of Directors.

These opportunities will be addressed in the credit union study and the World Council of Credit Unions has extensive experience in assisting in the regulation and legislative process globally, not just the US.

In summary, all of these questions provided are prudent, relevant and represent questions that would be asked by an effective credit union board member. World Council of Credit Union's mission is to assist communities, governments and regulators in establishing legislation, regulation and systems based on best practices around the world.

It is clear that the economic growth the Falkland Islands is experiencing and will experience in the future is unique in the world.

Ultimately, the Falkland Islands community and leadership will need to decide if a Falkland Islands based and owned credit union will be the solution to improve access to finance for businesses, as this was identified as a significant barrier to business growth in the 2012 Business Climate Survey.

Jamie Fotheringham

1. What is the best (or worst) piece of advice you have ever been given? "Don't mention clock times"

2. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Tea with Nicole Kidman a tot with Angelina Jolie

3. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? Where to begin? An Italian restaurant, with a nearby dairy for fresh cream. Though some rather unscientific research suggests a casino would be a gold mine

4. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? Having no discernible talent I'd be better employed as a judge. I'd make a good Simon Cowell.

5. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? The awful picture of me that keeps appearing in the Penguin News (see above)

6. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? I still aspire to get to South Georgia and Antarctica. South Africa is also on the hit list

7. What is your favourite TV programme? Currently Revenge, and the timely arrival of ITV meant I got to catch up on Scott & Bailey

8. What would people be surprised to learn about you? Hmm... that I used to captain a softball team back in the UK?

9. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently? Movies? Much as I love the cinema, the prospect of driving 35 miles on dark unsurfaced road through minefields has meant that it has lost some of its appeal of late. Silver Linings was good

10. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Im Bru. Scotland's finest export

11. What is your happiest childhood memory? Meeting the Spice Girls. Oh wait, that was when I was 27

All at sea with fisheries observer Emily Hancox

AS the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department (FIDF) has fairly recently relocated from FIPASS (Falkland Interim Port And Storage System) to new offices attached to the Department of Agriculture (DoA), it seemed like a good idea to give the general public a brief insight into the lives of scientific fisheries observers.

Despite being a little homesick for the familiarity of the old offices, we have settled into the new building, and it's great being able to accurately weigh small samples even on a windy day - FIPASS used to sway a little, which made scales fluctuate in bad weather.

There are currently six observers employed, one of whom is a dedicated seabird observer. Each of us spend a large proportion of our time at sea (on average about 160 days per year), generally on trips that last about four weeks. During this time we have regular radio schedules with the observer coordinator and on many vessels there is also email access for data exchanges.

Any vessel fishing within Falkland waters must be prepared to host an observer on board as part of their licence conditions and this can sometimes mean spending time on the high seas as ships move about to find the best catches. The target species, type of vessels, and crew nationalities vary greatly, all of which make for very diverse working conditions and environments. The crew on the majority of vessels are incredibly helpful and friendly, and a much appreciated sense of camaraderie prevails on board. Living and working with 20-50 sailors for several weeks can often result in good friendships and this certainly helps to overcome language barriers.

The majority of our job entails biological sampling of target and discard species whilst we are at sea. This generally involves gathering data such as length/weight/sex/maturity, as well as fish otoliths (calcified part of the inner ear that grows with rings and is used for ageing), and often other data for specific protocols (such as porbeagle shark spiral valves, stomach samples, dogfish and skate spines or tissue samples for DNA analysis). Some samples are collected and frozen for identification or processing onshore. The data collected by observers is used by fisheries scientists for stock assessment models and fisheries management.

An important role for every observer is to monitor and assess discards. We measure and estimate how much fish is being discarded, and which species. Seabird and marine mammal by-catch or interactions are also monitored.

Whilst on board a finfish boat, every fourth day for biological observers, and every day for the seabird observer, is set aside for monitoring bird interactions. This is to collect data on the effectiveness of tori lines (bird scaring lines) and monitor the abundance of different species and if/when/how they come into contact with the fishing gear (cables/net etc). When birds are killed and the bodies recovered, they are brought back to Stanley to be necropsied in the lab.

FIG licences stipulate that fishing vessels must adhere to Mar-Pol, so we check to make sure that plastics are not being discarded at sea and other guidelines are being followed. A lot of the ships have incinerators on board, but some vessels can score badly in an observer report by having bad waste management practices.

Spending extended periods at sea can be quite demanding, particularly in the occasional spells of bad weather that occur in the South Atlantic and around the Falklands. When the weather is really rough, above a Beaufort 8 (37 knots), few vessels choose to fish as it is difficult to work and gear is more likely to get broken. However, the importance of securing gear properly is rapidly learned when after finishing a factory shift and returning to your cabin you find the majority of your belongings rolling around on the floor. Following the 'one hand for you, one hand for the boat' mantra makes showering and eating soup particularly challenging, and whilst it is fun for the first hour, days of stormy weather can get quite tiresome.

Observers also take part in specific research trips alongside other scientists from the Fisheries Department. These trips are designed to answer specific research questions and are conducted on commercial fishing vessels, to test practicality, fishing gear mesh sizes, and a variety of other things.

Life as an observer can be demanding, is usually very rewarding and is certainly a great way to learn about Falkland Islands' fisheries. Whilst observers tend to come and go with regularity (original contracts typically last for a year), there is a great element of team spirit, even if we're only all onshore at the same time once a year or so.

Margaret Thatcher Home for the Elderly

WITH regards to a permanent way of remembering Margaret Thatcher, whilst re-naming the airport or the new port after her sound OK, I cannot think of a better way than to build an old people's home and name it The Margaret Thatcher Residential Home for the Elderly.

With Lady Thatcher suffering from dementia in her later years and needing constant care I am sure that this proposal would have met with her approval.

An old folk's home is long overdue in Stanley as while the residential rooms in the hospital suffice it must be a burden on the nurses at times especially when there are visiting consultants at the hospital and lots of operations taking place. We are all living longer these days and I have spoke to quite a lot of people who agree that FIG should invest in a purpose built building with lots of large windows so the elderly inhabitants could while away their days being able to watch the world go around outside instead of being cooped up in a small room with windows that are too high to see out of when sitting down. The triangle by government house would be an ideal spot, with beautiful views over the harbour, close to the hospital, and could be staffed mostly by caring people who would not necessarily need qualifications but just love looking after old people.

So come on MLAs (some of whom could even find themselves needing an old people's home in the not too distant future with no disrespect meant) please give this idea some serious thought before it is too late and the hospital is so over-crowded with elderly patients that it has too few beds to cope with the really ill.

Strong system say court advisers

David Greensmith and Kathryn Hannah at Government House on Monday

TWO court advisers invited to the Islands by the Falkland Islands Government and HE the Governor to examine the court systems, will ultimately make recommendations with regard to changes to court services in the Islands.

Head of the Crown Dependencies team in the Ministry of Justice Kathryn Hannah and the Justices Clerk for Lancashire and Cumbria David Greensmith, have been examining the court system and the legislative framework in advance of, "big events and potential," changes in the future.

Mr Greensmith described the current systems as, "very good, very strong," and backed by a, "strong community."

The pair conducted a workshop with all court users, looking at,

"what works well what doesn't and what the issues are."

They emphasised that the recommendations would be within a local context and that, "it is not a one size fits all," but about understanding how Falkland Islands' courts work and how improvements might be made using local expertise.

He said they had met Islanders as well as contractors, which had been very helpful in putting things into a local context, meaning their recommendations would be appropriate to the needs of the Islands and proportionate to the size of the Falklands.

Ms Hannah said the work was in recognition of changes that had taken place over the last thirty years and that, "things will evolve with oil exploration," such as different crimes, and as such the court services needed to fit with any changes that might take place.

Ms Hannah noted that the court system was linked with every other part of the justice system, and recommendations would also concentrate on how the various parts could work together.

The pair declared themselves impressed with commitment to the administration of justice of all of those they had met including the Royal Falkland Islands Police, the Attorney General's Chambers, Social Services, Justices of the Peace and, "all of those involved in the courts."

The pair hoped to complete their report within two weeks in order to, "maintain momentum."

PREAMBLE: Due to an ageing population the UK government has proposed to increase their state pension age from 65 to 68 gradually between 2026 and 2046. The UK government has also proposed that, from 2017, the weekly rate of pension (currently £107.45) should be uprated to be worth £144 in today's money in order to avert poverty in old age and thus provide a basic standard of living.

Q: Is there an ageing population in the Falklands and if so does FIG have any long term plans to increase the qualifying age of 64 for receiving our retirement pension?

The following answers were provided by the Falkland Islands Government Financial Secretary Nicola Granger.

A: The Policy Unit have advised that comparison with the 2006 Census confirms that the trend in the Falkland Islands is towards an ageing population. People aged 65 and over now number 301 (10.7% of all persons) compared to 266 (9.0%) in 2006. Overall this is an increase of almost 14% within this age group. Meanwhile, the number of young persons is static so there is no indication of a large replacement of working age persons through natural growth or immigration at the present time i.e. based on current trends we would expect the proportion of older people to continue to increase.

Executive Council in April approved the increase in the qualifying age for retirement pension from 64 to 65 from the year 2020 and an increase of one year for every ten years until the age of 70 in 2070.

Q: What plans does FIG have for future increases in the weekly rate of our retirement pension (currently £128)?

A: Any future increases in the weekly rate of retirement pension will be considered annually as part of the budget process.

Q: To what living standard is our retirement pension intended to cover?

A: The retirement pension provides a minimum pension which combined with other savings possibilities in the Falklands, such as Falkland Islands Pension Schemes, should provide a livable income. The Policy Unit are currently undertaking a Minimum Income Standard project which will establish a real living income across the Falklands which can, in the future, be used in debates on pension levels.

Oil development: boon or blight?

Regeneris looks into its crystal ball

FOR some, the prospect of the Falkland Islands becoming an oil-producing country creates exciting visions of opportunity, while for others it seems like a nightmare.

What is certain is that oil, like sheep and fishing before it, will inevitably bring changes to both our wealth and our way of life.

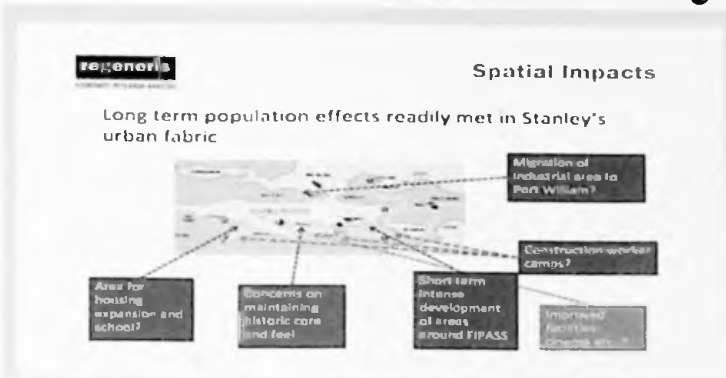

In order to get a better idea as to whether these changes will be beneficial, harmful or a mixture of the two, a sizeable group of interested citizens met in the Community School on Thursday evening last week to listen to a presentation by Stephen Nicol of the economics research analysts, Regeneris.

The likely impact of oil development is a big subject provoking many questions, to which some possible answers had already been provided by the socio-economic survey commissioned from Plexus on behalf of Rockhopper Exploration PLC. However that study, which might reasonably have been expected to be partisan, if not biased, dealt only with the predicted impacts of the involvement, of Rockhopper and their majority partner in the development of the Sea Lion field, Premier Oil.

Regeneris had been commissioned by the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) to take a longer and wider view. As Mr Nicol explained, his company's brief was to understand the potential economic and social impacts on the Falklands arising from the Sea Lion development, but also to consider the impact of other scenarios involving additional exploration and development. The reason for this was to help FIG better prepare its response and strategies with a view to optimising positive impacts and minimising negative impacts.

To this end, since being commissioned by FIG, Regeneris had looked at what had happened in other parts of the world as well as holding detailed discussions with oil and gas companies with interests in the Falklands and reviewing a wide range of documentation from a variety of sources including the 2012 census. During a series of public consultation exercises arranged as part of two field work visits to the Falklands, they had involved over a hundred people in meetings and focus groups.

On Thursday Mr Nicol presented four possible scenarios as a basis for illustration. Scenario 1 on which most of his speech was predicated was essentially representative of the present position in which two more exploration rigs may be expected in 2014 and 2015, with Premier oil beginning a process, hopefully leading to the extraction of the first oil from the Sea Lion Field in 2017.

The other scenarios, which envisaged more successful oil exploration leading to the development of two new fields around 2021 (Scenario 2), plus the exploitation of gas reserves, either off-shore (Scenario 3) or off-shore (Scenario 4) were inevitably more speculative.

In his introduction, Mr Nicol said that he and his team had been on the whole surprised at the degree of public support for oil development that they had discovered in the Falklands. There would be considerable changes even as a result of the most modest scenario but most were similar to those predicted in the Plexus study.

One difference was that the number of jobs created, which might be expected to peak at around 350-400 in the years 2016 to 2017, would at around 175 when the development phase entered what could be regarded as 'a steady state,' be higher than that predicted by Plexus.

Effects on permanent population were rather harder to predict, given that most of the labour requirement would be off-shore and often of a temporary nature, but a peak of 190 housing units might be required. This should settle down to around 100 in the longer term, not counting a further requirement for accommodation for temporary workers and those in transit.

Assuming no further oil developments than those envisaged in Scenario One, there would be a considerably increased demand for construction skills during the period of infrastructure provision, but this would settle down from 2020 onwards to a requirement for about 175 jobs, divided more or less equally between onshore oil and gas activities, supply chain activities, public sector increases and increased activity in the private sector.

Among the necessary activities which will be required for 'first oil' production in 2017 and will lead to a short-term increased labour demand, are the construction of a temporary harbour with the work beginning in 2014 and the harbour entering into operation in 2016.

Regeneris forecast a short term population increase of 20%, not including temporary workers, which should peak in 2016 and 2017 before reducing to a 'steady state' figure of around 10% (230) thereafter.

While the preservation of the historic look and feel of Stanley had been expressed to Regeneris as one of the population's main concerns, Mr Nicol seemed to be of the opinion that once an initial period of increased activity around FIPASS was over and the principal industrial area had been moved to the other side of Wireless Ridge with the opening of the new port, Stanley would easily absorb the required increases in population size. A larger population, coupled with much increased government revenues could also lead to the provision of a better level of services and facilities for all.

As is mentioned elsewhere, these quoted increases in economic activity relate solely to those derived directly from oil and do not include what could be the considerable impact of government investment elsewhere in the economy.

The Regeneris report does not predict major changes brought about in Camp due to the first scenario. On the positive side, an increased Stanley population will inevitably bring with it increased opportunities for the sale of agricultural products, primarily meat, while on the negative side Mr Nicol ventured that government might find itself having to find ways to counteract an increased 'Stanley pull.'

An exception, if that is the option chosen and all agreements and planning processes have been completed, is the possible assembly of flow-lines on shore, somewhere in Camp. This would need to be completed by the end of 2016, during which year also a two-year programme of drilling in the Sea Lion Field would begin to enable extraction to begin at the planned time in 2017.

To the surprise of some members of his audience, who later commented on it, Mr Nicol's illustration of activity during his first scenario had work on the proposed new permanent port not beginning before an uncertainly predicted 2017, with a presumably equally uncertainly predicted finishing date in 2019.

According to this scenario, if crude oil which is currently worth between $92 and $100 per barrel, were to be worth $100 a barrel in 2018, the Falklands GDP, which is at present around £140 million would have leaped to just over £1 billion and would not return to current levels till around 2045.

On the other hand, should the oil price defy present predictions of increase and fall to $80 per barrel in 2018, Falklands GDP would increase to around £675 million, returning to current levels around 2039.

Currently FIG's revenue from oil-related activity stands at around £40 million, but according to the Regeneris Scenario 1, this figure would leap to just over £150 million from royalties on the first two years of production. The onset of corporation tax revenues in 2020 should take FIG's combined revenue from tax and royalties up to a stratospheric £400 million, given an oil price of £100 per barrel.

While decreases begin almost immediately after this peak, current levels of oil-related revenue are not resumed until 2048. FIG's annual average estimated income over this thirty-year period is estimated at a healthy £150 million at £100 per barrel (£110 million at £80 pounds per barrel).

As Mr Nicol pointed out, these figures are based solely on the Scenario One level of oil-related activity and do not take into account any increased revenue to FIG which would be expected to flow from other economic activities that such vastly increased levels of income should make possible.

These figures may seem mind-boggling to readers old enough to remember the early pre-fishing licensing 'eighties when FIG's annual revenues, apart from aid, totalled about £4.5 million, however they are as nothing compared to the FIG income levels to be achieved and maintained should other oil fields be developed.

Lafonia rally for bikes and quads

DUE to difficulties obtaining medical cover for the popular sport of motocross the usual activities did not take place this season, however, this didn't stop 29 enthusiastic bikers taking to Lafonia for two days of fun on the weekend.

Organiser Derek Jaffray told Penguin News that the group, on motorbikes and quad bikes, which included adults and a number of children, set off south from North Arm at 9.30am on Saturday, to the end of Bull Point.

Derek said all went well with only a few minor tumbles and the youngsters had great fun covering themselves in mud in a convenient 'hole', before returning to North Arm by approximately 4pm to reside either at the self-catering or at the house of Angeline Clarke and Paul Joshua.

That night they enjoyed a barbecue at the North Arm self-catering before setting off the next morning to Driftwood close to Bleaker Island.

The group had depleted slightly on the second day due to children being, "a bit stiff and sore," said Derek.

Saturday was a beautiful day Derek told us, with much time spent lying back and chatting between the biking activity. "Everyone seemed to enjoy it," he said, Lafonia being excellent ground for, "speeding along."

Swim Club showcase skills Coach Meg drills the squad

STANLEY Swimming Club held a community swimming gala last Friday to fund raise for the Natwest Bermuda Island Games in July and showcase their training to parents and public.

The event lasted the whole morning; there were heats of all strokes and varying distances including an only lightly competitive team relay medley.

There was a friendly attitude to the morning but the times were still quick with Sorrel Pompert Robertson setting a new unofficial record for the 50 metres breast stroke in a time of 41.72 seconds, along with further unofficial records in the individual medley and 100m breaststroke. Proving his worth as a swimmer, Luke Gilbert decided 25 metres front crawl was not a long enough race and despite winning his heat decided to swim on to 50 metres.

The club had the added benefit last week of a visiting trainer from Canada courtesy of the Commonwealth Games Association of Canada as part of their Sports Leadership Abroad Programme. Meg Fracke was a competitive swimmer for 15 years and since university she has pursued a career as a coach in order to pass on her experience. Despite her young age she has trained and assisted in the training of pre-competitive programmes for a university team. "Some went on to become national qualifiers and went through to Olympic trials," she said.

Meg has been, "amazed," with the number of swimmers in the Falklands club, "For 2,900 people to have twenty turning up regularly is impressive."

She has had a busy week introducing new drills and techniques to our national squad.

"We've been focusing on turns and starts a lot, putting in attention to the fine details."

"It's a beautiful facility here and it's great to see the public and the club using it."

Though we may not have realistic dreams of medals at the Island Games Meg is enthusiastic that the event will be a good experience for the young athletes: "It'll be good for them and the coaches to talk to teams from other parts of the world and see what they are doing, and to come back and help the younger swimmers with the experience they've gained," she said, adding that it is always good to spread the word of the Falklands. "I'd not heard of it before I found out I was coming here."

Since the Gala, the Swimming Club has made their selection for the NatWest Island Games in Bermuda.

Representing the Falklands this year will be: Daniel Clarke, Emily Barker, Sophie Pompert Robertson, Kirsty McLeod, Nikita Whistler and Sorrel Pompert Robertson.

A sub-committee of the Swimming Club made the selection which was based on combination scores achieved from: attitude, effort, attendance and qualifying times.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

INSHORE SURVEYS EXPRESSION OF INTEREST

In order to further explore the potential to construct bundled flow lines in the Falkland Islands, Premier Oil seeks Expressions of Interest for inshore surveys covering sites in three locations together with some general route lines in sheltered waters:

The data to be gathered includes:

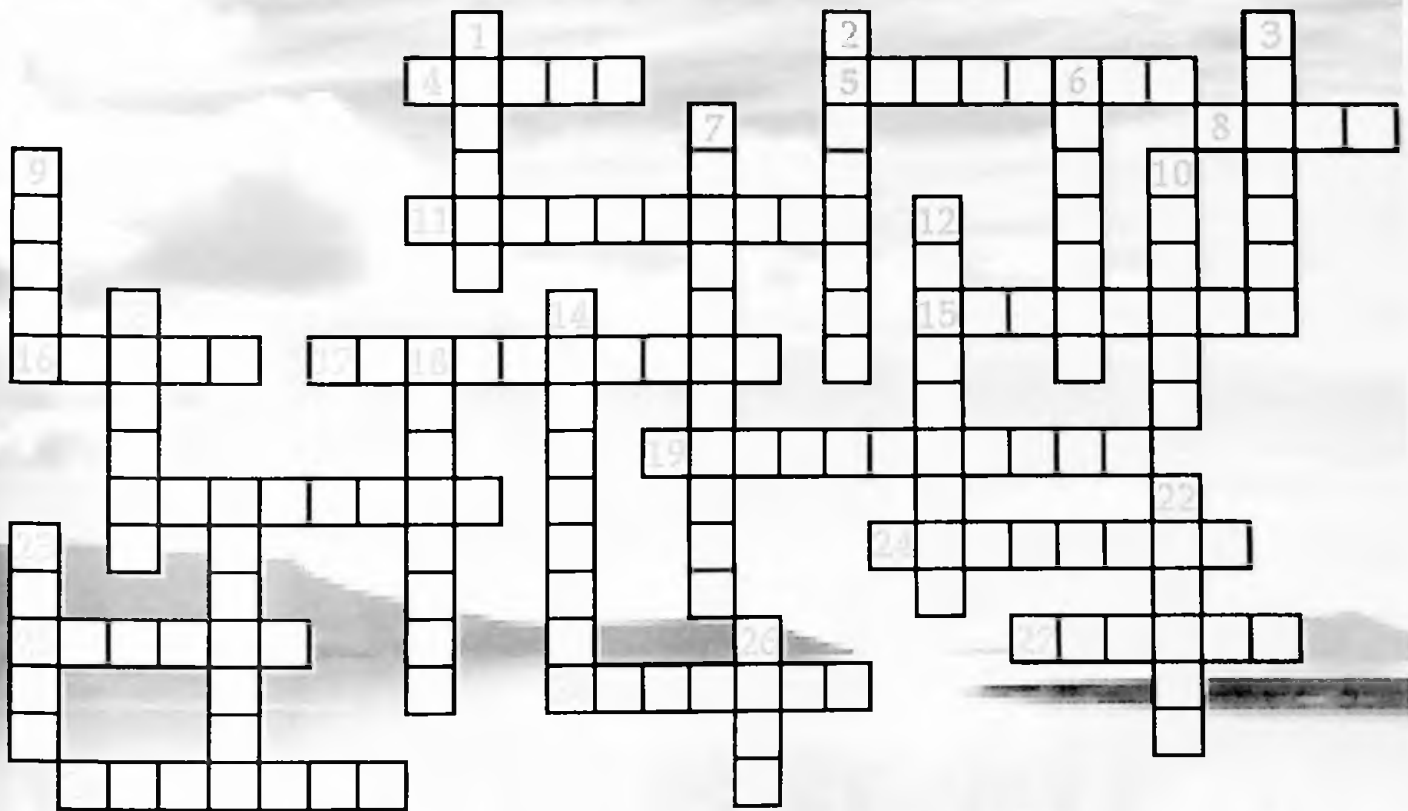

- Bathymetric levels & geophysical features from shore to 7km out, by 500m either side of nominal line and along nominal routes lines.
- Seabed soils – a general understanding in the defined area and some specific point geotechnical strengths / penetrations to define characteristics.
- Seabed soils layering to identify sub-bottom characteristics and layers.
- Mapping of kelp and seaweed areas.
- Mapping the nature of rock and stone under the kelp beds.
- Video of route lines / key features / anomalies.
- Environmental surveys to identify epifaunal species and any cold-water corals to support an outline environmental assessment.

Please note that the above inshore survey work is expected to be undertaken in May 2013

Companies in the Falklands Islands with the capability & resources to undertake some or all of the scope should submit their hard copy response to the above to Premier Oil's offices in Stanley by 10 May, marked for the attention of Mr. Ken Humphrey.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

PRIMROSES are starting to flower. They must think that Winter is nearly over rather than just beginning. I wish this was so; this last Summer, apart from that very promising Spring, has been a miserable one has it not? However, the hemerocallis (day lilies) are still flowering as are some kniphofias (red-hot-pokers) and, of course dianthus, (pinks and carnations) and some roses too. The ground-cover ones are still totally smothered in smallish double pink flowers. The hardy cyclamen are just coming through, their prettily marked leaves having suddenly appeared through the ground, they will flower at different times, so we should have a reasonable show.

The myosotidiums (Chatham Island forget-me-knots) are looking wonderful; the big shiny cabbage leaves are looking their best, but the gorgeous blue one has finished flowering but not the white one. This one, I think, is more of a novelty than anything else as I find the flowers rather pale and insipid really but they all have lovely foliage and as they will keep that till May or June it is good enough for me.

The crocosmias continue their flowering display as do the hebes and some of the hypericums and the potentillas, both the shrubs and the herbaceous ones. The colchicums (Autumn crocus) are all looking good, especially the double flowered one called, with good reason, 'Water-lily'. These rather large bulbs are wonderfully hardy and will even flower with the bulbs sitting on the surface. The lupins and poppies have finished and look a bit untidy again but the various mallows and some hardy geraniums and erodiums are still flowering as are some perennial antirrhinums (snapdragons). They come through most winters but I shall be taking cuttings and putting them in water on the kitchen window-sill just for safety. Biennials such as foxgloves, wallflowers and sweet Williams should be put out now, but I've let them self-seed over the garden this year and am just going to leave them alone to flower where they will.

Indoors the various fuchsias and geraniums are doing their 'thing' whilst the -so called- 'Christmas' cactus are getting covered in flower buds. The zantedeschias (Calla or Arum lilies) in various colours have flowered over Summer and the yellow one continues to do so.

In the vegetable garden digging the potatoes has priority at the moment. All the second earlies: Charlotte and Estima, are out and the main-crop lifting is well under way. So far the ground is pretty dry and so I have not had to resort to washing and drying the tubers. I just pop them on to mesh to remove any soil as I turn them gently to check for holes or disease. We will use those first as they would not 'keep' well. It's also a good time to pick out nice looking potatoes for next year's seed. Egg sized ones are more than big enough. As the potatoes get lifted some cabbage plants for Spring will go in their place. At this time of year there is plenty of space, so they will have a couple of feet each way between plants. The other root vegetables have given mixed results: the parsnips and carrots are superb, the turnips not bad either but the swedes are nothing to write home about. I don't know if it was weather or a different seed to my normal 'best of all' or just bad luck or lack of care on my part.

The cabbages have done very well and we have plenty of them. Fortunately they have not all matured at the same time as has been known to happen some years. It is also a simple thing to wash and ensure the leaves are clean. The broccoli, on the other hand, though it has grown just as well, I have not used, or the cauliflowers either as having brought in a few and put them in a basin full of salty water, each produced about a dozen or so earwigs trying to make a get-away. That is fine in that it got rid of them and there were (probably) no more left in the curds but--- how does one ensure that those curds aren't full of droppings?

We had to bring in the pumpkins too; they would not have grown any more but it would have been good to let them mature a bit longer, however, the 'wigs' (as the kiddies call them) had all but decimated one of them. It was covered in holes, well, craters really, all showing the distinctive 'tail' poking out. Yuck! I was probably being a little vindictive putting that one in a bucket of soapy water before throwing it away but we all enjoyed the resulting sight of the beasties evacuating as quickly as possible, only to drown, of course.

No insect likes soap. I know there are sprays and powders available to kill these pests and I do use them (I'm not that 'green') on ornamental plants, but cannot make myself use anything like that where food is concerned. Over the years there have been too many, genuine mistakes and they have all had horrendous side effects. Off hand I could mention asbestos, sheep dip and various medicines, but I expect there are more so-called 'safe' things out there. They are not a great problem for us 'oldies' but how might they affect our young people in years to come?

IJS archery takes off On form in London

IJS club pose with their target faces and certificates

FALKLANDS Archery Association has been running archery courses at the Infant and Junior School (IJS) and has formed a small club for years 5 and 6.

Ten enrolled for the first six week course with five taking a grading session after completing it. The children received a certificate and were allowed to keep their target faces as a memento of their shooting.

The lowest that could have been awarded was white, but happily the group all exceeded this and scored between red and black grades.

The certificate scheme following the colours used in the target face itself with the white scoring zone being the lowest and gold (yellow) is being the highest.

Certificates were awarded at a full School Assembly.

The club wishes to thank IJS CE Head Teacher Tom Hill and his staff for their support, assistance and provision of facilities which enables the younger members of our community to try and excel in this sport, who knows, one day we may rival the Koreans.

Rising star Tamsin scores 504

ARCHER Tamsin McLeod became the first under 16 to break the 500 barrier in a Portsmouth shoot with a score of 504 on April 28.

It's been a year of frustration for this young archer who scored 499 a year ago and almost every other score of 490 before finally breaking past the 500 barrier.

The archery club wishes Tamsin hearty congratulations on her new achievement and looks forward to her representing her country in future international events.

The club is always looking for new members over the age of 10 years old to infinity, all archery disciplines welcome. Please see Penguin News for details. The club would also like to hear from anyone interested in running an archery club at Mount Pleasant.

Martin and Anton collect finish medals

THANKS to generous donations from the public and hard pavement pounding at the London Marathon Anton Wolfaardt raised over £2000 for the Outward Bound Trust, a charity that educates and inspires young people through adventures in the wild.

Martin Collins reported Anton finished the marathon in a personal best of 3 hours 10 minutes, which was four minutes earlier than he hoped for.

Martin, who is one of the Falklands, Island Games half marathon athletes in Belize this year, was also running on the day and posted a time of 2 hours 59 minutes, only 15 seconds off his personal best.

Penguins dominate in Sunday match

BLACKHAWKS' Karl Nightingale was first on the board against Flyers on Sunday, flicking the ball over Goalie Stuey Duncan as he fell to try and suffocate it. But Gordon Lennie retaliated for Flyers seconds later and less than a minute after that Martyn Barlow stretched their lead. Blackhawks' Jordan Phillips and Antoine Daille from Flyers were sent off with two minute penalties apiece for rough play and Karl closed the gap to make it two all at half time.

The aggression increased in the second half. Antoine swooped in a goal for Flyers and Gordon followed soon after with another. Andrew Miller stretched Flyers lead to three goals clear of Blackhawks and the game looked finished with only minutes left. Karl returned score but Martyn retaliated with another goal. However, Hawk captain Karl wasn't finished and secured his hat-trick with three minutes left and then scored again a minute later but couldn't catch Flyers. Final score Flyers 6, Blackhawks 5.

In the next game of the evening Coyotes barely had time to blink before Penguins were on the scoreboard courtesy of Kyran Evans, or it could have been Kevin Ross, it was a bit of a blur but what is certain is that within five minutes Coyotes were two nil down to the birds. Luck wasn't on the Coyotes side with on target shots blocked, fractional misses and obvious errors. Kyran flicked in another goal and Duane Evans followed with another minutes later to leave the score 4 - 0 at halftime.

The second half started with Coyotes keen to find their first goal. Defending went a bit awry for Coyote Teslyn Barkman who took her stick sharply to the hip when it was stood on by a Penguin, stopping the game briefly for injury time. Kyran secured his hat-trick and Ricardo Leyton added another for Penguins.

It was not looking good for the dogs; the hated zero that lit up their side of the scoreboard persistently haunted them throughout the game. Despite a good scrap Penguins emerged victorious reaffirming their dominance of the Energise Shield and goalie Marcus Morrison won his second shut-out of the season. Final score Penguins 6, Coyotes 0.

The Law Courts of the Falkland Islands The Taxation Appeals Tribunal

Section 180 of the Taxes Ordinance establishes a Tax Appeal Tribunal which allows people who are aggrieved by certain decisions of the Commissioner for Taxation and the taxation authorities to appeal against them.

The Tribunal is an independent body which consists of not less than 5 or more than 7 members. The members are appointed by His Excellency the Governor. The Senior Magistrate is presently the Chairman.

The Tribunal is looking to recruit up to 3 new members. The work involves reading the papers, attending meetings to discuss cases and sitting on appeal hearings. At present the Tribunal meets relatively infrequently. No remuneration is payable and service on the Tribunal is entirely voluntary.

A person who is:

- (a) an elected member of the Legislative Council, or
- (b) a public officer in any public office in the Finance Department, is not qualified to be appointed as a member of the Tribunal

Anyone who interested in serving as a member of the Tribunal is asked to send a letter of application to the Clerk to the Tax Appeal Tribunal, Law Courts, Town Hall, Stanley by 10th May 2013.

Appeal dismissed

AN appeal against both conviction and sentence by David Reginald Thomas (39) who was sentenced to six years in prison on January 6, for three offences of touching a girl under 13 and one of sexual grooming, has been dismissed.

Chief Justice Christopher Gardner QC said that during the hearing he had to consider whether the convictions made by locum Senior Magistrate Amanda Rippon were unsafe and whether the sentences she passed were manifestly excessive, as submitted by defence lawyer Peter Horgan.

Dismissing both aspects of the appeal the Chief Justice said he considered Ms Rippon's approach to sentencing to be "correct and clear." With regard to the convictions he said the case against Mr Thomas was a strong one and having considered all the submissions and evidence he had no reason to suspect the verdicts were unsafe.

Royal support for Falklands

IN the Queen's speech at the State Opening of Parliament on Wednesday Her Majesty said: "My government will ensure the security, good governance and development of the Overseas Territories, including by protecting the Falkland Islanders' and Gibraltarians' right to determine their political future."

A Foreign and Commonwealth Office press release that accompanied a reference to the Queen's words noted: "The referendum on 10-11th March, 2013 proved beyond doubt that the Islanders wish to remain a UK Overseas Territory in line with existing constitutional arrangements with a 99.8 per cent yes vote and a 92 per cent turnout.

"The Government will continue to ensure that the Islanders are able to develop their economy, including oil exploration, without outside interference or harassment, and will rebut false Argentine rhetoric in whatever forum it emerges.

Offer made to new Dir Ed

THE appointment of a new and permanent Director of Education will be announced very soon.

Speaking to Penguin News this week, Acting Director of Education Tom Hill confirmed that recruitment had gone very well: "The Human Resources Department has made an offer, it has been accepted and we are currently waiting for the successful Director of Education candidate to send us a quick biography that can be shared with the local media."

Mr Hill also confirmed that recruitment had progressed well in relation to the hiring of a new Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) Head: "There were a large number of highly qualified candidates, interviews have taken place and an offer has been made."

Subject to usual checks a Head Teacher should be in place by the beginning of the new term.

Invited to respond to a negative criticism made to Penguin News by a member of the public that education "was falling apart," Mr Hill expressed surprise. He said: "I can't imagine what that comment would be based on."

Problem means work suspended on jetty but no delay says DPW

WORKS were suspended on the Public Jetty early this week when the first pile went to a greater depth than expected.

Director of Public Works (DPW) Manfred Keenleyside told Penguin News this did not mean the piles would have to be replaced.

He said the problem could be, "accommodated by using the piles in a different sequence and if necessary obtaining more pile tube to extend others if the cumulative length is greater than is currently held, as piles can be lengthened and shortened as necessary."

Asked if a delay was anticipated he said he did not anticipate one, "and if additional tubing is needed it should be possible to obtain this within the allocated £1.3 million budget."

In determining what pile lengths to order, reference was made to earlier surveys on which the original jetty construction had been based and some additional work was done, explained Mr Keenleyside.

He added: "But without access to a barge such as that recently used for the work in Port William (which was obviously not available when the materials were ordered) judgments have to be made and the pile lengths ordered were greater than the information available suggested should be needed in order to provide some safety margin."

When the first pile was being driven, "it kicked out of plumb and that is being reviewed to determine the reason and take corrective action before any further piles are driven," he said.

Morrisons (Falklands) Ltd Regional Mike Butler also confirmed that difficulties had been encountered in maintaining the vertical alignment of the first pile as it was being driven.

He said: "The position and alignment of the piles are key to the structural stability of the new jetty which has been designed so that it can be extended when the Waterfront Development takes place."

Mr Butler added that with any civil engineering works, "unforeseen ground conditions can have an impact on the construction sequence, we made the decision to stop work and review temporary works design (pile guide frame) with our engineers in the UK."

Site staff were redeployed to the Sappers Hill project, "and will return to site when we have determined the most effective solution," said Mr Butler.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

LOOKING back on the week, I sniggered to myself at the occasional media portrayal of the Falklands being a sleepy backwater with the hay chewing residents, grossly outnumbered by sheep and penguins having nothing better to do than drive their flashy 4x4s around while waiting for the oil money to pour in. Yawn!

Life would be so uncomplicated if we really were such a simple breed, but the truth is in this 'sleepy backwater' there is always so much going on that there's no time for such indulgent complacency. Conversations don't tend to revolve around the weather and what the in-colour is for the winter wardrobe, but are more likely to be opened up with a demand to know what you think is a fitting tribute to Baroness Thatcher, whether Assembly members spreading word of the referendum overseas is a worthwhile exercise, who may stand for election in November, what the next shot Cristina K will fire into her own foot will be, if she might even flee the country to escape the wrath of her own increasingly frustrated people, to how we can best maintain our culture and heritage within the rapid development which is a necessary fore-runner of hydro-carbons being extracted commercially.

It's all heady stuff, and there's many a table been walloped enthusiastically in recent weeks to hammer home a point well made or not, as the case can occasionally be. But it shows we care.

As the week progressed there was speculation as to the real motive of an Argentine fishery research vessel undertaking work in the South Georgia area (see page 3) and work ground to a halt on the public jetty project - piles can cause all sorts of problems, but it's not good manners to discuss them publicly apparently.

By Wednesday no less than Her Majesty the Queen had succeeded in providing me with that nice fluffy, purple feeling M.L.A Gavin Short is so partial to, when she made mention of Falkland Islanders and our right to determine our own political future.

Somehow actually seeing and hearing our very own sovereign make this statement in her instructions to Parliament for the next year lends it that air of permanence the changing face of any government, no matter how committed, can ever match.

So, next time I am asked if I think our M.L.As need to continue to spread the word overseas I'm going to be inclined to say I think they've done a good job, but now it's time to concentrate on home affairs. We have the Queen's word - and that's good enough for me.

Missing jigger fisherman discovered on reefer

A CREWMAN who went missing from a Taiwanese jigger in Berkeley Sound on Monday May 6 was discovered on Tuesday morning on board the reefer Zhong Zhou 1, also in Berkeley Sound.

The Royal Falkland Islands Police told Penguin News that the man, for whom a sea search had been undertaken by RAF Search and Rescue, local launches and the Falklands patrol vessel Protegit, was in Stanley and would be repatriated this weekend.

Detective Inspector Dave Street said the man had spoken to the RFIP in conjunction with Customs and Immigration and he had expressed a desire to leave his ship.

DI Street said it had been established that the man had not suffered any mistreatment on the vessel.

The man had managed to gain access to the reefer while the vessels were transshipping. He had climbed across a rope and hidden for 24 hours before being discovered.

The jigger Lian Rong, was just over one mile north east of Strike Off Point when the man was reported missing and the original conclusion had been that he had jumped overboard.

As well as the sea search, the Falkland Islands Defence Force also undertook an extensive shore search.

FITB sponsorship for Bird Fair

THE Falkland Islands Tourist Board (FITB) has purchased sponsorship for the UK's Bird Fair 2013 and as such every attendee will wear a lanyard with FITB's logo and web address printed on them confirmed FITB Managing Director Tony Mason.

The event will take place in August and FITB has secured four speaking engagements two of which will be undertaken by Mr Mason and the others by Martin Beaton of Weddell Island.

Speaking about the event Mr Mason said he was pleased to have the continued support of Martin and Jane Beaton at this event.

This year's event will host a proper Falkland Islands Smoko.

In excess of 20,000 visitors attend the Bird Fair and over 300 exhibitors display their products.

Earwigs versus rhubarb juice a possible solution?

FOLLOWING on from last week's earwig story on plans for biological control agents, a local resident more used to dealing with fish than land based creepy-crawlies has had some success with an unusual solution to the beasts chomping his garden crops.

Falkland Islands Government Fisheries Observer Co-ordinator Joost Pompert explained that unusually this season his garden has been under severe attack.

In January said Joost, "I noticed that lots of the potato foliage was being eaten by something, and also seedlings from carrots and parsnips were being stripped of their green, but no evidence of animals anywhere."

He showed examples to Jo Tanner at the Department of Agriculture who suggested he check it out at night with a torch. This he did, and discovered lots of young earwigs, "crawling all over the place."

So what to do?

Joost said Jo suggested he try a concoction made from rhubarb leaves (not the stalk) as they contain a poisonous chemical, "which a lot of bugs do not like."

After checking the internet for recipes he got to it, and boiled up a few large pots of leaves, ending up with concentrated green rhubarb juice. "This, in dilution of about one part juice to three or four parts water, I put in a watering can and liberally sprayed it on all crops in the entire garden."

The result? After some days, said Joost, "new potato leaves were forming which remained unaffected, and completely stripped parsnip seedlings grew new green too, as did the carrots. So I was quietly optimistic. Since then we have had quite a bit of produce from the various plots, but none with earwigs in them."

He said outcomes in examinations and other progress indicators across the sector all indicate an upward trend and parent questionnaires within the last 12 months have shown high levels of satisfaction.

Mr Hill noted that numbers of applications for teacher recruitment had also generally improved on last year: "The Education Department has worked long and hard in recent years to place local candidates in positions of authority and influence and I think that the fact that both the new Head Teacher for Infant Junior School/Camp Education (IJS/CE) and the new Deputy at FICS are Falkland Islanders is something really worth celebrating."

Argentina fishery cruise in SG area

NEWS this week that Argentina had decided to undertake a fisheries research cruise in the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands (SGSSI) without obtaining authorisation from the region's Commissioner, Nigel Haywood is not connected in any way to the Falklands. Acting Governor Sandra Tyler-Haywood has assured.

Speculation that it could be deemed a "ratcheting up," was unfounded, she said adding that South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands are a completely different territory to the Falkland Islands and it was not in Argentina's interest to upset the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR), of which it was a founding member.

Mrs Tyler-Haywood said although the Argentine vessel Eduardo Holmberg had only sailed from Mar del Plata on April 26, Government House had been aware of plans for the cruise since January 2013.

The Eduardo Holmberg had been boarded and checked by the British Antarctic Survey's RRS James Clark Ross (JCR) on Tuesday, as is the right of all CCAMLR members. Mrs Tyler-Haywood said the inspector from the JCR had been welcomed on board the Argentine vessel carrying 14 scientists, and it was apparent all CCAMLR regulations were being complied with.

To date 15 test trawls have been carried out to the northwest and south of South Georgia with further trawls planned for the northern part of the island before the Eduardo Holmberg returns to Argentina at the end of May.

Argentina had notified CCAMLR of their intention to carry out the research cruise, however what they failed to do was to inform the UK which is normal for vessels to do when operating within a British Overseas Territory.

Mrs Tyler-Haywood confirmed that a letter had been lodged with CCAMLR to circulate to all members expressing dismay at the lack of notification.

"Had they notified us we would have still issued permission, it would not have been refused because it was an Argentine vessel," she explained, adding that because Argentina would not accept South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands were a British Overseas Territory, they did not think they had to obtain approval.

Notifying and obtaining authority applies to all countries including Britain.

"If any further notifications are received from Argentina we will treat them in accordance with every application we get for that kind of cruise and will take action as we consider appropriate," said Mrs Tyler-Haywood, adding: "The key thing for Islanders is that there is no evidence at all of it being related to the Falklands referendum, there is a separate dispute between Argentina and the UK on SGSSI, it's not all lumped together."

In order to attract more, Mr Hill said, "We do have problems recruiting LSAs sometimes. I am told that our LSAs are paid at more or less the same rate as those in the UK. The difference here is that we are lucky enough to have full employment in the Falklands, people therefore have more choice and lower paid jobs are less attractive."

Finally invited to comment on his references (in a paper presented to the Education Committee yesterday) to repair and maintenance of the of the FICS building and the heating system, he said the building had some real heating issues, "but these are currently being well managed by PWD while a permanent solution is considered."

Banned driver

STANLEY man Ralph Mahood Jones (44) was fined £1,200 and disqualified from driving for two years in the Magistrates Court on Friday.

Mr Jones entered a guilty plea to a charge of failing without reasonable excuse to provide a specimen of breath on April 17.

Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis providing the facts of the case said Mr Jones had been stopped by a routine police patrol just after midnight, when he pulled out of King Street in a Freeland registration GH3, causing the police to brake.

Concerned at how the vehicle was being driven the officers pulled him over and it became apparent that Mr Jones had been drinking. When he got out of the vehicle it ran forward due to the hand brake not being applied.

Once inside the police vehicle Mr Jones repeatedly questioned the procedure to supply a breath sample and questioned what would happen if he didn't provide specimen.

Mr Jones was arrested for not providing a specimen after four attempts had failed and was taken to the Police Station where no further Camic breathalyser test was offered. Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley questioned why a further test had not been offered which was the normal procedure.

Defence lawyer Mark Neves said Mr Jones had not drank excessively during his evening at Malvina House Hotel as he had intended to drive. He further explained that his client who had never been stopped by police before suffered from anxiety and when he became anxious his speech slowed and could be interpreted as slurring by those not aware of the problem.

Mr Gumsley said that where appropriate the court could draw inference as to the level of intoxication when a defendant had failed to provide a specimen and consequently sentencing was higher and could reach an immediate custodial sentence.

He said he was satisfied Mr Jones was either so intoxicated he couldn't provide a breath sample or had avoided it because the reading would be adverse.

"It beggars belief, despite the short distance that you got into the vehicle," said Mr Gumsley

Top sweep draw

DARWIN Harbour Sports Association held one of its most successful sweep draws to date on the weekend with 7,160 books of tickets sold.

Sweep secretary Bobby Short reported that having tracked records back to as far as 1981 sales had only been above 7,000 on one other occasion - 2001 when 7,020 books were sold under the supervision of sweep secretary Lisa Jaffray.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I READ on the internet that Argentina are trying to paint themselves as the good guys while allegedly undertaking scientific research around South Georgia. At the same time they try to perpetuate the mythology of UK 'militarisation' of the South Atlantic. Their ministries clearly believe in a more gullible audience than they actually have.

Among the many interesting facts picked up from the full census figures recently released was that while the number of households with access to the internet is over 70 per cent we should not forget the other 28 per cent who do not have access. There is an easy assumption that every bit of information and every consultation can be done electronically and this was highlighted at the time of the census itself.

Over a quarter of the population could be left in the dark if we did not insist that all information be available in hard copy. Farsighted people worldwide are now trying to devise a system to capture archival information in a reliably secure way. So much business is done via very casual e-mail exchanges that there is a well founded fear that much valuable information may be lost or difficult to retrieve. I now feel my paper hoarding, in case I need to refer back to something, is not such a vice after all.

***

With just six months to the General Election in November I hope potential candidates are doing their homework so that if elected they can hit the ground running. If not they risk spending the first months finding their way around processes and procedures at a critical period in the Islands' development. I'm assuming the necessary new rules can be in place in time to ensure a reasonable income so that people can dedicate most of their time to an important job and not just try to fit it in around other commitments. I believe the electorate deserve more.

***

You still have until close of business on PN publication day Friday May 10 to make suggestions on how to commemorate the life of Baroness Thatcher and her outstanding support for the Falkland Islands.

Population more educated

Penguin News examines the results of the 2012 census

THE 2012 census shows that Falkland Islands residents are gaining more qualifications than in the previous census in 2006, but of the 1,582 people who make up the current work force (excluding MPA), 544 people still have no recognised qualifications (34 per cent of the working population).

The number of people with no qualifications has decreased by almost four per cent since 2006 from 817 (2006) to 787 (2012).

The number of males without qualifications is 303 compared to 241 females and this is further evident in that secondary educational attainment is higher amongst women (females: 35.8 per cent; males: 27.2 per cent) whereas there are more males with vocational and tertiary qualifications on the Islands.

The highest proportion of people earning the lowest incomes have no qualifications, with 69 per cent earning less than £20,000.

Policy Head Jamie Fotheringham pointed out however that this is not exclusive to the people with no qualifications, as there are people in the highest income brackets without qualifications. That said, there is evidence that having a tertiary education is correlated with higher earning brackets - 49 per cent of people with tertiary education qualifications earn over £30,000.

Levels of educational attainment tend to be lower in Camp than Stanley, with more than 50 per cent of the working population in Camp having no qualifications. This is a reflection of the type of agricultural work prevalent in Camp which is heavily reliant on specialised skills and methods most often gained through experience.

But with or without qualifications there is no doubt that the majority of the population are hard working with a massive 83 per cent of the working age population in employment. The majority are employees (72 per cent of working population).

More than 40 per cent of the total number of people who are self-employed in the Falklands live in Camp. Overall, 42 per cent of the working population in Camp are self employed compared to just 10 per cent in Stanley.

The Economic Activity rate for males (88 per cent) is higher than females (79 per cent); this reflects the larger proportion of the female population who are retired or not working for other reasons such as homemakers and family carers.

Mr Fotheringham said the census highlights the tight labour market within the Islands; the unemployment rate is 1.2 per cent, indicating that there is virtually no spare capacity within the labour market to accommodate any additional employment opportunities that may arise in the future. "This rate of unemployment is extremely low: in the UK 8.4 per cent of the economically active population is unemployed," he said.

The largest employer within the Islands is the Falkland Islands Government (FIG), which employs 485 people (25 per cent of the overall labour force). This may seem a large figure for public administration but FIG is responsible for providing an array of sectors and services such as water, postal service and power - services which are often provided by the private sector in larger economies. Mr Fotheringham explained.

There are a number of sectors which are reliant on workers residing on temporary work permits. In total, 17 per cent of workers (excluding MPA) are on work permits. There are two main groups of temporary workers: First, a large proportion of low wage, low skilled jobs are taken by workers on work permits. These include hospitality, wholesale and retail trade and community, social and personal services. Typically such individuals are earning below median income.

Second, a significant proportion of higher skilled specialist posts are taken by workers on work permits. These include higher skilled roles in public service and construction. This reflects a lack of particular skills/experience required for these roles within the

Qualified

EIGHTEEN newly qualified individuals (under the auspices of the Government Training and Employment Centre) were presented with certificates at Government House on Wednesday. A variety of Royal Yachting Association (RYA) courses were run in February 2013 by Andy Murray of the RYA. Twenty-five people attended those courses, but only three were able to attend the presentation. Other subjects included courts administration, cookery and law.

Badge of honour

FALKLAND Islands Government is seeking nominations for the 2013 Queen's Certificate and Badge of Honour for exceptional services to the community. Nomination forms are available from Gilbert House and should be submitted before Friday June 15 to the Clerk to Executive Council at Gilbert House Tel 27451 or by email to assembly@sec.gov.fk

COLUMNISTS are very privileged people. We are invited to share our thoughts with large numbers of people, without having to bother about the what, why, where and when of real journalism. We just open our hearts and tell you what we think. This week, though, I beg your forbearance for thoughts more personal than usual: reflections on the life of my mother, Joan, who passed away on 28 April at the age of 84.

Whenever I think of my mother, I visualise the remarkable flow of friends who passed through the front door of her little house on Occupation Road in Stanley, or those whom she met regularly at social events. Friends, of all ages and backgrounds, made mum's world turn, and they kept her happy, stimulated and cheerful right through to her final days.

Her friends tended to form little communities. Sometimes they overlapped, but often they didn't. First and foremost, of course, was her extended family - not just Michael and I and our families, but also our cousins Stuart, Fraser and Jimmy, and Anna, Alison and Barbara, whom Mum considered virtual daughters. She just loved spending time with the younger generations of Bounds, Wallaces, Kings, Howes and Keenleysides.

Following fast on the heels of family were many little groups, which sometimes overlapped, but often did not. There were The Falklands Women's Association, The Tuesday Morning Coffee Ladies, The Bridge Circle and The Craft Group. Her participation in the latter community always surprised me, as Mum had not knitted for years, and she appeared to produce nothing else from the group - other than more friends.

I'll mention one more extremely important band of friends: The Bahai community, of which she was a very active member.

The Faith's modern credo of universality of religion and equality of peoples appealed to her, and I believe it answered all of her spiritual questions.

Because her friends could not always be expected to stay conveniently close to Stanley, Mum had to criss-cross the globe to be with some of them. She loved spending several months every year in Oxford. She always tried to spend some weeks of each northern summer in Spain.

For some years, New Zealand was a favourite destination. Her much loved brothers Adrian and Richard lived there - indeed they still do. If they couldn't come to Stanley, then she would go to them. It was also friendship that spurred Mum to master aspects of the digital world that she needed in order to keep in touch with friends. She particularly enjoyed Skype. Over the last few years, hardly a day passed when she did not call Nadia and me in London. Often she just wanted to say goodnight, share news of her friends, or check that I had been eating properly (she worried about me too much).

For a little over 20 years, my parents ran a very successful shop and latterly a travel business in Stanley. Mum was the perfect front-person. I think that she inadvertently discovered a great marketing strategy: if you encouraged people in for a chat, greeted them genuinely and made them smile, more often than not they would leave with a parka, a bag of knitting wool, some home made fudge or (if you were a lad like me) an exciting model aircraft kit.

Mum's gregarious nature must have come from her parents. She was originally Joan Biggs, and she spent her early years at Goose Green, where her father ran the bunkhouse and the galley. I know Mum loved the simplicity of Camp life, but she had an appetite for learning, and Goose Green could not offer much in that way. Mum enrolled in the school in Stanley, enduring two days in the saddle at the beginning and end of each term. That is almost unimaginable now, of course.

I believe it was in 1941 that Mum won a scholarship to the British School in Montevideo. I found a record of her School Certificate passes the other day, and she obtained generally excellent exam results - although she didn't do particularly well in maths. I had similar trouble when I went to school in Montevideo almost 30 years later. Mum was never upset by my inability to calculate the volume of a rhombus. I don't think either of us could really see the point of it all.

I have no doubt that the several years Mum spent in Montevideo were intensely happy. I sometimes imagine Mum and her best friend June, laughing as they steered their bikes through the busy streets of Pocitos, probably en route to see their friend Sam at the Oro del Rhin café.

By 1947, our mother had returned to Stanley, where she met a young scientist called Bill Bailey. Bill had been bound for the Antarctic, but had been stranded in the Falklands because of ice conditions, shortage of pemmican, broken primus stoves or something equally heroic. In any case, Mum was enchanted by Bill, whom she told me recently was "polite, honourable and kind." I don't know for how long they enjoyed each others' company, but eventually Bill had to continue south, and that appeared to be the end of that. My Father then arrived on the scene, was entranced by the pretty girl who had begun working with him in the Treasury, and before long they were married and combining work secondment with a honeymoon in Gibraltar.

Mum and Dad were dedicated parents. Most of their effort went into making us happy, and most of their money went into giving us the best possible start in life. I know that we both caused our parents worry and upset from time to time. But just recently, my friend Alison Howe told me that Mum had once spoken to her about raising children. Mum said: "Your children cannot do anything for which you will not forgive them. Nothing they do can be that bad." I'm sure we did push the boundaries, but Mum was as good as her word: her love never wavered.

Our father died in 1985, and I believe that for a while Mum lost her spirit. The businesses had done their job, so after a while she retired, and soon began travelling more. She recovered, and then was reunited with someone she had not forgotten despite the passage of some 50 years: Bill Bailey. Bill was by this time a widower, so he and Mum began spending their time together, in the UK, in the Falklands and in Spain.

Bill died about three years ago, and Mum missed him very much. But she bounced back - as she always did - rarely looking at the past, and constantly nurturing friendships new and old.

But our Mother couldn't go on bouncing back from every setback. Mum was almost 85, when, despite the kindest of care in the King Edward Memorial Hospital, she succumbed to a failing heart and pneumonia.

Since then, I and the rest of my family have been inundated with cards and letters of sympathy, along with email and Facebook messages. We thank all of you for these, just as we thank the many people who came to Mum's funeral.

As I look through these message of sympathy and love, I keep returning to a particularly moving note from John Roberts. John, a physician in the Army Medical Corps, was billeted with our family briefly during the chaotic days immediately after the surrender in 1982. I would like to end with his words.

"Joan," he wrote. "Thank you for putting up a waif on his last night on the Islands after the conflict. Thank you for remembering me when I came to visit you in 2007. I am so sorry that we never managed to meet up again; surprised also, for - like all of your friends - I took it for granted that you were indestructible. None of us will ever forget you."

Give us two minutes...

Cheryl Roberts

- 1. What is your most prized possession? My family followed closely by my I-Phone. Peter insisted the latter was included
- 2. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? Look after the pennies and the pounds will look after themselves, by my grandmother Liz Spencer
- 3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Cristina Kirchner, as she seriously needs someone to talk some sense into her
- 4. If you had a motto, what would it be? Life is partly what we make it and partly what is made up by the friends we choose
- 5. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? I wouldn't. Everyone who knows me well will be more than aware of my non-theatrical talents
- 6. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? People driving to the other side of the road whilst turning corners. I call it the 'benny swerve'
- 7. What is your nickname and why? Sheckles, only used by my family mainly my sisters and my Dad. A name my late brother Gerry always called me. There are a number of alternative versions to it but those shall remain solely with my family
- 8. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it? Sailing by Rod Stewart, brings back young teenage carefree memories
- 9. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I hold a forklift licence which I obtained many years ago whilst living and working in the UK
- 10. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Red wine, it is part of my five a day, being grapes of course
- 11. What is your happiest childhood memory? Being together as a family before cancer sadly took over our mothers life

Falklands Conservation

Assistant Biodiversity Planner – Falklands Conservation
Stanley, Falkland Islands

Immediate vacancy

Term: Two years (there will be a 6-month probationary period).
Salary: Competitive - dependent upon qualifications and experience.
Responsible To: Conservation Officer, Falklands Conservation.
 The Falkland Islands Biodiversity Strategy is a key document for guiding conservation effort and applied research in the Falkland Islands. Working with the Falklands Conservation (FC) Conservation Officer the Biodiversity Planning Assistants' main role will be to complete the full suite of Action Plans for important species and habitats identified in the Strategy. This will be a largely desk-based exercise involving strategic rather than practical conservation, but opportunities for fieldwork experience will also be available. A good position for someone looking to start a career in conservation. The successful candidate will preferably hold an A Level or degree qualification in biology or environmental sciences (or provide proof of equivalent knowledge or experience in a similar field) and show an interest in natural habitats and wildlife. They must be a motivated, team player, with the ability to work on their own initiative and to deadlines. Competence with IT and standard software packages is essential, and experience in producing databases and spreadsheets would be advantageous.

Scrap booking from Moody Brook to the Billy Rocks

FALKLANDS' maritime historian, author and former museum curator John Smith has kept notes over the past 50 years about people, happenings and events. As such he told Penguin News this week, "the time has come to at least get them into print so that they will not be forgotten."

The form he has chosen to contain these happenings, some of which he described as being mere glimpses of things which are never likely to find their way into history books, is in the form of a published 'scrapbook'.

John explained: "This scrapbook does not in any way pretend to be a definitive or academic account of Stanley and its environs but does provide much scope for further reading and research."

He decided that with such wide ranging subjects the best way to present them would be to take 'a journey' from Moody Brook at the western end of the harbour through to the Billy Rock off the lighthouse at Cape Pembroke at the east. "Some seven miles packed with interest, followed by some of the many other things which have gone to make up the fabric of Stanley since 1840."

John said, being from the outset a seaport it is inevitable that the majority of the subjects have a distinctly maritime flavour, but there are many diversions which go to make up a fascinating glimpse of life in what was not too many years ago regarded as the world's most far flung communities.

Apart from reviving memories or settling arguments he hopes the scrapbook will enlighten the younger generation along with the many newcomers to the Islands about the, "rich and varied life of a community which of necessity, with determination and in some cases guile has dealt with incredibly hard and difficult early pioneering days, world wars, invasions, an occupation and liberation followed by very rapid development."

Wildlife and sport are two specialist areas into which he would not presume to delve, said John. "These subjects are best left to those who know and understand them."

John's scrapbook will importantly draw attention, to the, "excellent work which has been carried out over many years by the Falkland Islands Journal and the Alastair Cameron Memorial Trust, both of which it has been a privilege to have been a founder member."

He said although the Journal is the present home of a vast amount of material, because it is called a Journal it does put some people off, as it suggests a rather starchy publication. "On the contrary, it is a treasure trove of information from which much more can be gleaned on many of the snippets in this scrapbook. In many instances it has been possible to direct readers to much more fully researched articles in the Journal. The same applies to the Falkland Islands Magazines and Church Paper, the monthly reviews, philatelic journals, David Tatham's Dictionary of Falklands Biography, The Broadcasting Studio, The Jane Cameron National Archives, and the museum, as well as many priceless details resulting from conversations with old timers who have long slipped their moorings."

John said when he arrived in the Falklands in 1958 it was immediately clear there was a great depth of unrecorded maritime history attached to the Islands. He said enquiries by him were often met with the response, "you should have come a few years earlier and spoken to Karl Lellman," sadly John's arrival was too late for that.

Karl Lellman had accumulated a vast amount of the Falklands maritime history but left the Islands in the 1950s taking it all with him, said John, adding that it remained virtually inaccessible until 2000, but this information has now been published in the Falkland Islands Journal.

John said: "His records would have saved much research over the last 50 years but on the plus side it has confirmed that in the maritime field we were both following the same channels, with the additional benefit of it now being possible to add many more details and accounts, thanks to greater and faster access to archival material with an increasing worldwide interest in researching maritime and social history."

John feels that it not being his area of expertise, he would not write about anything to do with Camp matters, "except in a few instances where it helps to illustrate difficulties which, of necessity used to be accepted as a way of life in a remote and sparsely populated part of the world."

"The story of shipwrecks and maritime disasters which have happened outside of Stanley leaves the way clear for another scrapbook."

He says the book is clearly that of a person interested primarily in maritime and aviation, "goings on."

He emphasised it was not an academic study but a random collection of, "cullings which will pass away an hour or two, perhaps providing guidelines for further research."

Less MLA tours and build old peoples' home

I COMPLETELY agree with Pat Pratlett's suggestion of a home for elderly in The Triangle. It would be great as two storey with a lift, and upstairs large windows to the south so they can watch the football, archery etc and downstairs be able to watch the world go by. It would be money well spent, though I hope it won't mean more cuts for the government such as hours for cooks and cleaners in the hospital!

Less tours for MLAs might be a good idea. How much has it cost the tax payer this year? Hoping for a better year next year

Consultation or intelligence test

I'M amused at the intelligence level of questions in the Public Consultation - Minimum Wage.

Should the wage be paid for time spent travelling to and from work?

Voluntary Work? err look up voluntary in a dictionary?

Work carried out under a Court Order - I thought that was a punishment for wrongdoing, not a perk?

Work done by family members as part of family life - paid to wash up for your wife while you pay her to Hoover?

Advances of wages - clue - it's called an advance - NOT a gift - and there's many more.

Can someone call Human Resources and suggest they escort the author(s) of this questionnaire to see the men in white coats please - for all our safety and sanity.

Fitting tribute

IN recognition of all that Baroness Thatcher did for our community, would not a fitting memorial to the great lady be a community centre, in her name, to be used in her memory by all present and future generations in the Falkland Islands?

Reindeer recipes at next sale

A BOOKLET entitled Reindeer Preparation and Cooking, is likely to be available to the public by May 11, at the next sale of South Georgia reindeer meat.

South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands Government (SGSSI) employee Jackie Gumsley told Penguin News the booklet contains some of the background to the SGSSI project that involves the removal of reindeer, a non native species, from South Georgia using experts from Norway, including Sami herders.

Reindeer recipes will include flash fried fillet, roast hind leg and reindeer steaks with calvados, apple and cream. Creators of the booklet collaborated with chef Gerard Baker.

It will also include sections on reindeer butchery and general cooking tips.

Griz captures Falklands changeable light

FALKLAND House in London was proud to host a reception for family and friends at the launch of 'Grizelda's Art' by Falklands' artist Grizelda Cockwell, Colin Patterson-Smith a spokesperson for the London office, told Penguin News.

Grizelda lives for six months of the year in France and the rest in the Falklands at West Falklands farm Chartres, with her partner Bill Luxton.

Twenty-six works were shown on May 2, and comprised oil paintings, pastels and drawings all of scenes of the Falkland Islands. Griz says, "The light in the Islands is so beautiful, unpredictable and changeable, creating infinite changes in whatever is in your vision."

The paintings will be on show at Falkland House from May until September.

Colin said that if anyone would like to have further information please contact him on 02072222542 or email medical@falklands.gov.fk. Anyone is welcome to call in and see the work and, "perhaps make a purchase." Above right: Grizelda and Bill at Falkland House and two examples of Grizelda's artwork.

Quilted raffle for Run for Life

THE Falkland Islands Quirky Quilters (FIQQ) have created a beautiful pink ribbon patchwork quilt as a symbol of hope in the fight against breast cancer. Squares were sponsored for £10 each in memory of someone who had been affected by cancer. Their names and the names of the sponsors were then sewn inside the quilt as a permanent tribute. The £280 raised from these memory squares will be donated to the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust.

Nikki Buxton explained to Penguin News: "Quilter Shirley Adams-Leach suggested the project to the group after seeing the pattern in a UK quilting magazine. The material for the quilt was purchased from Northcott Fabrics in the USA, with the fabric and shipping costs donated by members of the group. A portion of the cost of the material was donated by Northcott to the US 'Quest For A Cure' cancer campaign."

The quilt was started during the Craft-A-Thon in October 2012, and was finished on the weekend. The quilt will be the grand prize in the Run Together raffle on Sunday May 12. Raffle tickets for the quilt and other prizes will be available on the day at the Leisure Centre.

The group who worked on the quilt were moved by the many lives touched by cancer in the Islands' community, where one out of seven women will be diagnosed with breast cancer during their lifetime.

Drinking in pink for cancer charity

OVER £800 was raised on Friday night for Cancer Research UK.

A group of fundraisers dressed head-to-toe in rosy pink collected some of the money by touring the drinking wells of Stanley and jangling their buckets. The rest was gathered by selling £3 tickets for a 'bring your own' knees up at the FIDE Drill Hall.

The gang started at the Rose Bar collecting a sizeable crowd, enthusiastic for the after party, which continued until 2am.

Pubs got into the spirit of the night too, barmaid Victoria Collier raised an additional £36.02 by collecting tips from behind the bar at Deanos.

The group would like to thank the patrons of Stanley for their kindness and co-operation.

Fundraising for Cancer Research continues this weekend with the Run Together 'Pink Run', on Sunday. More information can be found on the sports page 15.

Westers Toto and Susan take top prize at the trials

A JOURNEY to East Falklands was well worth it for Wester Susan Hirtle, who took first place with Toto, at the Dog Trials held at the North Arm two-nighter last weekend.

Another West Falklands resident Paul Peck took second place with Ken, and Arthur Turner saved the honour of the East by claiming third place with Jess.

North Arm resident Angeline Joshua confirmed approximately 150 people attended the fun packed two days. Angeline and husband Paul housed around thirty party-goers while Emma Reid and partner Steven Dickson looked after a massive 60 people.

Others provided beds for a dozen or more each and all of the self catering accommodation was filled, said Angeline.

The championship dog trials began at 10am and was followed by a curry lunch cooked by Paul Joshua; this lead to the sweep-draw in the late afternoon and a dance with music by Mel Lloyd. The sweep-draw top prize of £1,200 was won by Concordia Bay boys Harold Neilson, Paul Morrison, John Thain and Ross Poole. Angeline said: "Special mention to TJ and Travis Jaffray who captured the whole crowd doing the moves to 'I'm sexy and I know it' absolutely awesome."

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Team Falklands at Bermuda

THE full squad of competitors representing the Falkland Islands at the NatWest Island Games in Bermuda, July 13 - 19, has been announced.

The athletics team comprises Bill Chater, Martin Collins, Rex Eagle, Hazel Fowmes and Kate Stenning. Rex and Martin will run in the half-marathon and Martin will also compete in the 10,000 metres. Bill Chater will have a busy schedule running in the 800 metres, 1500 metres and 5000 metres events. The teenagers are set to run shorter distances; Hazel the 100 and 200 metres, and Kate will run the 400 and 800 metres.

The Badminton Club will send a large contingent this time. The badminton players for the Falklands in Bermuda will be Michael Brownlee, Doug Clark, Joe Clarke, Anna Luxton, Cheryl March, Duane March, Anastasia Markina, Laura Minto, Ross Stewart and Louise Williams.

The squad features experienced players as well as Anastasia and Louise who will be getting their first taste of international competition. Two and one coach will accompany the ten competitors.

The Falkland Islands football team, managed by Ian Betts, consists of: goalkeeper Ben Hoyles, defenders Kyle Biggs, Luke Clarke, Martyn Gilson-Clarke, Josh Clayton, Zaza Elbakidze, Joshua Peck and Scott Thain, midfielders Stephen Aldridge, Andres Balladares, Michael Betts, Daniel Biggs, Shupi Chipunza and Claudio Ross and strikers Wayne Clement and Rafa Sotomayor.

The Falklands will be one of four islands taking part in the football tournament and will play hosts Bermuda as well as Froya and Greenland.

Stanley Golf Club is sending four, Declan Bonner, Glenn Ross, Roy Smith and Ian Stewart. It will be a first Island Games for youngster Declan.

The shooting team will be Michael Goss, Bono McKay, Murray Middleton, Nevin Middleton and Saul Pitaluga. Their manager Graham Didlick became the first Islander to win a gold medal at the 1999 Gotland Games.

The swimming team is very youthful with the age ranging from 13 - 16 years.

Run Together 2013

THIS year's five kilometre Run Together 'Pink Run' raising money for Cancer Research UK will take place on Sunday, May 12.

Anyone can take part in the annual stretching of legs for the worthwhile cause, "runners, walkers, men, women, children, fancy dress, pretty in pink or just as you are. Everyone is welcome" said organiser Sally Ellis.

The Pink Run starts at 11am, and you can sign up for the event at Stanley Leisure Centre from 9am on Sunday.

Registration is £10 per person, regardless of age, and there will be t-shirts on sale at registration to commemorate the event and raise more funds for Cancer Research in the UK.

Name plates and pins will also be available at registration so that participants can nominate who they are running or walking for.

People are also encouraged to get additional sponsorship if they would like to go the extra mile.

In addition to the Pink Run there will be a fundraising raffle. Raffle tickets will also be on sale at a cake stall to be held on Saturday, May 11, in the West Store foyer.

Money raised by the raffle and the cake stall will go to the local charity Cancer Support & Awareness Trust. Donations of raffle prizes and to the cake stall are very welcome and can be made to Sally Ellis - 21339.

The Falkland Islands Company Ltd has immediate vacancies for experienced mechanics in the Crozier Place garage.

The Automotive Department is currently undergoing a complete refurbishment and rebranding, and we are looking for experienced mechanics to help carry the business forward.

Applicants must be experienced in servicing and repair operations on light 4x4 vehicles and experience in HGV/PSV and small boat maintenance would be an advantage.

A full driving license is essential and HGV or PSV1 licenses would be an advantage. Rate of pay will be dependent on the successful applicant's experience.

Competitive rates of pay are available to the successful applicant depending on qualifications and/or experience.

Applicants should contact James Bates on telephone 27678 during working hours for further details of the post.

Closing for this application is Friday 17th May 2013.

Invenio are looking for people to join our team of driving instructors.

Requirements will include the ability to read a number plate from 27.5 metres, hold a full clean driving licence for a minimum of five years and be able to pass our driving instructor training programme.

All interested persons are to contact Tom Whistler on 21311 or twistler@inveniofi.co.uk

Invitation to Tender for an Options Appraisal and Business Case for Mount Pleasant Air Terminal

The Falkland Islands Government is working with the UK Ministry of Defence and the Falkland Islands Development Corporation on proposals to transfer the current military owned and operated air terminal at Mount Pleasant Airport (MPA) into a wholly civilian operated facility.

FIG is now seeking to appoint suitable consultants to undertake an independent economic appraisal of the proposals for the civilian air terminal, and to produce a business case for the proposal. The outcome of the appraisal will be used, along with other information, to support FIG and its partners in their efforts to secure the 'localisation' of the MPA terminal (and associated services) in an appropriate and timely manner.

This work is being procured via a single stage Invitation to Tender. Tenderers are requested to submit their tender no later than 3pm Falkland Islands local time (6pm UTC) on 31st May 2013. The successful tenderer will be invited to an inception meeting / conference call in the week commencing 10th June 2013.

For further information regarding this Invitation to Tender and an information pack, please contact Siân Nightingale by telephoning +500 28421 or by emailing snightingale@sec.gov.fk

FAREWELL

It is with great sadness and a huge amount of trepidation that Michele, Matthew and I leave these beautiful islands on today's Airbridge. We have been hugely privileged to have worked and played with some amazing people and organisations many of whom we can call friends and family. The last 8 1/2 years have been a truly overwhelming experience for us all and there can be no doubt that we will miss all who have touched our lives during our time here.

We are fortunate however in that we take away with us a little bit of the islands in the shape of our own wee Kelper. We hope one day in the not too distant future to return with him to the land of his birth.

Be assured we are immensely proud of our association with the islands and its people, we leave you with a promise that we will do our best to be ambassadors for the Falkland Islands and will speak with pride and affection of our time here to anyone who stands still for too long.

Brian, Michele and Matthew Tonner

Public Safety Notice.

Members of the public, transport agencies and construction contractors are reminded that care must be taken when collecting sand from the collection area at Yorke Bay. The collection point is close to a minefield fence and recently excavations have caused damage to the fence and undermined the fence in some areas. It is extremely dangerous to cause damage to a minefield fence, and although these actions may have been thoughtless rather than malicious it nevertheless causes additional maintenance work in an area that is difficult to maintain at the best of times. Causing damage to a minefield fence is against the law and can result in prosecution.

Any enquiries regarding this notice should be directed to Maj P Biggs FIDF (tel 55477).

Repeat offender in custody

STANLEY man Dominic Robert Watson (20) was remanded in custody pending sentence after he pleaded guilty to a series of offences on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr Watson who was already on conditional bail which included a 10pm to 6am curfew within the YMCA, was apprehended earlier in the day when it was reported he had caused damage to the building the previous night.

Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis told the court how Mr Watson had been served a summons on Tuesday night for motoring offences and had later kicked holes in the walls of the foyer at the YMCA causing extensive damage to it was well as adjoining rooms.

Mr Watson on the advice of the YMCA manager had volunteered information about the damage to the police, was charged and brought before the court.

In interview Mr Watson said he had become angry on receiving the summons, believing he would be put in custody because of it.

He pleaded guilty to the criminal damage at the YMCA as well as driving without insurance, without due care and attention, not wearing a helmet and failing to register the sale of a vehicle. He also admitted a further charge of supplying alcohol to a juvenile.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said there was a significant risk Mr Watson would commit further offences and would be remanded in custody until May 27, when he had been due to appear in court for sentencing on public order offences on March 16 and 24 and a criminal damage offence on March 30.

Flight on foot for Liberty Lodge

TWELVE runners from 1435 Ft will be running from MPC to Stanley this Saturday, May 18, in aid of Liberty Lodge. Organiser Colin Martin said the team will start together at 8.30am and, with the assistance of support drivers, run in relay to Stanley. They hope to reach their finishing point after 2pm and to raise as much as they can for the Lodge.

MORE than 200 Islanders donned their pink glad rags and ran or walked 5 kilometres in support of cancer charities over the weekend. Despite the wind and then heavy rain 197 people of all ages, and in a variety of costumes, checked in at the Stanley Leisure Centre for the community event. Turn to page 9 for coverage

Local support for port authority

THE creation of a port authority in the Falkland Islands has garnered support from interested members of the community.

Respondents to a public consultation, introduced by the Department of Central Services, gave 100 per cent thumbs up to the concept of a local Port Authority structure.

96 per cent agreed it would provide a good mechanism for managing regulation and administration of marine related facilities.

78 per cent felt the government and private sector in partnership should run and manage port related activities with 56 per cent saying government should have only a minority control of the Port Authority.

Most people would prefer a statutory port authority to be explored (48 per cent) while others supported the idea of a Trust Port Authority (33 per cent).

MLA Dick Sawle said: "Officials will use the results of this consultation to define the detail of how a Port Authority in the Falkland Islands might actually look in practice and the functions it will undertake. This will be followed by a second stage public consultation prior to recommendations being made to Executive Council."

In many countries a port authority is a governmental or quasi-governmental public authority usually formed by a legislative body. Port authorities are usually governed by boards or commissions, members are often selected by a Minister and a local chief executive and the rest at the recommendation of port users.

Most port authorities are financially self-supporting. In addition to owning land, setting fees, and sometimes levying taxes, port districts can also operate shipping terminals, airports, railroads, and irrigation facilities.

A blog to keep the community and local businesses up to date on the latest port related activities, can be found at: <http://figinfrastructuredevelopment.blogspot.co.uk/> Phase 2 of the consultation will be released before the end of May.

New head for health

DR Hilary Rowland was announced as the new Director of Health and Social Services this week.

Dr Rowland has a degree in biochemistry and genetics, as well as a Masters in social work and a PhD in health care regulation. She worked as a nursing assistant and social worker for a number of years before running a large community trust providing services for older people.

She was later appointed as Chief Executive of the Royal Liverpool children's trust, and subsequently has been Chief Executive of the Health and Social Advisory Service, and of the Parkhaven Trust.

Misconduct

In 2001 Ms Rowland resigned as Chief Executive of Alder Hey Children's Hospital following an internal disciplinary hearing that found her guilty of misconduct. This followed a government investigation into events at the hospital when stockpiles of organs were discovered in a university laboratory.

Asked to comment on that part of Ms Rowland's career, Falkland Islands Government Chief Executive Keith Padgett said Dr Rowland had fully disclosed her career history on her application form so the information was known when she was short listed for interview in London.

Mr Padgett said Dr Rowland was questioned further on the circumstances of the incident at Royal Liverpool Children's NHS Trust at that interview.

"The interview panel which included myself and Derek Muhl, a former FIG Director of Health were satisfied with the answers provided.

"We were further satisfied that this incident would have no bearing on the post to which she has now been appointed and were fully confident that she would make an excellent leader of the Health Service and valuable member of the corporate Management Team," Mr Padgett told Penguin News.

Derek Muhl who worked in the Islands 15 years ago has been appointed as Interim Director of Health and Social Services until the arrival of Dr Rowland.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

JOURNALISM is more widely associated with words than numbers, and on the whole quite rightly so. Were it not I most certainly wouldn't be a journalist, as former Senior School maths teacher Seamus Mahony would agree (as would Annagret Goss who generally did my maths home-work in exchange for an English essay or two).

At the same time government statistics-heavy reports are essential reading at Penguin News, and no doubt poor old Seamus, a man inclined to press the side of his face helplessly against the black board as I once again screwed up an attempt to reproduce a line of mathematical proof, would be mildly surprised to see me doggedly ploughing through lines of figures.

Most recent reports have been relatively user friendly though. For example it was gratifying to be easily able to separate out business and transit visitors from leisure visitors in the first few pages of the Falkland Islands Tourism Statistics report for 2012. While including the 'transit' oil-workers at all (and I have heard the inclusion criticised) is, as the report points out, in keeping with the UN World Tourism Organization definition of 'tourist', if the statistics were muddled to give the impression of a blazing few years as a result of those workers, it would be detrimental in terms of identifying the long-term land-based tourism growth. (Story page 5)

The census 2012 results were equally interesting and while I have no doubt readers are probably all censused-out by now there was still one subject I was tempted to splash all over Twitter to Argentine followers.

According to the report there are now 30 individual languages spoken in the Islands, a pretty high number considering the size of the overall population, "demonstrating the cultural diversity of the Islands."

Outdated, imperialistic, insular colony? It seems not.

And that's the thing about statistics, I might not be a fan but they can be useful, when it comes to swatting negative statements (allegedly based on 'common-sense' but in fact amounting to the individual's personal opinion) as Tom Hill did last week when he bounced all over the claim that the education system was falling apart.

Still statistics are a tool that must be used with care. After all I could easily go on to convince fellow tweeters that we're a community of old-fashioned 'proper' principles by announcing perfectly truthfully that divorce is going down, providing of course, I didn't also mention that so is marriage, and that co-habiting is going up.

Being tanked up is no excuse says judge

"THIS jurisdiction is getting more violent because of drunken idiots like you," the Senior Magistrate told two Stanley men on Wednesday as he handed down lengthy Community Service Orders.

Christopher Andrew Williams (26) and Dylan Stephenson (19) appeared for sentencing after they had entered guilty pleas to assaulting a police officer and in Mr Williams case a second charge of using threatening and abusive behaviour on January 20.

The court heard how police had been called on two occasions to a house party at Katherine Reyes' home on Hebe Street following public complaints about loud music.

Abusive remarks had been made to the police on the first visit around 1am and when they returned at 2.30am in response to a further complaint, the incident had escalated. Both men had been verbally abusive with Mr Williams directing comments at PC Kim Bone, saying he had "f****d up his life," and later at the Police Station "If you ever set foot in the UK you're dead."

While the men were being arrested PC Steve Dent received a blow to the head, from Mr Williams.

Mr Williams' defence lawyer Mark Neves said his client accepted he should not have behaved in such a way, but added there were personal circumstances involved, "that would not normally occur in the UK."

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley questioned why Mr Williams should not be locked up, adding that for weeks, "the place seems to be full of drunken yobbos who have no respect for the police."

Keith Watson defending Dylan Stephenson said his client was in a different position as he had tried to "stop his mate being an idiot," but when Mr Williams was arrested, "he went forward, not back."

Mr Gumsley said both men were "pathetic" and had behaved like children and that, "being tanked up is no excuse and you both came extremely close to jail today." He said he accepted Mr Stephenson had tried to assist the police until he had given in to drunken temptation and told Mr Williams that whatever his personal grievances he should not address police officers in such a way.

Mr Williams as the main protagonist was ordered to carry out 180 hours of Community Service, to pay PC Dent £250 compensation and £85 prosecution costs.

Mr Gumsley said Mr Stephenson was younger and his role had been less significant, but he had still been involved in a joint assault. He was ordered to complete 60 hours Community Service before leaving the Islands, to pay £150 compensation to PC Dent plus £85 prosecution costs.

"If either of you appear before me again with a similar offence, you'd better pack a toothbrush," Mr Gumsley told the men.

Public order trial ongoing

THE trial of three Stanley men got under way in the Summary Court on Thursday morning before Justice's of the Peace Phyl Rendell, Janet Robertson and Judy Summers.

Toby Poole (27), David Hewitt (21) and Jacob Riddell (20) had all pleaded not guilty to charges of using threatening and abusive behaviour.

The court heard that on December 11, after the pubs had closed, the three defendants were engaged in a scuffle involving between 15-20 people on the junction of John Street and Philomel Hill.

Police attended the scene and two arrests were made.

Evidence was given by Reserve Police Constable Steve Dent and Police Constable Alex Pearce as well as the Globe Tavern landlord Don Pick.

The trial was ongoing at the time of going to print and we will bring you news of the outcome next week.

Taiwanese fined £45,500 for fishing in Argentine waters

A BREACH of fishing licence conditions cost a Taiwanese fishing company and the vessel's master a total of £45,500 in the Senior Magistrates Court on Saturday as well as part of the catch being forfeited.

The court heard how master of the jigger Hu Sheng 626, Mr Hsiung Wu Sheng had on four occasions left the Falkland Islands fishing zone to fish in Argentine waters accumulating an estimated 104 tonnes of squid.

The conditions of the Falkland Islands fishing licence require vessels to provide 72 hours notice of leaving Falklands waters and for a catch end report to be filed. Both the master and the vessel's owner Zhen Man Fishery Co Ltd entered guilty pleas to two charges each of being in contravention of these conditions between April 1 and 6, 2013.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said there were a number of similar cases due to come to court and as they were not regularly heard, there was little precedence and no specific guidelines to follow.

He said it was clear from the VMS (Vessel Monitoring System) report that a number of Falklands licensed fishing vessels had left Falklands waters on April 1 and trespassed into Argentine waters. Warnings via local shipping agents had been passed on, but again on April 2 and 5 the Hu Sheng 626 had ventured into Argentine waters. The master admitted he had chosen to ignore the warnings and had at one point on April 6, said Mr Gumsley, been some 14 miles outside Falklands waters.

The vessel was instructed to report to Stanley on April 8, when

"Revenue from fishing is significant and the Falklands has a right to protect such valuable interests," says Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley the master frankly accepted he had breached his licence conditions and had entered the catch from those periods as caught in Falklands waters.

As there are no quotas in the squid fishery there is a need for regulations and conditions to ensure accurate catch statistics are maintained as an essential part of conservation monitoring and managing Falklands fish stocks to maintain a sustainable fishery, explained Mr Gumsley, adding that effective management required compliance from licence holders.

He said he was satisfied there had been a deliberate and calculated breach of the licence and it was clear by the distance into Argentine waters the vessel had travelled that the concern of the master had been entirely commercial. Mr Sheng had either demonstrated a complete disregard for the law, or that the "value of the spoils was worth taking the risk," said Mr Gumsley.

The potential damage to the reputation of the Falklands Fishing Industry was obvious and in effect the vessel had been, "going into Argentine territory and then nipping back into Falklands waters where it was protected." Such behaviour would not be tolerated, he said, adding however that it was difficult to reconcile this with the Fishery Department's decision to extend the season and let the vessel continue fishing.

The decision to extend the fishing season, including the Taiwanese fleet to the end of May, was made the day before the case was heard, which did not best please the Senior Magistrate who had arranged a weekend court to ensure, "justice could be done speedily."

"Why offer an extension to a boat which has just breached the law - either you want to prosecute or you not," he said.

Mr Sheng who is paid US$1,000 per month and earns annual bonuses of up to $70,000 was fined a total of £1,500 and the Zhen Man Fishery Company Ltd £44,000 plus £100 court costs and 104 tonnes of catch was confiscated.

There was a need for a deterrent sentence, and while the court had the power to ban the master from fishing in Falklands waters or prevent him from returning to his ship, Mr Gumsley said he had been persuaded to issue a warning to other masters at this time.

Director of Natural Resources John Barton told Penguin News that the confiscated catch is for the Falkland Islands Government to dispose of, ideally by sale. It can not be sold to the original owner, explained Mr Barton adding that the revenue goes to the Court and therefore to FIG general revenue.

Community work for ABH

TWO Mount Pleasant men were given Community Service orders after they admitted a charge each of assault occasioning actual bodily harm on November 30.

The court heard that Rick Marc Thomas (20) and Jason Craig Hopkins (22) had had a verbal altercation with a Mr Connell outside 120 facility at MPC at around 11pm and when another man had tried to intervene they had become violent.

Mr Hopkins had knocked the man to the ground and Mr Thomas had jumped on top of him and punched and kicked him until a security guard had pulled him off. Mr Hopkins had wanted to leave, however Mr Thomas had made threats to the man, said Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said it appeared they were two hardworking young men who, "again seemed to have got tanked up and behaved like idiots."

However it was a concern of any court that, "once you start sticking the boot in, it can easily lead to manslaughter or murder," he warned, adding that he was, "fed up with drunken people going around causing violence."

Noting that one of the men had consumed 10 double vodkas he said that those working behind bars should remember that it is a criminal offence to serve alcohol to drunk customers.

Mr Thomas was ordered to carry out 120 hours Community Service and Mr Hopkins 100 hours due to the different degree of violence, although he did accept it was a joint venture, said Mr Gumsley.

Both men were ordered to pay £150 compensation and £85 costs.

Not arrested says Jim Davidson

COMEDIAN Jim Davidson has told UK newspapers he was not arrested this week over an allegation of a sex offence during a tour of the Falklands in the 1980s.

Mr Davidson (59) was questioned under caution by Scotland Yard officers as part of Operation Yewtree, which is investigating claims following the Jimmy Saville scandal.

Davidson returned to his home in Stockbridge, Hants on Tuesday afternoon after answering questions at a London police station.

He said: "I have spoken to police over the allegations regarding the Falklands."

"I have told them everything I know. I have not been re-arrested or anything like that, they just wanted me to have a chat with them. It is not a new story. I am helping police with their inquiries, just as I have been with all the other inquiries about me."

Monday's court news

IN the Senior Magistrates court on Monday, Stanley man John Charles Hilson Didlick (23) was fined £150 plus £85 court costs for assault occasioning actual bodily harm and disorderly behaviour.

The offence related to an incident at the Trough on March 24 when he assaulted a young woman by recklessly pushing her to the ground, causing her to suffer a whiplash injury to her neck.

Lang adjournment

James Patrick Lang also appeared in court for sentencing on charges of common assault, making threats to kill and possessing a dangerous weapon in a public place. The case was adjourned until July 10 for further information to be obtained on matters raised in the pre-sentence report.

CS for violent attack

STANLEY man Arturo Tellez (36) was ordered to carry out 180 hours Community Service after he pleaded guilty to assault occasioning actual bodily harm and criminal damage.

The court heard that on March 17 at 2.50 pm Mr Tellez entered the home of the victim and once he established that he was alone had hit him. Mr Tellez accused the man of having an affair with his girlfriend and continued to hit him, ripped his t-shirt and kicked and damaged a door of the property.

Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis added that no alcohol had been involved.

Mr Tellez, who chose to represent himself, told the Senior Magistrate he was sorry for his actions, adding that, "any man in my position would probably act in the same way," and questioned whether Mr Gumsley himself was married and how he would react.

Mr Gumsley assured Mr Tellez he was not too old to remember what emotions were like, especially with women. But, he said, when relationships had broken down he had not gone around beating people up, even if he had felt like it: "Someone in their right mind would not do that."

He said the attack was unprovoked and violent and was not assisted by previous convictions.

Mr Tellez who had already paid for the property damage was ordered to carry out 180 hours Community Service, pay £128 compensation for lost earnings, £200 for personal injury, £15 for the t-shirt and £85 prosecution costs.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

A QUIET week is very welcome after the frenetic activity of recent months. I would be happy if I never had to get onto another long haul flight. Having volunteered for party conferences mid September I know I've given myself a heavy if interesting task to end this term. We have travelled widely to put out information but it is essential that we maintain the support of the UK and remember that for many of the people now moving into positions of power and authority 1982 is a short episode in history books. The conferences give us access to many politically active people and build on the work done year round by our London Representative and her staff. The importance of that cross party support should never be underestimated and the fact that we exhibit whether or not the party is in power is noted and appreciated.

As portfolio holder for Education I am as puzzled as the acting Director by the assertion in PN last week from one of their readers that 'education was falling apart'. I honestly believe that we have many excellent staff and that much good work is being done. We are close to appointing a new secondary head and have a good acting head. Where unfortunately we do seem to have a problem is in enabling individuals in FIG and outside to access training funding in spite of the available funding being under spent. We made succession planning one of our priorities because it makes good sense to train and promote capable Islanders. Some departments are making good progress, others have much to do.

We received a broad range of interesting suggestions on ways to commemorate Baroness Thatcher and will announce the outcome shortly. One of the useful lessons learned from the exercise is that people liked being able to drop in to the Gilbert House porch to leave their suggestion. This links with my comments last week about the numbers who would be excluded if we relied entirely on internet for consultation purposes. I'm sure that we will use the suggestion box in the future.

Crafty travellers go West

THE Crafty Old Travellers have enjoyed their second annual trip around the West. Heather Norman told Penguin News.

Heather was accompanied by Myra Pitt but unfortunately the third member of the trio Wendy Reynold was unable to take part this year.

Despite Wendy's fabulous needlework skills being absent, the crafts available were still varied and included pyrography and decoupage on trinket boxes, calligraphy, watercolour painting, flax weaving, a wet felted shoulder bag, decorative needle felting, crochet, knitting, cross stitch, reading and making sewing patterns and basic dress making.

Working under the umbrella of Team Tranquil's programme of winter activities for people in Camp the group were able to visit individual's homes in order to share their skills.

Heather and Myra said they would like to thank their hosts, the Port Howard Self Catering, Rosemary, Dot and Alex at Dun-nose Head, Deirdre and Gavin and the Southern Cross Social Club at Fox Bay, Susan and Turtle at Hill Cove and Sammy for organising lunch which helped to raise money to re-establish the Hill Cove Social Club.

The Hill Cove residents also kindly held their Run for Life on Saturday so the Workshop could go ahead on Sunday, said Wendy.

Wendy said: "to all campers who made the visits so much fun and so very successful, raising £95 for Team Tranquil, we say a huge thank you."

"Happy crafting everyone and see you next year."

Fort of fun

PRE-SCHOOL children are clamoring on a brand new, luxury wooden fort thanks to the Infant and Junior School Parent Teachers Association (IJS PTA).

The 'cubby house', as it is affectionately known by the students, was paid for through fundraising and donated by the PTA as part of their efforts to supplement the Educational facilities of the Infant and Junior School and Camp Education, surplus to the FIG budget.

"It's really good for the children's physical development" said Head Teacher of IJS Karen Steen who also extended her thanks for the community supporting the fundraising events of the PTA.

The IJS PTA, in tandem with Camp Education, aim to put on a main fundraising event every year, such as the 'Grease Night' in March.

Secretary of the PTA Mrs Leeann Harris officially presented the cubby house to the pre-school on Tuesday, and unveiled a small plaque to recognise the donation.

Mrs Harris told Penguin News that the PTA had supplied the main playground at IJS with equipment before and was happy to report that with the funds left over she has ordered a similar fort, with a climbing section, for the OK Corral Park in Stanley, "so the community can have access to some new great equipment too."

The committee are looking for new members, any parents of children attending IJS are welcome to apply.

Education director

ANNIE Tempest has been appointed Director of Education.

Ms Tempest was formerly a Principal Consultant for the International Education Agency as well as Head Teacher for more than 20 years and has extensive experience in school leadership, both nationally and internationally.

Ms Tempest has led four schools to receive excellent Ofsted reports and now holds contracts with the Independent Association of Preparatory Schools (I.A.P.S.) and leads the International Mentor Team of IAPS who has over 30 listed International Schools with the IAPS quality mark.

Good value Falklands say tourists

Penguin News examines the Tourism Statistics Report 2012

THE Falkland Islands International Tourism Statistics Report released to the public this week records that 2012 was the second highest year on record in terms of overnight visitors travelling for leisure.

There were 7,791 overnight tourists (as opposed to day trip cruise tourists) arrivals in the Falkland Islands in 2012, of which 1,937 could be classed as leisure visitors.

Overall, tourist arrivals have grown at an average annual rate of 7.0% per annum over the period 2000-2012.

The UK is the most significant market for tourist arrivals with 4,234 visitors in 2012, notes the report. The second largest market in 2012 was Norway, with 482 visitors (mostly oil workers). Argentina generated the third highest number of arrivals (usually the second largest generating market) with 374 visitors in 2012.

In 2012, over 54% of all arrivals were residents of the United Kingdom, however this represents a considerable fall in market share compared to over 68% in 2000. Over the period 2000-2012, British visitors increased by an average of 5.0% per annum, however they have lost market share due to higher growth rates from other countries. Whilst arrivals from the USA have barely changed over the same period, there has been a significant growth in arrivals from Canada, France and Argentina in the last five years.

The average length of stay of all tourists in 2012 was 15.9 nights.

The general satisfaction of Leisure tourists with the Falklands was also apparent with the value for money indicator, with almost 77% stating that they thought it was "good value" in 2012, compared to around 61% in 2011.

In terms of what those visitors felt could be improved, roads, information and communications were commonly mentioned. However, a large number of leisure tourists requested to "leave alone" or do "nothing" to the Islands.

The average spend per tourist per night in the Falklands in 2012 was £62.78, up £14.58 (or 30.3%) on 2011. Just over half of daily spend was on accommodation (£31.61). Total tourism expenditure in the Falkland Islands in 2012 is estimated at almost £7.8 million, up 50.1% on that recorded in 2011.

Cruise tourism

In 2012/2013, there was a total of 29,553 cruise passenger visits. Cancellations accounted for a loss of around 23,053 passengers over the season. Overall, cruise passenger arrivals have grown at an average annual rate of 12.6% over the period 1995/06 to 2012/13, despite a decline in visits over the last four seasons. Most visitors describe their trip to the Falklands as "excellent" or "good." In the 2012/2013 season there was a small increase in the number of visitors describing it as "fair."

The largest age group within the cruise arrivals segment is the 45-64 year olds, which represented over 66% of all visitors in the 2012/13 season.

There has been a sharp decline in those who declare they "definitely" want to visit the Falkland Islands again. There was a significant increase in visitors stating "definitely not," mainly at the expense of those previously stating it as being "unlikely." However despite this there has been an increase in the proportion who have a desire to visit as a land-based tourist.

Almost a quarter (24.2%) of cruise visitors stated that the Falklands was "essential" when choosing their itinerary, and a further 22.6% stated that it was "very important."

Average spend per cruise passenger increased by £6.52 (12.8%) in 2012/13 to £57.27. Expenditure on food and drink and shopping decreased, however spend on tours was up on that measured in the 2011/12 season.

Despite a 15.9% decline in the number of cruise passenger arrivals in the 2012/13 season, the fall in total expenditure was only 5.1%. Overall, during the 2012/13 season, cruise passengers spent an estimated £1.7 million.

State of the art pool for leisure centre

STANLEY Leisure Centre is set to get a state of the art fibreglass swimming pool.

Renovation works are due to start on Monday July 8 and the pool will close at 4pm on Sunday July 7. It is anticipated that the work will take up to 16 weeks and the pool will remain closed until a full health and safety inspection has been completed.

The upgrade will include a fibreglass lining against the internal walls and floor of the existing pool structure. This will provide a safe, ceramic-like finish that will last for many years. A salt chlorination system will be introduced and the tiles around the pool and viewing area will be replaced.

The Leisure Centre plans to showcase the new swimming pool and improved facilities with a launch weekend of open sessions to demonstrate the variety of sports and fitness activities on offer.

Gold and blue memberships valid during the closure will be extended to reflect the duration that the pool is closed.

Remembering Doreen Duncan

Doreen 'Rene' Duncan, nee McCallum, was born on May 10, 1929 in San Carlos settlement. Her parents, Alexander and Liz, were living at The Flats Shanty at the time.

The family moved to the Top Malo, Teal Inlet when Rene was about three months old and then on to the Lower Malo before moving to The Ronda, Salvador where they were when war broke out in 1939. Being totally isolated at Ronda and close to the coast, they could see the lights of passing ships; Rene's mother found it rather unnerving as with her husband away during the week working she was alone most of the time with only her two young daughters for company. When the stone house in Salvador settlement became available they moved in there. The family were due to shift back to San Carlos in early 1942 but unfortunately whilst they were waiting for their furniture to be moved Rene's father died on the Verde Mountain at San Carlos.

Liz and the girls remained at Salvador with George (Liz's brother) until mid 1943 when they moved to Stanley where Liz and Rene both worked at Cable Cottage for the Senior Medical Officer and Marj went to stay with her grandparents until Liz secured the housekeepers post at Stanley House and the family could once again be together.

Rene married Billy Duncan on August 15, 1947, in the Cathedral and moved to Teal Inlet to set up home. They had very little time together before Marj went to stay for a summer holiday during which time her mother took ill and had to give up her job at Stanley House; this resulted in Marj's stay with them being much extended. Rene was also asked to accommodate and cook for Billy Summers and Ronnie King whilst they were at Teal Inlet building the new bunkhouse. For a newly married young wife she had a lot on her plate at that time, but no doubt took it in her stride.

Rene and Billy next moved to Hill Side, Fitzroy and they were living there when daughter Sharon was born. They moved to Stanley before Sharon was a year old, living in the Brisbane Road area. Rene helped Billy with his butchery business and could often be seen out and about delivering meat. When they built and started a bakery Rene worked alongside him. Later, Rene looked after her nephews Terence and Ian for a couple of years, as they finished school and began work, and until their parents moved to Stanley. Having three stropky teenagers to deal with plus the antics they got up to was yet another challenge in her path!

Always one to be busy Rene undertook the cooking and washing for the family during the building of the property Tenacres in Stanley, as she claimed she would be no help with a hammer and nails. She thoroughly enjoyed her time at Tenacres where she could both enjoy riding and watching others go out over the common on their horses.

The family always laughed over the time Billy asked Rene to do something at Tenacres and she replied that she was not his navy, to which Billy responded, "you would be no good as a navy as you wouldn't do as you were told."

Sadly Rene had several falls over a few years at Tenacres, breaking many bones which ultimately resulted in her moving to a sheltered housing unit in Thatcher Drive which she thought was ideal for someone in her situation. Rene enjoyed a good social life at Thatcher Drive, playing bridge and crib on a regular basis and receiving many visitors. She always went to San Carlos for Christmas and New Year but did not visit too often throughout the year as she found it, "a bit quiet."

On her last outing with Sharon and John, looking for old house sites, she was able to visit the spot where her ancestors had lived at the Head of Rumford; she enjoyed this type of excursion.

Rene was one of three children and survived her sisters Winifred and Marj. Rene leaves behind her daughter, Sharon, granddaughters Sandi and Sara, both of whom recently visited, and three great grandsons the youngest of whom had also visited recently and had a few in-depth chats with his Great Nan.

Although Rene will be missed by those who knew her she leaves behind fond memories which continue to make us smile.

Proud of the young people

I CONSIDER myself a very lucky person and very proud to have been invited to St Pauls for the funeral of Baroness Thatcher, but all that aside I would just like to commend the young people of the Islands that represented the Islanders as a whole.

I don't know who advised them all but I would just like everyone to know that they dressed immaculately and held their end up famously.

Many people that I was with spoke highly of them and were proud to be associated.

I am writing this as I am sure their parents will be very proud and quite rightly so, but also so should the Falklands.

Well done.

Gary Clement MBE
SAMA FI Chairman

Budget variances

IN looking back at the Budgets over the past three years presented to the current Legislative Assembly it is evident that our elected representatives have so far been denied the choice of where to utilise revenues of £49.4 million for the purposes of government.

Your letters
Write to Penguin News
Fax 22238 or email editor@penguinnews.co.fk

This is due to the Budget position, at the time it was presented, being so far adrift from the actual position one year later:

- At the first Budget meeting of the new Assembly in May 2010 a deficit of £1 million was presented but the actual position, one year later, was a large surplus of £18 million.

- In May 2011, at the second Budget meeting, a small surplus of £100,000 was estimated but the actual position turned out to be a surplus of £8.8 million and this was after a supplementary transfer of £8 million to special funds which were unplanned at the time the Budget was presented.

- At the third Budget meeting, In May last year, a surplus of £2.6 million was forecast but by the end of March this year, only nine months later, it had been revised upwards to a staggering £24.3 million.

Over the three year period these variances total £49.4 million and this is more than the annual Budget!

Unless the weaknesses which have allowed the Budget position to be consistently understated are overcome it is likely that the variances will become more extreme when anticipated revenues from oil royalties start to flow.

If the annual Budget estimates year on year can be so far out what confidence can there be in the projections for subsequent years in the medium and long term financial plans?

This Legislative Assembly started off with £92.2 million of net liquid assets in the Consolidated Fund and by 31 March this year it was estimated they had reached £143.3 million having been boosted by surpluses of £51.1 million, £49.4 million of which were unplanned.

In other words an actual increase of 55% and only 2% of it budgeted.

Not only have our MLAs been denied choices but the public has been misled about what the country can afford.

It doesn't take an economist to figure out that the public purse could easily afford to reduce taxes and charges, pay higher pensions, increase the capacity for more investment in services and infrastructure (remember the plan for the development of core settlements in Camp) and lift the suspension of the Holiday Credit Scheme, to name just a few measures.

Something to think about in both the lead up to the 2013/14 Budget and the election to the next Legislative Assembly.

Derek Howatt
Stanley

The Indian chief

THOSE of you who have taken the time to seek out the little Indian chief set at the base of the steps into Southern Imports over the last week, may be interested in a further snippet of information.

Peter Short was the manager of the then Co-operative Society in the late 1970s said he recalled the late Bill Berntsen pressing the Indian into the concrete when he was building the steps. "I recall Bill coming into the office and telling me he had done it, but I am not sure where he got it from. As far as I understand, the Indian was a child's toy, probably dropped on the way to school," Mr Short told Penguin News.

Young runner passes war memorial in a blur

ONE hundred and ninety seven walkers and runners registered in Stanley for this year's Run Together - the 'pink run' in support of cancer charities. Out in Camp, two people walked on Saunders Island, (£60 raised) eight at Goose Green (£230) nine at Fox Bay (£150) and fourteen at Hill Cove (£241)

Also at Hill Cove brave Camp teacher Rancee Ambrose raised further funds by having her hair shaved in the social club.

First back in the Stanley event was runner, Teslyn Barkman (23 mins 58 seconds) then Emeka Nweje (25 mins 4 seconds), first child was Hamish McKee (25 mins 45 seconds), second child was Shaun East (25 mins 26 seconds) and third Flora McKee (26 mins 50 seconds). First walkers were Annagret Goss, Tracey Clarke and Ian Ross.

Organiser Sally Ellis said funds raised once finally received will be around £2,550 from race registration and t-shirt sales. This will go to Cancer Research UK. The approximately £1,400 made from cake sales and the raffle, "will stay local with the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust"

Sally said, "We were really pleased with the turn-out on the day, and the awesome generosity of people in donating baking to the cake stall and raffle prizes, and of course the generosity of those that buy the goodies and tickets. We are really looking forward to doing it all again next year. And we promise not to run out of raffle tickets next year. We now know that we need well over 3,000."

Roy claims first major darts tournament

THE 10th Falkland Islands Company Ltd (FIC) darts tournament was held in the Town Hall on Saturday May 11.

FIC took over sponsorship of the tournament (previously the Johnnie Walker) in 2004 and it continues to be a 301 double in, double out format.

There were 65 entries in the men's competition. Defending champion Toot Ford was beaten by Paul 'Fudge' Smith in the first round; Fudge later received a 'performance of the tournament' award for this.

The quarter final line up was Richard Bonner v Ally Bonner, Chris Lloyd v Geoff Greenough, Adrian Minnell v Roy Shepherd and Phil Kearney v Johnny Ford. Richard, Geoff, Roy and Phil won through to the semi finals.

Both of these matches were very close games resulting in 3-2 victories for Richard and Roy.

Roy's experience of having played in a major tournament final before showed (he was 2nd in the 2007 Victory Bar Cup) and he beat Richard 4-0.

The ladies competition had 32 entries and there were not really any surprise results in the early rounds.

Last year's winner Maggie Goss, Carole Lee, Jane Clement, Sharon Jaffray, Candy Blackley, Corrina Ashbridge, Cherry Robson and Lizzy Newton progressed to the quarter finals.

In the first semi-final Maggie beat Sharon 2-0, and Candy won 2-1 against Cherry. Candy went on to defeat Maggie in the best of five leg final.

Prizes were presented by FIC's Construction Director James Marsh. Darts Club chairman Mark Pollard thanked everyone for supporting the event, especially the FIC for their continued sponsorship, adding that he looked forward to seeing everyone there for the Governor's Cup tournament on June 29.

The Governor's Cup reverts to the 501 straight start format which is used throughout the league games currently being played.

Under 18s

MAKING good use of the set up in the Town Hall on Sunday it was the turn of the under 18s to step up to the oche.

Claiming first place was Ieuan Ford, son of Toot and Leanne, who are both keen darts players.

Declan Bonner defended another big name in Falklands darts history by taking second place while Matthew Hansen made a bid for the Westers, sharing third place with Macauley Middleton.

Demi Greenough was the top girl.

Stanley Darts Club chairman Mark Pollard thanked Jane Clement for sponsoring the tournament as well as Paul and Bunny Bonner for contributing to the prize money.

"Also thanks to Roy Shepherd for being a good sport and playing Ieuan at the end in the match of Saturday and Sunday's champions."

Falkland Islands Defence Force Routine Orders

Thursday 23rd May 1900 Local Area Fieldcraft.
Quad driving route with GPS navigation and HF comms.

PT Insanity 70 day challenge Monday - Friday,
5.30pm, FIDF HQ - week 8 schedule on page 15.

Confidential, secure and safe. Got a question, need info or help?
Email: safe@police.gov.fk Answer machine +500 28111

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Three hat-tricks and an Energise Shield

THE Energise Shield 2013 was already won by Penguins before their last match on Sunday thanks to Blackhawks beating Hurricanes in the previous weeks matches, but before they claimed their prize Panthers were hoping to give them a hard run. The game started with furious energy.

Panthers Frank O'Sullivan was first to score just a few minutes in to the game, and gave them a moment to hope that they might stop Penguins current winning streak, but it only lasted a moment. Ricky Leyton banged a shot from across the hall into Panthers goal and within the same minute some fluid teamwork enabled Kevin Ross to stretch their lead.

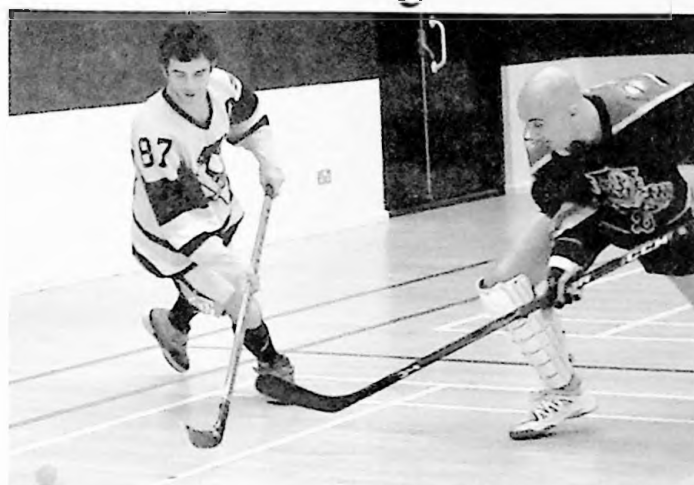

Penguin Duane Evans scored minutes later, and then showed some football skill by booting clear a goal attempt from Panthers. Penguins were keen to show the cats why they won the shield, passing well, creating plays and defending well. Sarah Shepherd was smiling next bringing another goal for Penguins; the lead was secured but they weren't going to rest yet. Ricky thumped in another goal and knocked in his hat-trick thirty seconds later.

Panther Roy Shepherd was kicking himself next when what was meant to be a stylish flick turned into Kyran Evans confiscating the ball and gliding a pass to Ricky for another Penguin goal. Callum clutched back some respite for Panthers before half time but the yellow jerseys were looking unstoppable; Panthers 2 - Penguins 7 at the break.

Duane whacked in another soon after the restart proving how well the Penguins squad were creating opportunities to score. Kyran slipped in another past Panthers goalie Melvyn Clifton, who was probably just starting to wish he'd stayed at home when Duane banged in his third of the game.

Panthers were riled; Callum and Duane were sent off for two minutes each when Callum hooked his stick between Duane's legs and the pair narrowly missed a brawl.

Melvyn accidentally passed the ball straight out to Ricky who thanked him by punching in another goal over his shoulder. The Penguins were on eleven goals with ten minutes left to play, until they were on twelve goals with nine minutes left to play thanks to Kyran slamming in another. An unforced error from the cats moments later brought a sense of déjà-vu when Kyran stole the ball and passed to Ricky, but this time it resulted in a Panther player pile-up when two outfield players threw themselves on to the ball to stop it.

The pace was unrelenting and Panthers were keen to redeem some glory, but they couldn't get another past Penguin goalie Marcus Morrison. They had twenty four seconds to count down on the clock before Kyran sealed the victory, which probably didn't need that much sealing, by swiping in from behind the goal and past Melvyn's foot. Penguins 13 - Panthers 2.

Four all for all

Coyotes and Flyers kicked off the Russell Smith Memorial Trophy competition on Tuesday evening. The game was hard fought with most shots from the Coyote side but they were chasing Flyers throughout the game.

Flyer Gordon Lennie got the first goal and eventually Coyote Nick Rendell found the net after pummelling Flyer Goalie Ever Perella for 20 minutes. David Hewitt tallied the Coyote score to two soon after but Antoine Daille levelled it out again in the final minutes of the first half. Flyers stretched the lead twice in the second half with goals from Antoine and Gordon, but Coyotes struck back biting at their heels thanks to Luis Quinto and David. A hard fought draw - Flyers 4, Coyotes 4.

Stanley Running Club

is holding a 5 kilometre race on Sunday 26 May Start Time: 10am

Starting at the Old Beaver Hangar and finishing at the Seamen's Mission. There will be a shorter children's race (approximately 3k) starting from the Town Hall.

Entry fee: Adults £3, children £1. Money raised will go towards sending athletes to the Nat West Small Island Games.

The race will be run on the open road, so additional marshalling will be provided for the children's course, but parents/carers of young children should accompany their child during the race. There will be prizes - 1st adult male, 1st adult female, and 1st 2nd & 3rd each for girls and boys.

More races will be held on 9 and 23 June to help our athletes train for the Games: more details to follow.

Shooter missed off the list

MATTHEW Vincent was accidentally omitted in the Overseas Games Association's press release last week that announced our team of Falkland Islands competitors going to the 2013 NatWest Island Games in Bermuda.

Mr Vincent is part of the shooting team and will be competing in the Olympic Skeet and Sporting shooting events.

Intense weekly workout

Monday - Friday, at the FIDF hall.

The Annual General Meeting of ACORNS will be held at the KEMH Day Centre on Thursday 23rd May 2013 at 6pm.

All items for the agenda should be forwarded to Rose Toolan at Social Services by 4.30pm Tuesday 21st May 2013.

ACORNS is a community group which comes together three times per week at the KEMH Day Centre. It meets on a Tuesday & Thursday mornings from 9.30am - 11.30am and Thursday evenings from 7pm-9pm.

If you are interested in becoming a volunteer and helping at the sessions please contact Social Services on 27296.

Due to the up-grading of our electronic medical records system at the beginning of June, we regret to inform the public that we anticipate a reduction of GP services.

We will be unable to book routine appointments for Friday 31st May, Monday 3rd June and Wednesday 5th June.

Only emergency appointments will be available on these days.

This is due to the GPs and support staff having to undergo training for the new system.

This will also impact on the Pharmacy department - therefore anyone who requires repeat prescriptions between the 31st May and 7th June are requested to submit their prescriptions to Pharmacy no later than Friday 24th May - failure to do so may lead to a delay in dispensing your medication.

We apologise for any inconvenience that this may cause and thank you in advance for your cooperation during this disruption.
Janette Vincent, Hospital Manager (Acting), King Edward VII Memorial Hospital, Stanley, Falkland Islands.

Members of the Legislative Assembly will be holding a public meeting on Monday 27 May, 5pm in the Court & Assembly Chambers, Town Hall. There will be a presentation as part of the consultation on the Minimum Wage. Should you have any other questions that would require research please could they be sent to Gilbert House on email assembly@se.gov.fk by 4.30pm on Thursday 23 May. Questions for research are restricted to three per person to allow for officers to research responses.

The 2013 Landing Day Service will commence at 11.00 in San Carlos Cemetery on Tuesday, 21st May to honour all those that were lost and to commemorate the 1982 British landings. Hot drinks will be available after the service in the McPhee's Nissen hut (same areas as previous years) so some plates of finger food would be much appreciated for a period of reflection. People wishing to lay a wreath are asked to make contact with Michael (Ted) Jones prior to the service or you can contact him in advance on telephone 31066. Everyone most welcome.

The Goose Green Liberation service will take place at the 2 Para memorial at Goose Green on Wednesday 29th May at 11am. Everyone is welcome.

MPC Craft Fair
Saturday 25th May 10am to 2pm

No benefit in MP for Overseas Territories

UK Independent Party MEP Nigel Farage said this week, that Overseas Territories (OTs) including the Falkland Islands should be given a seat in the Commons, however Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers does not agree.

The UKIP leader claimed that the OTs voices are dangerously "muted" in Britain and they should be allowed to elect their own 'MP for the Territories'.

However, MLA Summers said the issue arose periodically: "Andrew McKinley used to campaign regularly on the issue. OTs have never seen any real benefit, and the Falklands has regularly said that we do not consider it to be in our best interest."

He said, "We have a strong cross-party All Party Group that is highly supportive of the Falklands. Having our own MP, who would inevitably be an independent, and therefore devoid of all the party political support necessary to succeed in the Parliamentary arena, is unlikely to give us a stronger position."

He said that if one MP was representing all of the Overseas Territories they would, "inevitably come from the Caribbean region, and have no knowledge of us or our interests."

While the OTs were being 'championed' by the UKIP parliamentarian, the Prime Minister this week criticised a lack of transparency in OT's banking systems which he said had left them open to the accusation they were being used for tax avoidance.

The Falkland Islands was not included in the criticism and Financial Secretary Nicola Granger told Penguin News that the Falkland Islands Government, "has a double taxation agreement with the UK Government which includes provision for confidential exchange of information between the two territories to prevent fraud or legal avoidance."

The Falkland Islands tax system was originally based around the UK system and includes similar provisions regarding knowledge of the ownership of companies.

Mr Cameron's comments were aimed at 10 territories and crown dependencies, including the Cayman Islands and the Isle of Man.

The plea came ahead of a G8 summit in June, when the UK is expected to push for tighter tax measures.

Captured seal allegations

A KOREAN squid jigger was brought to Stanley this week to assist in investigations into an alleged offence of capturing a fur seal. Director of Fisheries John Barton said: "It was determined that there was insufficient evidence and the vessel has been released." The seal did not survive capture.

Mr Barton said: "A number of laws provide protection for seabirds and marine mammals in Falkland waters. Additionally, it is stated as a condition of all fishing licenses that it is an offence to deliberately kill, injure or capture any wild bird or marine mammal while the vessel is in the fishing waters of the Falkland Islands."

He said the point will be reinforced with fishing companies and vessels. "It should also be emphasised that seabird mortalities have successfully been reduced in trawl fisheries or eliminated completely in longline fisheries."

Mr Barton also confirmed that after a slow start it has turned out to be a good year for the Illex. The total catch has now reached approximately 126,000 tonnes which makes it the best year since 2007.

Mr Barton said: "The high catches in April and early May resulted in a lot of jiggers coming to Berkeley Sound to tranship."

Blue Beach Landing Day

Three generations of the Heathman family pay their respects at the Blue Beach cemetery for 1982 British servicemen

APPROXIMATELY 100 members of the civilian and military communities attended the service on Tuesday at the cemetery situated close to where 3 Commando Brigade had its initial headquarters after landing on May 21, 1982.

During the outdoor service wreaths were laid by government and military representatives as well as civilians, many of whom who were living at San Carlos 31 years ago.

Penguin News

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WHILE progress is the byword for the Falklands today a quick glance through Penguin News dated precisely fifteen years ago, could give the impression our society exists in a time warp.

Although the initial reason for taking a look back at old editions was due to the Deputy Editor's keenness to resurrect the Memory Lane column (and we came upon a whole pile of familiar issues including worries about oil development, jigger jumpers and poachers) it also turned out that the political piece submitted by Alastair Forsyth this week - pages 6/7 - coincided with the same week in 1998 when he and Argentine professor Conrado Bullrich personally presented another 'political solution' document to Islanders. As such, our interest was piqued and we approached some of those same Islanders that commented on the work fifteen years ago, and invited them to do the same for the gentleman's latest offering.

Whether or not you feel the same frustration that MLA Cheek does - and I sympathise with her on this one - at the host of well meaning, but not always well informed individuals who offer up a range of 'answers' to our political situation, Mr Forsyth raises some interesting issues worthy of debate, the UN's attitude to the political status of Overseas Territories for example, but his conclusion is less than convincing.

Perhaps I am placing too much faith in the ethics of the UN (made up as it is from representatives of countries sometimes with agendas that suit their own political concerns and not entirely based on disinterested and noble principles) but rather than offering to hand over valuable mineral resources in the vain hope of a deal with Argentina it would seem more far-sighted that with work on our part and that of our supporters, and in conjunction with constantly evolving attitudes towards human rights, that eventually those privileges currently accessed by citizens of other countries and territories will ultimately be recognised as the right of the residents of this territory also.

On a spookier note, having spotted some eerie similarities between current times and days of yore within the pages of the paper (and interestingly enough Psychic Celia was advertising her skills in the PN of May 29, 1998) there seems no need to ponder what issues we should examine in future editions, instead it is tempting to simply dip into our archives in order to identify precisely what we're all going to be talking about in the weeks to come.

Port authority means fixed attention on management

A SINGLE port authority would mean full-time concentration on operational and infrastructure management, indicated Harbour Master Malcolm Jamieson this week.

In a follow up to last week's article announcing support for a Port Authority in the Falkland Islands Mr Jamieson responded to a question posed by Penguin News, 'why do we need one?'

He explained that as there was no single harbour authority, harbour issues were handled by a relatively large number of companies and organisations including the government.

Mr Jamieson said: "This includes linesmen, harbour control (FIG and Cable & Wireless), pilotage, FIPASS management, administration and budgeting. As there are up to 11 different bodies related to harbour issues, it is clear that there are no direct connections between these."

He said under a single authority, staff would be employed, trained, insured and operate under one safety management system under one organisation.

"As Harbour Master who maintains responsibility, this would ensure that there would be direct control over all harbour issues and personnel," said Mr Jamieson.

An authority would also concentrate on matters of concern such as operational and infrastructure management. These are currently looked after on a part time basis.

He added: "A harbour authority should be a commercially driven organisation who would want to promote their port as a business."

"Under FIG, harbours are essentially covered by numerous government departments with obvious government controlled budgets and policies which may not properly reflect modern standards that are required."

Your questions answered

QIn relation to last week's story about support for a port authority: when was the consultation period, where was it advertised and how many people responded?

AI can confirm that the consultation period was from Monday April 15 to Friday April 26.

The consultation document was distributed for pick up in Stanley Services, Standard Chartered Bank, West Store Café, Stanley Leisure Centre, Chamber of Commerce, Shorty's Diner, and Secretariat. There was also an advert included in the Penguin news on 19th April.

We received 29 responses in total which although I appreciate doesn't sound like a high response rate, I have spoken to the Planning Department who have assured me that this is a high response rate in comparison to planning consultations.

South Georgia shipping news

THE South Georgia tourist season ended on April 7 with the visit of Plancius with 53 passengers. She and Bark Europa which left the island on April 1, were both heading north towards Tristan da Cunha.

The month began with two longliners fishing for toothfish in the South Sandwich Islands Southern zone and achieving fairly good catches. Three further vessels were inspected and licensed in the lead up to the early opening of the South Georgia toothfish fishery on April 11.

The South Georgia toothfish fishery officially opens on May 1, but a conditional 20-day extension allowed licensed vessels that were fully compliant with CCAMLR

Conservation Measures during the previous CCAMLR season to start fishing on April 11.

Catches for early season in the South Georgia fishery were very good.

The toothfish fishing fleet was at full capacity when the sixth longliner arrived at Cumberland Bay for inspection and licensing on April 28.

There were also visits from two research vessels: the German vessel Polarstern which had been in the area weeks conducting research at sea, and supporting a field party undertaking lake coring, and the British Antarctic Survey (BAS) vessel James Clark Ross making the final call of the season to King Edward Point.

Inquest findings due today

THE inquest into the death of Danny Cofre (20) began on Tuesday before Her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley.

The court heard from witnesses who took part in a rover rally from Moody Brook to Long Island on October 20, 2012 when following a single vehicle accident on Uranie Bay, Danny suffered fatal head injuries.

Mr Gumsley gathered information surrounding the organisation and safety aspects of the rally which was organised to raise funds for the Darts Club, as well as the circumstances leading up to the Suzuki Samurai jeep Danny was driving overturning on the beach.

Witness Scott Short who had been passenger with Danny on the rally, but was not in the vehicle at the time of the accident, described his long time friend as a "happy, never down and fun loving person." He said he had not been concerned that Danny did not have a licence to drive. "I trusted him," he said adding, "He was a normal lad in the Falkland Islands, most know how to drive." (The rally was carried out on farm land for which no licence is required to drive a vehicle).

Witnesses told how they had gathered at Moody Brook at 9am for the Camp driving journey, which while advertised as a 'rally' was not any form of race, but more of a day's outing, "picnic-like at times," said one witness while another described the event as "going back in time, to how we used to travel before the roads."

For Danny it was a first time as a driver on a rally and one of the organisers Lynda Buckland giving evidence said she had voiced concern, however fellow event organiser Adrian Minnell as well as several other witnesses explained that historically at such events, people turn up and drive to an arranged destination, and it was how most people learned their camp driving skills.

The rally ended at Uranie Bay at the base of Long Island Mountain after some five hours on the track and as those to the fore of the convoy awaited the tail-end drivers Danny and several others had driven up and down the beach which culminated in the single vehicle accident.

Several witnesses commended the helicopter team on their performance, both in getting the 78 Squadron helicopter on the ground in rapid time and for the continued medical assistance at the hospital.

Pathologist Dr John Clarke who carried out a post mortem on Danny said that moderate levels of alcohol had been detected in a blood test (123 milligrams/100 millilitres – 80 milligrams is the legal limit) and that death had been as a result of severe head injury. The injury had been "non-survivable," said Dr Clarke, adding that Danny could not have been saved by any level of medical attention.

Mr Gumsley is to deliver his findings today (Friday May 24) at 10am.

her concerns that the small jeep he was driving would spend a lot of time bogged, however, he was commended for his driving by several witnesses and it was noted that in fact he had notched up only a few boggings.

Mr Gumsley questioned the lack of instruction prior to the rally with regard to vehicle worthiness, driving ability and al-

MPA woman fined for ABH

MOUNT Pleasant woman Joanne Hamilton was fined £250 plus £896 compensation on Monday after she pleaded guilty to a charge of assault occasioning actual bodily harm to a Stanley woman outside the Trough.

Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis providing the facts of the case said the offence took place on March 24 at around 2am.

The victim called the police who found her in a distressed state with her left eye swollen shut to such an extent, that although they knew her, she was barely recognisable.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson said his client had been with the military for one and a half years and according to her Captain had an exemplary career.

The incident appeared completely out of character said Mr Watson, who added that it his client had intimated that the, "root of the problem," had been, "boyfriend trouble."

Justice of the Peace Keith Biles said it was a very serious offence during which Miss Hamilton had followed the victim around Stanley with a view to confrontation. The photographs of the facial injuries had made an impression on the court, he said, adding that there had been a measure of pre-meditation leading up to the two attacks.

In addition to the £250 fine, Miss Hamilton was ordered to pay £546 for lost wages, £350 for the injuries and pain caused plus £85 prosecution costs making a total of £1,231.

Charges dropped

CHARGES were dropped against two young men and a not guilty verdict was delivered to another at the end of a trial on Friday. As reported last week Toby Poole (27), David Hewitt (21) and Jacob Riddell (20) had denied charges of using threatening and abusive behaviour during what was described as a "scuffle" on December 11, 2012.

Justices of the Peace Phyl Rendell, Janet Robertson and Judy Summers concluded that there was no case to continue against Mr Hewitt and Mr Riddell. Mrs Rendell said that the evidence against them was, "weak, vague and second limb," and the case had wasted court time.

Mr Poole was found not guilty but was bound over to keep the peace for six months to the sum of £200 for being part of a disturbance in a public place.

JP Rendell told the young men to take the opportunity to address their drinking habits, warning that drunken behaviour could get them in serious trouble and completely ruin career opportunities. "I hope this has been a sobering experience for you," she said.

New government builds and Sapper Hill development answer to housing list?

THE Falkland Islands Government Housing List now numbers 34 with 19 on the transfer list, reported Housing Officer Bonnie Curtis to the Housing Committee yesterday.

Speaking to Penguin News this week she specified, "At the moment, just over half of those on the housing list are under 30."

"The remainder vary in age right up to those who are on the list for sheltered accommodation. Just over a quarter of those on the housing list have dependant children or are expecting a child."

'Dependent' means under 18 and primarily resident with the applicant.

Asked if there were plans being put in place to deal with those requiring accommodation Ms Curtis said there were 20 new Falkland Islands Government builds proposed for next year.

She said: "I am hoping that the new builds will go a long way to meet the shortage of housing. I am also hopeful that some of our current tenants will take advantage of the Sapper Hill development to build their own homes, thereby freeing up some more FIG properties."

"Until that time, all that can be done is to continue to manage the housing carefully to maximise the limited resources available."

She added: "It is important to bear in mind, when considering the number of people on the housing list, that there are many who are managing perfectly well without FIG housing, and could be categorised as 'wanting' rather than 'needing' to be housed by FIG."

"Those people of course score quite low when assessed and are likely to remain on the housing list for some time as they are considered low priority."

On the subject of contractor properties in her report to the committee she noted that five were vacant and those have all been allocated to certain posts which are either under recruitment, or the contractors have recruited but have not yet arrived.

There are currently six vacant local properties. One, Lois Cottage, is uninhabitable.

Stanley Cottage South, is undergoing a major refurbishment and has been allocated.

Three others are undergoing minor works and have also been allocated.

One 'sheltered' accommodation will be allocated at the Sheltered Housing Committee Meeting on May 21.

On the Hansen Hill Development four properties are complete.

Ms Curtis reported that all have now been furnished with two occupied. Two others are allocated to contractors who have not yet arrived.

The other eight properties at Hansen Hill are expected to be ready by early September, but further delays are possible said Ms Curtis.

All houses have been allocated to contractor posts which have been approved but are currently under recruitment.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I HOPE readers will forgive the terseness of my response to the 'Independence Option' (See page 6/7). I've lived long enough to have heard the whole gamut of suggestions from outside the Islands about our future. Some from well meaning fools; the classic being 'give West Falkland to Argentina', with no mention of consultation or practicalities. By no coincidence these are often written in capital letters or crayon. Other suggestions came from those less well-meaning, often so called experts in international politics. Before 1982 leaseback and condominium were being mooted by people who should have known better. It requires a special kind of arrogance to suggest people give their homeland to an acquisitive neighbour and then be permitted to lease it back for 20 years. It is unbelievable that even a handful of people were ready to accede to that.

It is good to hear firm and unequivocal statements on our status from the UK government but I fear there will always be others with other agendas who attempt to undermine our position. Fortunately I believe the population is firmly united in wanting to make a success of our country. It would be great if we could also have friendly relations with all our neighbours but we are not the ones preventing that happening.

The annual visit to the Committee of 24 comes up shortly, a seemingly futile exercise but one we have to undertake. No doubt the same old suspects will be wheeled out by the Argentine MFA to reel off the same old falsehoods while passing themselves off as hard done by Islanders. As I sat next to one of them at school in the 1950s I fume as he stumbles through a speech clearly written for him by someone else and then clumsily translated.

We have two budget meetings this week and a delayed budget session in early June. I'm also attending one of the sessions of the Environment Mainstreaming workshops, not only because I am on the Environment Committee, but also because with our near total reliance on our environment for our existence and economy, it is crucial.

Videla - death of an evil dictator

AN exclusive and personal appraisal for Penguin News by Harold Briley who was based in Buenos Aires for the BBC during General Videla's reign of terror when the United Kingdom government was negotiating to hand over the Falkland Islands to Argentina.

General Jorge Videla, who dominated Argentina's vicious seven-year military dictatorship leading to the Falklands war, has died in prison in Buenos Aires, aged 87.

He died of natural causes unlike the estimated 30,000 victims hideously tortured and murdered as a result of the policies he set in train.

His death is a final footnote to one of the worst periods of sadistic repression in Argentina's history during which, astonishingly as it seems now, successive United Kingdom governments pursued disastrous and dangerous diplomacy for surrender of Falkland Islands' sovereignty and 1,600 Islanders to one of South America's most evil regimes.

Videla was the man under whose rule and that of his successors Britain tried to persuade the Islanders they would enjoy a better life. To be fair, the UK Government naively insisted on 'safeguards' for the Islanders. But who could believe such a man could be trusted to abide by any pledge? The obduracy of the Islanders secured their own salvation.

In retrospect, how wise the Falkland Islanders were to reject UK pressure with such determination, rebuffing Lord Chalfont and Nicholas Ridley, the Foreign Office Ministers negotiating for the Callaghan and Thatcher governments. How wrong they were and how right the Islanders were. What would have happened to you Islanders if they had succeeded?

General Videla, the strongman of the 1976-1983 military Juntas, led the coup which ousted the previous civilian president Isabel Peron. I was based in Buenos Aires at the peak of his power, a cruel dictator, presiding over a maniacal military machine of specially formed commando units ordered to kidnap, torture, and commit mass murder in more than 500 clandestine detention centres.

Videla called it, "a war against subversion." But it targeted not only rebel terrorist organisations but anyone who might be perceived to oppose the regime including many innocent people such as lawyers, teachers, students, trade unionists, and nuns.

Even young pregnant mothers were kidnapped, tortured, forced to give birth, then murdered as their babies were farmed out for adoption by military families.

The corpses were buried in unmarked mass graves or hurled from navy helicopters into the sea. It was a dangerous place to be. Dozens of journalists were among the 'disappeared' and others of us reporting the 'Dirty War', including me, received death threats.

The British victory in the Falklands brought an end to the dictatorship and their terror campaign.

Videla was eventually sentenced to life imprisonment for crimes against humanity. He was one of nine Argentine junta leaders heading regimes with which the United Kingdom held Falklands sovereignty talks, all subsequently jailed for their crimes, including General Galtieri who launched the invasion. He too died in prison.

Justice came late.

MLAs meet with Argentine human rights group

TWO Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly Members recently met with five representatives of a human rights group from Chaco, Argentina in order to listen to their views on a number of issues resulting from the 1982 war. MLAs Dick Sawle and Mike Summers attended the meeting following a request from the group made directly to the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly.

Following the meeting, MLA Sawle said the Falklands, upheld fundamental values such as freedom of speech and human rights.

"On humanitarian grounds, it was only right that we should listen to the views of this group who are actively involved in investigating the cases of abuse of many Argentine veterans who suffered greatly at the hands of their own officers during the invasion of the Falkland Islands in 1982.

"However, whilst we may listen to their views on a variety of issues, on the specific issue of DNA testing we have made it very clear that we can only consider any practical action if and when we receive a request from the International Red Cross which must have the full and unequivocal support of the Families Commission in Argentina."

The group of five included three regional Argentine politicians and the Chairman and Secretary of the human rights group.

St Helena day celebrated at GH

SAINT Helena has a known history of over 500 years since its recorded discovery by the Portuguese in 1502.

Claiming to be Britain's second oldest colony, it is one of the most isolated islands in the world and was for several centuries of vital strategic importance to ships sailing to Europe from Asia and South Africa. For several centuries, the British used the island as a place of exile, most notably for Napoleon Bonaparte.

Most historical accounts state the island was discovered on May 21, 1502 by the Galician navigator João da Nova sailing at the service of the Portuguese Crown, on his voyage home from India, and that he named it Santa Helena after Helena of Constantinople.

SAINT Helenians living in the Falklands celebrated their special day with a reception held at Government House on Tuesday evening.

Guests enjoyed themed food including fish cakes made by Susan Knipe, while Anita Browning the Governor's cook turned her hand to a variety of platters including St Helenian sausage rolls made with pork and potato, and curry puffs.

Acting Governor Sandra Tyler-Haywood welcomed everyone to the event which celebrated the anniversary of the discovery of their island home more than 500 years ago.

Mrs Tyler-Haywood said it was fair to say that while the Falklands and St Helena enjoyed very different climates, the islands do have much in common.

The reception was, she said, an opportunity to celebrate the common bonds that the Falklands and St Helena have, not just as UK Overseas Territories but also as island people.

Calling Saints

FROM early 2016, St Helena will have regular flight connections when the island's first airport opens.

Matt Joshua of 'The Journey Tourism' has been commissioned by Enterprise St Helena to assess visitor potential for the island. He said: "An important part of this is assessing the potential level of travel by Saints living on the island and living overseas."

Matt hopes that St Helenians living in the Falklands will take the time to complete a survey online at www.surveymonkey.com/s/SaintsOverseas in order to assess that travel.

Matt assured that any answers provided will be treated in the strictest confidence.

People not oil

FOREIGN Office Minister of State for Latin American Affairs Hugo Swire dismissed the suggestion in an interview with an Argentine newspaper that the UK is only interested in the Falkland Islands for its mineral resources. He said: "To quote what our ambassador in Argentina said recently, we're talking about people not oil. An overwhelming 99.8% of Islanders voted in a referendum last March to remain British. What else can they do to express their opinion and right to self-determination?"

In April 2013 Executive Council approved the following changes to FIGAS Flight Policy beginning 01 July 2013.

- Up to two early morning flights with a fixed departure time of 08:30 covering flights to all destinations
- Up to two flights following on with variable departure times at or earlier than 12:00 mid-day, subject to customer demands and covering flights to all destinations
- One afternoon flight to follow on with a variable departure time, subject to customer demand and will cover flights to all destinations
- Additionally, during the summer season only, there will be, subject to demand a late afternoon follow on flight
- The revised summer season flight programme begins on 01 September and ends 30 April each year (eight months). This is a seven day week operation
- During the summer season, flights will operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday regardless of load limit. Remaining days will be subject to normal planning to ensure economical loads
- FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, especially where a return flight is jeopardised by the cancellation of fellow passengers which, under normal circumstances, renders the flight uneconomical to operate.
- Capped Resident Fares and Capped Resident Fares (Outer Islands) to remain at 2012/2013 levels but all other rates and tariffs increase by 10%
- Capped residents baggage will stay the same at the same 14kgs per person and standard fares will also stay the same at 20kgs per person, anything over this will be charged at £1.40 per kilo as of the 1st July 2013.
- Concessionary freight rates are to be removed from existing beneficiaries and will be offered only to the outer islands.

Give us two minutes...

Reba Peck

1. What is your most prized possession? My art bag
2. What is the worst piece of advice you have ever been given? Well, my mum advised me once: "Now don't play in that creek," after I'd been stuck in it
3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Cup of tea with Josephine Cox and a tot with Kasey Chambers
4. If you had a motto, what would it be? An eye for an eye leaves the whole world blind
5. There's a "Falklands" has got talent" competition, how would you audition? Forrest Gump impressions, or singing
6. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it? 'Get a Little Mud on the Tyres' by Brad Paisley makes me smile
7. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Well...inconsideration, rudeness, my face, missing more than one crutch in a spell, bad drivers, my face, stepping on chewing gum...the list goes on... oh and my face
8. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I once jumped into a cold outdoor swimming pool in the middle of the night during an electrical storm
9. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Shallow Bay mutton. Not that I'm biased or anything
10. What is your happiest childhood memory? One of my favourites is of sitting on Granna's sitting room floor watching Popeye with the curtains drawn while my Granddad teased me, "Not that bl***y Popeye again!"
11. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? Maggie Goss because she can talk the talk and walk the walk Nineteen year old Islander Reba is currently working on the West Falkland family farm, Shallow Bay, but will be back out in the shearing sheds around the islands working as a rousie come this September. Reba enjoys writing, painting, horse riding, partying and chilling out with friends.

Talking point

FIFTEEN years after British businessman Alastair Forsyth and Argentine Professor Conrado Bullrich visited the Falklands to present their Falklands/Malvinas The Way Forward document, Mr Forsyth offers further thoughts, and invites comments on The Falklands – The Independence Option. Penguin News took the time this week to obtain some initial thoughts from within the Islands, but we invite other readers' comments also, for publication in future editions of the paper.

What Alastair Forsyth says:

When asked about independence Falkland Councillors used to say it is discussed from time to time but "it is not for now." The referendum has concentrated minds on the future and independence is increasingly talked of in the Islands as a possibility. Others outside are happy that it might relieve them of the headache of the dispute.

One reason for increased talk is the number of micro states in the UN list of 193 members. More useful however, for present purposes is The Economist 2013 world population list. This includes for example overseas territories (like the Falklands) which are not UN members. Of the 232 territories in The Economist list 70 have a population of less than 1 million, 26 less than 100,000 and nine less than 10,000.

The nine with populations of less than 10,000 are: St Helena, Montserrat, St Pierre et Miquelon, the Falklands, Niue, Nauru, Norfolk Island, Pitcairn and Tokelau.

At the same time there is pressure from the UN. As an agent of decolonisation, the UN continues to press territories not yet self governing to emerge from dependence into some form of independence. Sixteen territories remain on the UN decolonisation list. The Falklands is one. Others in the smallest territories list (four only) are Montserrat, St. Helena, Pitcairn and Tokelau. Three are British Overseas Territories, one is a New Zealand dependency. These five are UN targets for decolonisation within the next decade.

This is an unrealistic aim. None of the five are viable without a big brother: Montserrat because of the volcanic threat; St Helena is isolated in mid ocean and incorporates Tristan da Cunha, another volcanic island like Montserrat that had to be evacuated; Tokelau is isolated also in mid ocean, low lying and vulnerable to tsunamis; Pitcairn, with a population under 50, is simply too small.

The three British territories have a big brother in the UK. Tokelau has New Zealand. The present administrative arrangements in each case are accepted, practical and appropriate. No alternatives present themselves. The UN should declare these arrangements to be satisfactory and remove the territories from their Decolonisation list.

The Falklands is a different case from the other four because of the dispute over sovereignty.

Being classed by the UN as a dependent territory there are three ways theoretically the Islands might graduate from the Decolonisation list. Removal from this list would mean they, and the UK, were no longer subject to the Argentine attack at the annual Decolonisation Committee session. This is never a rational, constructive debate.

They could graduate:

- by obtaining full UN recognised independence
- by incorporation into a UN recognized independent state
- by establishing independence in free association with a partner (big brother) state.

IN view of Derek Howatt's letter in the last issue of Penguin News perhaps it's time Members of the Legislative Assembly recognised that some Government Departments will always need to be subsidised, and stop this "user pays" policy which is contributing to the general sense of frustration and unhappiness within the community.

We were all prepared to tighten our belts when the economy required it but do we have to continue this penny-pinching attitude?

Independence: another way ahead or just more ramble?

Full independence for the Islands is ruled out because of the Argentine threat. The Islands could not go down this route without a UK commitment to their defence.

Neither the UK nor the Islands are prepared to consider incorporation. The present arrangements for semi-autonomy are preferable. The French model of incorporation works because the French ex-colonies are of a size nearly comparable to that of a French department. The British ex colonies are much smaller units. Incorporation in the UK for these smaller units makes no sense. (There are 650 constituencies in the UK Parliament, each with an average of 68,000 voters, there are less than 2,000 voters in the Falklands)

The Falklands might contemplate the third route, of independence in free association, but it would have to be in free association with a UK committed to defence.

The UK is committed to the defence of all its Overseas Territories. However it is unlikely to be prepared to commit to defence of a territory over which it no longer had any control.

Cost is another factor. The Islands at present make no contribution to the cost of defence. No reliable figures on cost are available. A figure of £100 million per annum is sometimes used, but one closer to £200 million is said to be more realistic. This compares with the Falklands Government current estimate of £100 million annual gross domestic product. There is unlikely therefore to be any financial benefit for the UK from a formal commitment to defence.

The calculation would change if there were important discoveries of oil or gas, but there is no immediate prospect of significant income from this source.

The clear conclusion is that independence is not an option; except with an unconditional UK commitment to defend the territory, and such a commitment is unlikely to be given to an independent territory.

The March 2013 referendum confirms that the Islands recognise this. They do not wish to change their present status.

A question remains. Could the Islands' defence be assured other than by a continuing UK commitment? Given Argentina's record of non adherence to contractual commitments, notoriously in the case of price guarantees given to owners of privatised public utilities, no Argentine guarantee on its own would be sufficient.

Would the UN recognise and underwrite an independent Falkland Island state? It is unlikely to do so in advance of the settlement of the sovereignty dispute.

It is just conceivable that a solution could be achieved prior to independence. The Islands would have to express their determination to be independent. They would undertake, as the price of recognition, to enter into simultaneous treaties with the UK and Argentina, for the supply of support services; and they would agree to share the anticipated income from the exploitation of oil and gas.

Could this happen? Only if rational debate had first been established between the parties. And only if the expected oil and gas income was large enough to make sharing acceptable.

This could bring the dispute to an end, and allow the UN, the EU and the Commonwealth to support the newly independent state.

Only optimists will believe it could happen.

In other words independence is unlikely to be a way out of the dispute. A better route to peaceful co-habitation might be by way of UN recognition that present arrangements for governance of the Islands (and comparable territories such as St Helena) were satisfactory, so that their names could be removed from the UN decolonisation list. In return for Argentine acceptance of this, and for setting aside, for a greater or lesser period, the territorial claim, the Islands would be required to enter into a treaty to share with Argentina the income from exploitation of natural resources from within their overlapping sea areas.

What the current Falklands Government has to say:

MLA Jan Cheek was also a member of the Islands Government in 1998 when Mr Forsyth visited the Islands. At the time she commented that the document, "was typical of the kind of thing that has been produced over the years by people with a superficial understanding of the problem. These simplistic solutions ignore our rights and wishes."

Today she says the following: Seemingly the writer has chosen to ignore the clear message sent out by our referendum. Decisions about the future of the Falkland Islands are for the people of the Islands.

We have been the subject of theories from self appointed experts for so long that it seems we waste ink in responding. The simplistic arguments ignore many of the basic facts, for example the contribution we make to our defence, as well as our clearly expressed wishes. We have our freedom and should not be subject to blackmail by a country that has ample resources of its own.

A response from two Falklands residents

Fishing Company Marketing Manager Janet Robertson was one of many residents who fifteen years ago gave their reaction to Forsyth/Bullrich The Way Forward document. In May 1998 she commented that what she could not see was how that proposal was going to satisfy Argentina in any of their ambitions with regard to the Falklands.

In response to today's document she makes the following comments:

Mr Forsyth's purpose in putting forward the solution he describes are not entirely clear. Is it to remove the Falklands from the Decolonisation Committee list, or is it to resolve the sovereignty dispute? Or is it just a theoretical exercise in how independence might (or might not) work?

Either way, his solution appears to be to maintain the status quo while try and bribe the Argentines to leave us alone by agreeing to share any oil revenue with them. His solution will neither satisfy the requirements of the Argentine Constitution (for Argentina) nor does it guarantee any end to the matter for us as it merely suggests it as a solution to allow the issue of sovereignty to be put aside for "a greater or lesser period" and as such hardly rings with appeal.

He also states that, "a better route to peaceful co-habitation might be by way of UN recognition that present arrangements for governance of the Islands (and comparable territories such as St Helena) were satisfactory, so that their names could be removed from the UN decolonisation list." This is really the heart of the issue regarding the purpose of the Decolonisation Committee and the extent to which they are not willing to re-address the exercise of self-determination in non-self-governing territories in the 21st century.

To continue insisting that a territory that is not independent nor integrated is an expression of colonialism, where the right to self-determination is not being exercised, is itself not consistent with the right to self-determination.

A modern approach should be to recognise the right of small territories to freely determine their political structure and affiliations. In this scenario the C24 can play a very helpful role to those territories by acting as guardians to ensure that their rights to self-determination are being respected by the larger states they are affiliated with. Rather than insisting that they become a different entity against the wishes of their respective populations.

But this is a side-line to Mr Forsyth's argument which, by mixing up the sovereignty issue and the decolonisation issue, offers no tangible solution other than to find a home for the Islands' future oil reserves in return for no long term respite from the sovereignty claim. He also states a condition of UN recognition as if this were achievable with some hearty lobbying whereas, in fact, it would require the C24 to address critical questions about what they mean by "self-determination" and could, in itself, provide the long-term solution to the Falklands sovereignty dispute by recognising that the Islands are not a colony.

Artist Richard Cockwell was a member of the Falklands Government in 1998, when amongst other comments he said, "We need to be certain that any proposal is a serious effort to remove the Argentine claim and not just a pretext to get us to the conference table."

Today he states:

I am sure that everybody in the Falklands and possibly many ordinary Argentine citizens would like to see "peaceful cohabitation" but I cannot see that this would be acceptable to the present political regime in Argentina.

Many of us know Alastair well and are familiar with his opinions. Once again he has rambled on with various options but has virtually ignored the main issue. That is that Argentina has the sovereignty of our Islands firmly established in their constitution. I cannot see that any of Alastair's options - including his last which he seems to favour - can resolve this problem. Any Argentine Government which might like to accept Alastair's proposals would be acting unconstitutionally.

Also to be realistic, Argentina, with her lobbying of third world countries and the support of the majority of the Organisation of American States would not support the de-listing of the Falkland Islands within the UN under any circumstances. One problem we have to recognise is that despite the fact that there may be many states which are sympathetic to our cause, they are not going to risk a major breakdown of relations with a country the size of Argentina except under gross provocation.

Lastly, do any of us assume that if in the unlikely event of the de-listing of the Falkland Islands by the UN, it would result in "peaceful cohabitation" in the face of Argentina's stance over our Islands?

Shaved head a hit with Yr 3

INFANT and Junior School teacher Rainee Ambrose made a brave decision to have all her hair shaved off to raise funds for cancer charities on the weekend of the Pink Run.

Rainee was at Hill Cove on West Falkland where after the walkers had all finished their five kilometres they queued up in the Social Club where they all got to grab a handful of her mid-length hair and cut it off, before Shelley Nightingale set to and finished the job properly.

Her Year 3 were unaware of the hair transformation until they saw her back at school.

Luna said she was, "really shocked," when she saw her teacher but Ben said, "I think everyone was really impressed."

Chenille commented it was, "really strange to see. I've never seen a girl with that kind of hair before."

The £500 raised by Rainee was split equally between Cancer Research UK and local charity the Cancer Support and Awareness Trust.

Rainee doesn't have to worry about her ears getting chilly because she crocheted a pretty pink hat for the occasion thanks to the canny tuition of the Crafty Old Travellers who were also at Hill Cove at the time.

Rainee says she is still happy to accept donations of money for the charities and/or hats

More Pink funds

KEMH Pathology Manager Emeka Nweje has boosted the Pink Run funds by a further £160.

Mr Nweje raised a total of £160 with sponsorship from his friends locally and in the UK and was happy to contribute to the community.

Fort fund confusion

LEEANN Harris would like to clarify that the children's 'fort' that has been ordered for the OK Corral Park in Stanley was not purchased using left over funds from the PTA fund-raiser, as reported last week, but from funds left over from the St Mary's park which was built with fund-raising by the community after Harold Bennett left the land to the children of the Islands.

Our apologies to Leeann for the misunderstanding.

A stroll down memory lane

20 years ago...

Argentine legislators attending a conference in New Delhi said they want talks on the future of the South Atlantic to be held in the Falkland Islands. The proposal was reported to have been made informally during a meeting between British and Argentine delegations at the Inter-Parliamentary Union conference.

Argentine Senator Eduardo Menem said the Falkland Islands meeting should include analysing the joint search for oil, sovereignty of the Islands and the interests of the Argentine people to improve relations with the Island's inhabitants.

The Association of Horse Owners is born under the guidance of Sharon Halford and Heather Pettersson. Mrs Halford said the idea was sparked by a conservationist's lobby trying to deny a traditional right as well as a desire to protect the right to graze which has existed since the 1840s.

Planning Officer Andy Norrell again asks for Government funds to help with landscaping projects within Stanley. Speaking at the Beautiful Falklands Awards he said the costs were not high and in his view were more than justified by the environmental benefits.

Meanwhile on the West the McGhie family were moving house... Falklands style. The six room, two storey house was loaded onto sleighs and on the second attempt was moved some eight miles from Roy Cove to Port North with two crawlers and four tractors under the foremanship of Bill Pole-Evans.

Colin Smith, described as the Falklands best ever darts player, won the Johnnie Walker Tournament not only for the fourth time in succession, but for the sixth time in seven years and for the seventh time in total. Only Gary Hewitt has managed to deprive Colin of the honour once in 1987. Colin won £400 for top honours while John Teggart produced the best leg of the tournament. Looking a loser to Terry Clifton, John opened up with 110, followed it up with 171 and requiring 20 to finish, hit it with his first dart. Seven darts, in and out.

As the Island's bright young things prepare for the May Ball tonight they may be interested to know that 20 years ago it was Zoe Luxton and Wayne Clasen who took centre stage with Tanya Lee and Justin McPhee as runners up.

News that traces of hydrocarbons had been found in core samples from the first Falklands well sent share prices in Desire spiralling, only to see them slump back sharply to a low of £2.17 with the announcement by Amerada Hess that their exploratory well was dry.

British business man Alastair Forsyth and Argentine professor Conrado Etchebarne Bullrich, authors of 'Falklands/Malvinas The Way Forward' visit the Islands and hold a public meeting. Few Islanders at the meeting appear to accept the authors' view that the document could lead to a wavering of the Argentine claim and it was suggested that even if Argentina were to agree to any deal it would only satisfy them for a limited time before the treaty was used to advance their claim.

Islanders Terry Peck, Phil Miller, Eric Goss, Tony Heathman and Trudi McPhee are invited to the UK to attend the Parachute Regiment's first reunion in Aldershot.

Stanley House Open Day

STANLEY House opened its doors on Saturday for an afternoon of fun and raised a whopping £1,678.

There was plenty to keep the public smiling; book and bric-a-brac stalls, raffle, lucky dip, guessing games, 'throwing for a lollipop' and the ever popular tombola had plenty rummaging through 20p tickets for a winner.

The MPC Thrift Shop stall was a welcome addition this year. Manning the stall was Sarah Edmond who said the NAAFI gave a 10 per cent discount on all items; the charity shop also donated equipment and toys for Stanley House.

The stalls and games were supported by a tempting, and large, selection of cakes, scones and sweet treats donated by generous home bakers.

Senior House Parent and organiser Julie Courtney thanked everyone who donated, "we are pleased to say it was a major success. We raised a massive £1,678.96p on the day we were also donated £150 worth of indoor games from the Thrift Shop and NaaFi at Mount Pleasant so a big thank-you for them also."

Mrs Courtney added a special thanks to the students and staff and those who helped on the day.

Eager Beavers earn sleep-over badges

THIRTEEN Beavers attended a sleep over in the Scout Hut on Friday night.

They played lots of games, made their own party bags and place mats, iced and decorated biscuits and made their own "interesting" sandwiches (tuna and jam and banana and cheese mmm) to earn the Creative badge and to go towards the Creative Challenge badge. As it was also Akela's birthday, Mrs Lee and George had made a fantastic birthday cake and the Beavers had also made a lovely card.

The evening was rounded off with a game of sleeping Beavers followed by a Horrid Henry story read by Mrs Lee and Mrs Hill and a midnight feast.

All the Beavers eventually went to sleep, but the first Beaver was up at 6am.

Tim Miller organised a pre breakfast skittles competition which was won by Ethan, then they all tucked into cereals, bangers and beans and toast and jam.

All the Beavers helped tidy up the sleeping mats and pack everything away, ready for the badge presentation.

Every Beaver was awarded a Beaver Sleep-over badge and a Creative Activity badge, some also gained their Nights Away stage 1 badge, and some received the Creative Challenge badge.

Mrs Hill also received a special, "I survived a Beaver Sleep-over" badge for helping at the event and making the delicious biscuits.

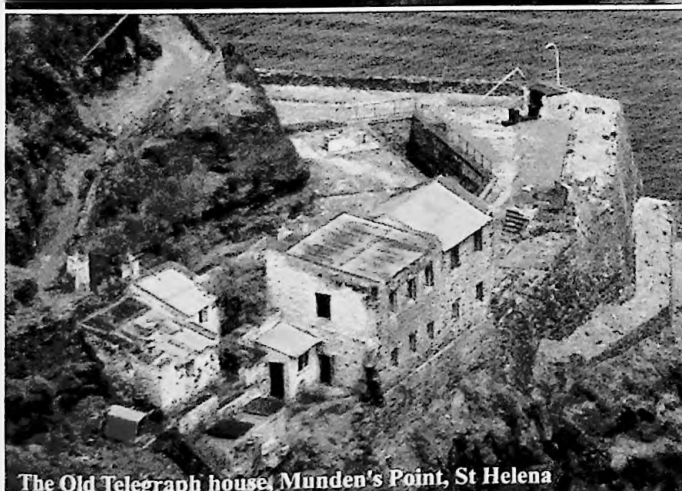

The Beavers and leaders would like to thank Mrs Hill and Tim for all their help it was much appreciated.

A traveller records the diverse beauty of Great Britain's overseas territories

STEWART McPherson has undertaken a project to document the wildlife of all 14 UK Overseas Territories (UK OTs) in order to highlight the global importance and astounding biodiversity of those territories.

Stewart told Penguin News that so far he has been fortunate enough to visit ten, including the Falklands, South Georgia and British Antarctic Territory in February and March this year. The intrepid traveller has provided a summary of his project and a vast array of beautiful images, a few of which can be seen on this page. He intends in future to provide for Penguin News readers an overview of each territory.

MANY people think that the United Kingdom consists solely of the British Isles; the rainy islands in Europe that are home to England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. Images of picturesque patchwork green fields and hedgerows, soaring white cliffs, ancient castles and inspiring cathedrals typically come to mind.

But 14 sets of islands scattered across literally all seven of the world's oceans remain under UK sovereignty. Known as the UK Overseas Territories, these groups of islands collectively comprise an area seven times the size of the British Isles. Often misunderstood and incorrectly portrayed as colonies in the media, the Overseas Territories are modern, democratic, self-governing states that freely choose to remain connected to the UK. They range from remote desert islands to the polar ice deserts of Antarctica, tropical ocean volcanoes to distant coral reefs and atolls. They are globally important centres for wildlife that harbour twenty times the biodiversity of mainland Britain (including many hundreds of species of animals and plants that occur nowhere else in the world). And the territories are connected to many of the most important names in British history (Charles Darwin, Ernest Shackleton, William Bligh, Fletcher Christian and Joseph Hooker to name but a few). All fourteen played an integral role in the building of the UK, and in the shaping of the modern world and international trade, and now are home to over one quarter of a million British people.

Crab eater seal Antarctica

I have been fascinated with the fourteen Overseas Territories ever since I was a child. More so than ever, it is the plants and the animals of the fourteen territories that continues to astound me. To learn more first hand and to help raise awareness of the territories and their wildlife, three years ago I resolved to visit all 14 territories to film and photograph the territories' plants and animals in an attempt to raise awareness of this unique biodiversity and the important conservation work that is being undertaken to safeguard its future. Through the kind help of Colin Clubbe and Martin Hamilton of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, I was introduced to the conservation teams of all of the territories, and over the past two years, I have been fortunate to visit ten territories so far.

The diversity of wildlife of the 10 territories I have visited far exceeds everything I had been told to expect; from million-strong populations of penguins on South Georgia, to vast albatross populations and elephant seals on the Falklands, to pods of the great whales in the waters of Antarctica.

Across the South Atlantic, I observed mass sea turtle nesting and land crab migration on Ascension Island and delicate, endemic ebony and gum wood trees on Saint Helena. And, on the six Caribbean territories, I encountered fiddler crabs and spectacular, bright blue iguanas on Cayman, brilliant pink flamingos on Turks and Caicos, exquisite tropic birds and the endemic Cahow on Bermuda, to Amerindian petroglyphs and cactus gardens on Anguilla, frigate birds, red legged tortoises and giant queen conchs in the azure waters of the British Virgin Islands, and bats, rainforests and populations of one of the largest frog species in the world re-colonising the ash-covered slopes of Montserrat's exploded volcano.

But, just as astounding as the diversity of wildlife are the efforts of the local conservation teams across the territories. Many of the conservationists on each territory have dedicated their whole lives to saving a single plant or animal species, and through breeding programmes, habitat restoration efforts and the removal of invasive species, they have shown that conservation is not always a doom and gloom story, but rather, all that is needed is for one individual to stubbornly refuse to allow a species to fall into the abyss of extinction. Often with few resources but incredible passion and determination, the conservationists have worked to restore entire ecosystems and save hundreds of interconnected plants and animals permanently for the future. Ultimately, it is this conservation message that I hope will be the enduring point of my project, because the territories, as a microcosm for the wider world, prove in unique clarity that if we care enough and act now, we can change stop extinction.

To all my friends in the Falklands, I thank you all for your kindness during my recent visit, and I thank those who attended my talk on this project in Stanley.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

DON'T throw it and don't drop it, or you might split it and spoil the potato. Those words have been repeated pretty often to the kiddies when they have been 'helping' me to pick up potatoes during the spud digging, so I was not surprised to hear the eldest using the same words to her younger sisters.

I was very amused, however, when I overheard the youngest telling her sisters that they ought to be digging them for Gouda because, "she is making too many holes in them." Out of the mouths of babes eh?

The crop is pretty good this year, no gigantic spuds. If there are any of those they will no doubt appear as self-sets next season or, the cats will unearth them. (how do they always know where to dig) most of them are medium to large.

The small ones, which take so much finding are smaller than any I have ever seen before; no bigger than a baby's finger nail.

It makes me wonder what held up the growth on some when, on the same plant, the other spuds are normal? I guess they were just at a stage of growth where the weather affected them. At least there were none with the little 'tomatoes' on them which were so plentiful last year.

Some 'self-sets' left in the tunnels are up. I'd love to say I planned that, but no, I simply missed them when digging! I'll leave them though and see what they produce.

One of the jobs I have been doing is cutting down the strawberries. This gets rid of most pests and diseases and also made it easier to find and remove all the runners that I'd missed before.

Some of those I've used to fill in any gaps and to start a new bed the rest went into pots. Strawberries seldom last more than two seasons in any area as cock-chaffer beetles have a habit of breeding amongst them and leaving their young weevils to eat up the roots. One day there will be a perfectly healthy plant and the next day it will have wilted and died; they have this effect on many other plants too, but mainly primroses and lawn grasses.

Trimmed back strawberry plant and a fine pair of carrots

The raspberries have had their old canes (they look darker and drier) taken out and those that grew very tall have also been cut down by a few inches.

The blackberries had the same treatment, with the fresh new canes (those which have not carried fruit) retained and tied in.

The various currants and gooseberries have also had a trim; nothing too drastic, just a removal of any branches growing too close to the ground and any which crossed over or restricted the growth. The thin tips were all cut back by a few inches also.

I read with interest Joost's cure for earwigs. I haven't any rhubarb leaves left to put it to the test but will try it next year on the ornamental garden and root vegetables. But I am not keen on the idea of putting poison on leafy vegetables. On those I shall use a spray made with water and dish washing liquid, it clogs up their pores and kills most bugs quite effectively and even those which seem untouched by hot or cold water will quickly succumb to soap.

Most 'greens' are still doing well and the Brussel sprouts are looking very good this year. I've been removing their bottom leaves to give them a better chance to mature.

When all the other vegetables started producing in earnest we all forgot the poor old peas, having raided them for a long time and enjoyed the pickings. The plants had remained in situ though, and looked rather untidy and a little weedy too. Clearing them up produced not just quite a lot of edible peas but some which were germinating too!

Those have now been planted in a bed in a tunnel, like sweet peas. This early start might only give peas a week or two earlier than those put outside in late spring but it will be interesting to see how well they do.

While talking of seeds, our eucalyptus have provided masses of them this year, they are now planted in trays, they might even, hopefully, germinate before winter, the Southern beeches (Nothofagus), planted in the same way are looking great and ready for larger pots.

Once again the wet ground and cooler weather has held me up and I have not yet finished in the veg garden, although there is not much left to do there really. I just would like to consider it finished for this year and ready for next one, but still have a couple of rows of potatoes to dig and some clearing up in the other plots. Most of the other potatoes have dried and are put away cosily in their shed.

The ornamental beds are displaying quite a lot of flowers. The new anemone corms are flowering, gorgeous big deep purple blooms when there is sunshine. Here's hoping they reappear for another year.

Indoors the cyclamen are back in their element, enjoying the cooler but bright light in the porch, their corms get bigger and better every year, and they really are lovely in flower.

At least, like all plants indoors, they will soon get my undivided attention as the days become more miserable.

Stanley Running Club

is holding a 5 kilometre race on Sunday 26 May Start Time: 10am

Starting at the Old Beaver Hangar and finishing at the Lighthouse Seamen's Mission. There will be a shorter children's race (approximately 3k) starting from the Town Hall.

Entry fee: Adults £3, children £1. Money raised will go towards sending athletes to the NatWest Island Games.

The race will be run on the open road, so additional marshalling will be provided for the children's course, but parents/carers of young children should accompany their child during the race. There will be prizes - 1st adult male, 1st adult female, and 1st, 2nd &amp; 3rd for the girls and boys.

Races will be held on 9 and 23 June to help our athletes train for the Games: more details to follow.

Fumbles and falls in Sunday Dek Hockey

BLACKHAWK Karl Nightingale slammed in the first goal of the night against Penguins a couple of minutes in to the game on Sunday but Penguin Ricky Leyton was hot on his tail to level the score. Karl pushed Blackhawks into the lead briefly but the score was levelled again by Duane Evans slipping a goal in between Goalie Rodrigo Vasquez's legs. Kyran Evans pressed Penguins into the lead 30 seconds later and the teams stopped with the half-time score in favour of Penguins.

Ricky stretched the lead in the second half but a closely chased Daniel Fowler made a run up the court and closed the gap for Blackhawks. Their defence let them down minutes later when a gaping goal left Kevin Ross with an opportunity to increase Penguins' lead.

Working in tandem Dan and Karl moved the ball back up the court ending in a showy goal, as Karl scored while skidding awkwardly across the floor, unfortunately there are no extra points for drama.

Penguins showed how their team have become a dominate force in the league just thirty seconds later with another goal from Duane, and a few minutes later Kyran slammed in one more from across the hall.

Jordan Philips showed his improvement in the sport and flicked an assist to Dan for the Blackhawks fifth of the night. With two minutes left Blackhawks were two goals down but could not keep the Penguins back. Kyran added another to Penguins' tally and the game looked decided.

There were only 20 seconds left on the clock when Hawk goalie Rodrigo cleared the ball misfortunately in Kyran's direction, who tapped it to the ground and thumped it back giving Rodrigo enough time to watch the ball 'tink' as it skimmed the post

The cats and dogs tore up the court, and each other a little, in the second match of the afternoon.

Panthers' Roy Shepherd was first to score a couple of minutes in, but David Hewitt was fast to retaliate with a goal for Coyotes.

Shortly after Frank O'Sullivan was sent off for tripping Coyote Luis Quinto, Nick Rendell pushed the Coyotes into the lead. Panthers were back to full strength after two minutes and Ian France provided them with an equaliser.

David forced Coyotes ahead again with a series of skillful flicks but Panthers found two opportunities to put them into the lead.

Ian slipped in a goal after a fumble from Coyote goalie Clayton March caused him to drop it in his own goal. Frank found himself scoring in nearly the exact same way just minutes later.

Nick closed the gap but Panthers were on the chase. Roy slammed in two goals before Callum Middleton put the Panthers three goals clear of Coyotes at half-time.

Coyotes were keen to claw themselves back into contention during the second half and the shots were thick in the air. Unfortunately for them David was sent off for two minutes after tripping Panther Gareth Goodwin, but he quickly redeemed himself with two well placed goals.

Callum added an eighth goal for Panthers tally to keep them ahead of the dogs but David secured his second hat-trick of the match and the gap was somehow closed between the teams.

The draw was short-lived as Ian edged the Panthers out again with goal number nine, but team captain Nick was determined the Coyotes comeback was not to be a wasted effort and slammed in his third of the game. Coyotes 9 - Panthers 9.

From KEM Hospital

Due to the up-grading of our electronic medical records system at the beginning of June, we regret to inform the public that we anticipate a reduction of GP services.

We will be unable to book routine appointments for Friday 31st May, Monday 3rd June and Wednesday 5th June.

Only emergency appointments will be available on these days.

This is due to the GPs and support staff having to undergo training for the new system.

This will also impact on the Pharmacy department – therefore anyone who requires repeat prescriptions between the 31st May and 7th June are requested to submit their prescriptions to Pharmacy no later than Friday 24th May - failure to do so may lead to a delay in dispensing your medication.

Pharmacy will be closed to the public between 31st May and 7th June. We will re-open earlier if the transfer of stock data allows.

We apologise for any inconvenience that this may cause and thank you in advance for your cooperation during this disruption.

PUBLIC CONSULTATION YOUR FUTURE - YOUR SAY

The Falkland Islands Government (FIG) is seeking your views on the future development of Stanley, responding in particular to the emerging oil & gas industry and the changing needs of traditional industries.

The consultation is called "Your Future – Your Say" and will be available from Monday 27th May.

The document will be circulated throughout public amenities and will be available to download from our blog at

Best price sought for seized squid

REPORTS suggest Illex is selling at around £995 per tonne for whole Illex, although the Director of Fisheries John Barton says that high catches this year may have an impact on that price. Additionally squid purchased in the Falklands will have the cost of freighting it to market which may also impact on the price offered.

In order to sell the squid in Europe the vessels need to be approved for exporting to the EU, otherwise markets may be limited to the Far East, said Mr Barton, adding that another option might be the bait market, although that has a preference for a particular size of squid.

The law does not allow any forfeited catch to be sold to the previous owner.

Fishing Argentine waters costs nearly £500k in fines and forfeit

A TOTAL of £111,900 was collected in fines and 252 tonnes of squid seized this week as a result of fishing vessels leaving the Falkland Islands zone to catch squid in Argentine waters.

Forfeited squid, amounting to 356 tonnes in the last month could bring additional revenue of some £354,000 to government coffers based on current prices.

One Taiwanese and two Korean companies along with the captains of the three vessels appeared in the Senior Magistrates Court on Tuesday.

The court heard how on separate dates each vessel had contravened fishing licence conditions by leaving Falklands waters without giving the Director of Fisheries the required 72 hours notice and by failing to file a fishend report.

The captain of Taiwanese vessel Jih Shun Ying and the owners, Feng Chou Fishery Company Ltd, entered guilty pleas to a single charge each of failing to file a fishend report and leaving the zone without giving 72 hours notice on April 1, a period when a number of vessels had been recorded on the Vessel Monitoring System (VMS) moving out of the zone at night.

Jih Shun Ying was clocked at 12 nautical miles inside Argentine waters and the Fishery Patrol Vessel Protegat was tasked to locate and observe her.

The Director of Fisheries warned vessels via their local agents that they were fishing close to the western edge of the zone and were in danger of entering another country's waters, were reminded of their licence conditions and that action would be taken.

On April 2, Jih Shun Ying was again seen to be steaming out of Falklands waters and then the AIS (Automatic Identification System which along with the VMS is a licence requirement) was switched off. Crew from Protegat boarded the vessel and consequently escorted her to Stanley.

Feng Chou Fishery Co Ltd was fined £10,000 for failing to give 72 hours notice of leaving Falklands waters and £6,000 for failing to provide a fishend catch and 73 tonnes of catch seized.

The captain was fined £300 and £200 respectively with the £100 prosecution costs to be met by the owners.

The vessel's licence ended on May 15.

Korean vessels

The captains and owners of two vessels, Tong Young 808 owned by Tong Young Industries, and In Sung 707 owned by In Sung Corporation, admitted the same offences on dates from April 14 to 19.

In Sung 707 was recorded fishing in Argentine waters on six nights accumulating 90 tonnes of squid and Tong Young 808 on four nights catching 89 tonnes.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson stressed that in these instances the vessel identification system had not been switched off and that in the companies' many years of fishing in the Falklands there had not been any problems.

In sentencing Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said the regulations were there in order to ensure proper statistics were maintained by the Fisheries Department and if false figures were used it posed a risk to conservation and protection of fisheries which is an essential part of the Falklands economy.

He told the Korean captains they had been trespassing into Argentine territory and effectively stealing from another country only to retreat back into Falklands waters. There was considerable risk of damage to the industry and to the Falklands in general, adding that in both cases the ship's masters had made a deliberate decision to take the risk.

The case was further aggravated because the captains were both experienced but had chosen to ignore the briefings and warnings given at the time of offending, said Mr Gumsley.

The owners of Tong Young 808 were fined a total of £44,000 and the captain £1,500 with the owners ordered to pay £100 prosecution costs. 89 tonnes of squid was seized.

The owners of In Sung 707 were fined a total of £48,000 and the captain £1,900 with 90 tonnes of catch forfeited.

Earlier this month Taiwanese company Zhen Man Fishery Co Ltd and the captain of Hu Sheng 626 had been fined £45,500 and a further 104 tonnes of catch seized.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

WELL if the previous Assembly went out with a flea in their ear for not listening to the electorate I think we can safely say that while there is no way of proving the incumbent lot are actually listening, there has been no shortage of asking our views on a whole variety of subjects.

From road designation to the current consultation on the development of Stanley and a whole lot between, we've ticked boxes, written letters and aired our views on so many issues that now I am left wondering what stage everything has reached.

Watching Who Wants to be a Millionaire the other night I got to thinking our Government could be using a similar system, but possibly haven't quite got their heads around the rules of the game.

Take the road designation consultation last year for example. The question was put to the Assembly and after much umming and ahing they opted to ask the audience. Opinions were dutifully forwarded and one would have thought that after the commercial break a decision would be made, legislation drawn up and enforced.

Not so. It would seem that while the decision to designate roads has been taken and draft legislation is soon to be made public, the Assembly intend to ask the audience again. No, no you can't do that you only have 50/50 and phone a friend left!

There was another consultation on whether hire and reward drivers should undergo some form of vetting which arrived at the conclusion that taxi drivers definitely should, but to my knowledge has never been enforced.

The life lines in the TV show are there to give participants the best possible chance of getting the right answer, just as consultations assist the Assembly in ensuring they are properly representing the electorate. But, there comes a time when once you have selected the preferred action you have to go for it before the very situation you aim to prevent occurs and there is no protection for the victim.

Please don't use that old chestnut about a backlog of legislation causing a delay, it existed when the seat belt, smoking and importation of legal high laws were put in place, but once there was a will, a fast track way was found.

*****

SEEING FIG coffers getting topped up this week as a result of some naughty jiggers, we were left wondering if we should offer Mrs K a small token as a reminder of what could be happening had a fishing agreement been kept in place. Not much you understand, maybe just enough to inject some happiness into a face which has little to smile about at the moment.

Possible October start for Island Parish filming

AN Island Parish may begin filming in the Falkland Islands as early as October this year said the Reverend Dr Richard Hines of Christ Church Cathedral.

Filming in a British Overseas Territory is a different route for the popular BBC2 series that has done eight programmes of six episodes, in islands surrounding the UK including the Isles of Sicily, Outer Hebrides and Sark. Its guiding principle to offer gentle observational viewing, with a heart-warming glimpse into island and church life, has secured over two million viewers a week and the series has become one of the highest rated programmes on the channel.

Reverend Hines relayed that in a teleconference with the Production Manager of Islands Parish, Charlie Bennett, she told him how the BBC is keen, "to show a different perspective on life in the Falklands, which many people just don't get to see." He also understood that they would be interested in doing two series; one in the summer and one in the winter.

Reverend Hines agreed it was a great opportunity for them to capture the warmest side of our community, "during the summer they have remembrance, Christmas carols under Arch Green, the races, the raft race and other community events."

"I quipped on the radio how the series has potential to solve our recruitment problems." Exposing what life is really like in the Falklands might have a positive impact on positions reliant on overseas recruitment.

The production team first contacted FIG Public Relation Manager Darren Christie with the suggestion. He passed them on to the church community, and they are now seeking feedback from the community. They are eager to point out that filming will be done respectfully and only with permission. "I do understand something of the sensitivities in small island communities, and we work very hard to establish strong relationships based primarily on trust and communication. Our crew will rarely (if ever) be more than two in number, and we try to be as unobtrusive as possible," said Production Manager Bennett.

She also added: "We try to spread the word as much as possible amongst the community we film in, and pass our contact details around if we can in order that people can contact us with queries and concerns. If people don't wish to be filmed then this is clearly respected."

They will have final rights when it comes to editing but Reverend Hines was sure the church community would have an opportunity to see what was being put together to comment and check the detail.

The film crew will have a free rein on what stories to pick up on or personalities to follow and they describe their style as 'over the shoulder' filming.

Reverend Hines said, "we have the indication that they won't want to concentrate on the war and politics, instead the focus will be very much on the people."

So far the comments from the public have been really positive. "A lot of them have seen the series and think it's a really good idea," said Jackie Earnshaw, who agreed it would be a great opportunity to show the warm and friendly side of traditional and modern Falklands life to the world.

Reverend Hines felt it would also be a great way to document the community as once the series has concluded it would be archived and accessible for viewing on the internet through iPlayer.

Ms Bennett is very happy for anyone in the community to contact her with any questions.

'82 memories for Goose Green prisoners

PRISONERS in the Goose Green Hall in 1982 Tony Anderson, Stuart 'Tooty' Morrison, Finlay Ferguson and Ian Jaffray (right) enjoy a rather more pleasant get together on the anniversary of the Liberation of Goose Green on May 29 by members of 2nd Battalion Parachute Regiment. A well attended service was held at the Goose Green Para Memorial followed by a social gathering in the club where 115 Islanders were imprisoned by Argentine forces for 29 days in 1982.

C24 has failed to move with the times

At a presentation to the C-24 Seminar in Quito, Ecuador on Wednesday, Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Mike Summers challenged the decolonisation committee saying it had, "failed to reduce the number of listed territories," and asked what they intended to do about it.

The United Nations C24 Committee has traditionally been unsupportive of the Islanders' wish to remain a British Overseas Territory, viewing the Islands as a 'colony', however, MLA Summers made it clear: "Colonialism in all its forms are abhorrent to us all."

As such he asked members: why the list has not changed, asking if the C24 lacked the will to remove countries from the list, "or is it that it does not have the mechanism. The answer I believe is both."

MLA suggested it lacked the will, "because the interests of Member States have been put above the interests and wishes of the NSGT's (Non Self-Governing Territories)."

He said it lacked the mechanism because it had not gone out to the territories to understand the issues and realities, and it was not clear in its thinking about, "the road-map to de-listing."

He pointed out that the list was created over 50 years ago, when the world was a very different place, and that the committee's thinking about those left on the list, "has not evolved with time."

He said a cursory glance at the list would tell anybody that several of the listed territories, "are not ready for independence, and many have found an accommodation with a so called administering power that suits them and that they wish to continue with."

He suggested to the C24 that it, "look at the territories on a case by case basis."

MLA Summers emphasised that the territories were not in the same position as they were 50 years ago. He said they had developed both economically and socially, "we are all better educated, we have, most of us, modern constitutions that reflect the Charter of the UN and basic human rights, and we are many of us largely self-governing. Even the term NSGT's is anachronistic, and shows that the C24 has not moved with the times."

He added: "If a territory has reached an accommodation with another country with which they are satisfied, what place has the C24 to tell them they should not be satisfied? If a people has decided of its own free will that it does not wish to seek independence or integration, who is the C24 to tell them they must? If a territory wishes to be removed from the list of NSGT's free of coercion from others, why should that not be permitted to happen?"

He said there were concerns in the NSGT's that the C24 was not listening to them, and what they wished for their countries.

MLA Summers said the situation required action by all parties involved and solidarity with the NSGT's.

Fishing fines

AMBIGUOUS law relating to the level of fines for breaches of fishing legislation has resulted in the Senior Magistrate ruling that the maximum sentence for failing to provide a fishend report is £10,000.

The anomaly between 1986 and 2005 legislation was brought to Mr Gumsley's attention by Senior Crown Counsel Alison Inglis prior to the first of four cases this month involving squid jiggers failing to file fishend reports before leaving Falklands waters.

Ms Inglis advised that the inconsistency was expected to be rectified in the near future by amending legislation.

Mr Gumsley said: "The importance of clear and accurate drafting cannot be over emphasised. Ambiguity in respect of the law is bad for all and may well lead to the law itself coming into disrepute. It is a much too common occurrence in these Islands as the Court and the practitioners before me can attest to."

Inquest verdict is death as a result of head injuries

HER Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley gave a verdict of death as a result of head injuries on Friday following a two day inquest into the death of Danny Colre on October 20, 2012.

As reported last week, Danny suffered the injuries during a single vehicle accident on Uranie Beach at Long Island Farm following a rover rally from Moody Brook.

Mr Gumsley said he had drawn a number of conclusions, but had concentrated on those he considered relevant as he had conducted the fact finding exercise of the inquest fully, fairly and fearlessly as the law required him to do.

He noted that the issue of safety guidelines for those taking part in the rally had not been considered or addressed by the event's organisers the Stanley Darts Club, and that at the end of the rally several participants had driven up and down the beach in an "erratic and chaotic," manner. When Danny's vehicle had rolled, he had not been wearing a seat belt and had been thrown out.

The Coroner concluded that the cumulative effect of the lack of any instructions, supervision or control at the event and Danny's lack of experience, the poor state of the vehicle, the manner of driving, the fact that Danny was not wearing a seat belt and the affect of alcohol on his driving ability ultimately cost Danny his life.

Mr Gumsley said he had heard evidence that satisfied him actions needed to be taken to ensure another tragedy of this nature did not take place. He said that while he was aware the rally was not a race, he had concerns about the attitude towards the event where Danny had been seen to be drinking and was not advised against it, likewise when his brakes had become ineffective he had not been advised to stop.

That such events were considered traditional and a part of Falklands culture, Mr Gumsley said he accepted, but he urged people to be open to change, adding that he hoped they would not see his suggestion of a review as an attack on the way of life.

"There is nothing wrong in assessing whether lessons can be learned from a tragedy and whether there is action that should be taken that might improve things and lessen the chance of such a tragedy happening again," he said.

It was his duty as Coroner (under rule 39) to write to the Governor to ask if he would consider whether some form of regulation was required for events of this nature, said Mr Gumsley.

He said that, whilst he was conscious that the incident had taken place on private land, he had heard considerable evidence about the poor state of vehicles and would suggest consideration be given to some form of regular vehicle testing being introduced.

He also noted that while it was his right and duty to report such matters he had no power to dictate what, if any, action should be taken, "that was for others."

Mr Gumsley said that it may be that those who support such moves would attract resentment from some quarters of the Falklands community, adding, "But, I can live with that if it saves another life."

"Danny was 20 years of age when he died, a young man at the start of his adult life. Lessons should be learned."

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

FOLLOWING my comments last week about the self-appointed and usually well meaning people who think they have all the answers it was an amusing coincidence that the UKIP leader joined those who think we should have an MP for the Overseas Territories. As said elsewhere we are well supported by a large number of MPs who take issues or ask questions for us. This all party support has been crucial over the years and it would be a pity to dilute it.

***

The public meeting, after a useful presentation by the Head of Policy on the proposed minimum wage, reverted to many of the usual topics. Unfortunately maintenance of some of the memorials has not been settled satisfactorily. I am very clear that if the MOD contractors cannot maintain Blue Beach adequately then we must take it over. The MPA road is also keenly debated. I think it is safe to say that it will be surfaced at some point when resources are available. It is not currently the highest priority we have in a huge list. I guess it is one of those subjects on which many people have a strongly held view but I would not like to see it divert resources from other essentials.

***

This week I have updates from directors on two of the portfolios for which I am second MLA. Minerals and Health and Medical Services, the regular meeting of the Safeguarding Committee, a meeting of a working group looking at the provision of additional school buildings and the normal weekly meetings with the Chief Executive and Governor. Next week we will finalise the budget in Legislative Assembly and Select Committee. Much work has already been done but some decisions have still to be made. Contrary to some commentators assertions we are not awash with uncommitted cash and have to make difficult choices to ensure that services are maintained and that we are properly prepared to manage all the implications of oil production. I would encourage people to participate in the various consultations taking place; responses do get fed in to the process.

Black Listed but sentence deferred

STANLEY man Dominic Robert Watson (20) had sentencing deferred for three months and was given a prohibition order for six months on Monday.

Mr Watson had pleaded guilty to nine charges relating to six separate incidents, namely using threatening behaviour, causing fear of provocation of violence, criminal damage, motoring offences and supplying alcohol to a juvenile in a private place on dates between March 16 - May 15 when he was remanded in custody.

Mr Watson addressing the court said he was aware that all the things he had done were "idiotic" and all had taken place when he had been drinking alcohol. He said he was prepared to go on the Black List (prohibition order) in an effort to keep out of trouble. "I need to start sorting myself out, I'm nearly 21 and I want to change," he said.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said the situation as he saw it was that Mr Watson was a pain: to the police, to the public and to himself and all because he drinks too much.

He noted Mr Watson's "appalling record" up until June 2009 when he had gone quiet for some three years. This was because he was not drinking at that time, said Mr Watson, adding that he had never had a criminal offence without alcohol being involved.

Mr Gumsley said he did not doubt that while Mr Watson was sitting before him he was motivated to change his ways, adding, "there are not many that aren't."

Deferring sentencing he told Mr Watson to, "get off the pop, off your backside and get a job. I'm not worried about you when you are sober, I'm worried about protecting the public from you when you get a few pints on board and turn into a complete lunatic."

Taking evidence on oath to put the prohibition order in action Mr Gumsley reminded Mr Watson that it meant he was not allowed to enter pubs, purchase, or drink alcohol at all for a six month period and that for anyone to supply him with alcohol was an offence for which he would not think twice about jailing people for.

Mr Gumsley advised him to take all the advice and support he could get to make it work, adding that he genuinely hoped in this instance he would be proved wrong and he would not see Mr Watson before August 21, when sentencing would again be considered.

Fisherman's inquest opened and adjourned

AN inquest into the death of an Indonesian crew member from Her Hung 12 was opened and adjourned on Friday, May 24.

Coroner's officer Dave Street told the court that Mr Mukhtadin had been pronounced dead by the Captain and First Officer of the vessel on April 27 following a short illness.

Her Hung 12 arrived in Stanley on April 28 and a post mortem was carried out on May 2.

Her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley said the pathologist Dr Clarke had been satisfied death was from natural causes, although test results were awaited from the UK and therefore he would issue an interim certificate of death so Mr Mukhtadin could be properly buried in Stanley.

'Colonial' says Ecuador President

THE situation over the Falklands was described as, "untenable," and "colonial" by re-elected Ecuadorian President Correa in his inauguration speech last week.

He said the colonial situation must be resolved because the Islands are, "not only Argentine, they are Latinamerica."

The Ecuadorian leader also came out strongly in support of the moral integrity of Argentine president Cristina Kirchner, of her deceased husband Nestor Kirchner and of the late Venezuelan leader Hugo Chavez, much questioned by increasing disclosures of alleged corruption.

New Argentine in Ireland

SILVIA Maria Meregá, an 'expert' in the Falklands dispute and professional diplomat has been accepted as the new Argentine ambassador in Ireland.

She has held important posts at the Organisation of American States in Washington, before the European Union and at the Argentine embassy in the USA.

From 1996 to 2000 Ambassador Meregá was head of the 'Malvinas and South Atlantic Desk' at the Argentine Foreign Ministry.

Since August 2012, she has been Head of the Foreign Service Institute of the Argentine Ministry.

Islands' archers ready for Guernsey

THE Falklands team of seven archers may constitute the furthest flung archery club from Guernsey but they are proud to be representing the Islands at the Guernsey Games, June 17 - 21.

The Guernsey Games was originally organised to hold tournaments in bowls, table tennis and archery, which are not included in the 2013 NatWest Island Games. However, the event is beginning to look like an archery tournament in its own right, with lawn bowls and table tennis events being withdrawn.

Twelve islands are sending a total of 84 archers to compete in a mixture of team and individual events.

Falklands Archery Club members Joanne Lazo, Javier Lazo, Justin McPhee, Stephanie Thain, Mark Lewis, Jason Lewis and Paula Fowmes are keen for a taste of the competition experience and the chance to represent the Islands internationally.

Not a group to waste their time, Falklands archers are taking part in all of the tournaments over the five days of competition. "we're going to have pretty muscular arms by the end of it," said Club Secretary Jo Lazo.

Club President Justin McPhee explained that the event is the first international competition for Falklands archery and certainly its biggest to date. "It's a new sport for the Falklands. We've only been running 18 months so it is the next big step for us as a club."

Channel Island weather may suit the Falklands Club: "We're hoping for calm weather to make it easier for us, but we've always shot in the wind so windy weather may be more challenging for everyone else," said Mr McPhee.

After landing at Brize Norton, the club will ferry to Guernsey where they will be met by Tony Drabble for a few days of pre-competition preparation.

Tony is a former Team GB coach and visited the club in October last year using the Shackleton Scholarship fund to coach the team in preparation for the competition.

Since then the club's training has gone forward in leaps and bounds and has generated interest from UK clubs on the way.

The team featured recently in Archery GB magazine when they held their first international postal competition. The article has born links with other clubs and Falklands archers have been busy making contacts.

The club has been fundraising to help cover the cost of attending the Guernsey Games. "FIOGA very generously donated £5,000 which has been used to cover transport like ferries and taxis, and the accommodation," said Mrs Lazo.

A full list of their event schedule can be found on the sport page (19). During the competition you can follow the team on www.penguin-news.com or add the club on Facebook at Falklands Archery.

Chief Inspector should step down

AFTER being suspended for four months after facing allegations of assault, amongst others, I was eventually cleared of any wrongdoing in court in March this year. During the court case there were many issues which arose concerning the RFIP. One of those was when under oath, Chief Inspector McGill claimed that none of his officers carry police equipment if they are not trained to use it.

Later on during the day a young officer in service said, also under oath, that he carries a police baton and handcuffs but has never been trained to use them in his six months of service. The allegations made against me refer to use of a police baton for which I received the best training possible in the Metropolitan Police College, Hendon.

It appeared to everyone watching the case that the RFIP management were not able to cope with modern police challenges, for which I was recruited and ended up in court for.

From many years experience in London I can tell that in order for the RFIP to catch up to modern times and be more successful the Chief Inspector needs to step down and someone more knowledgeable with a firm hand on police priorities and modern challenges needs to be brought in.

Whether this happens or not is another question but until it does the RFIP will continue to suffer recruitment and morale issues.

I, on the whole, had a good year in the Falklands and will certainly remember my time there. At the moment I am travelling the world and currently travelling north to south of Vietnam.

During a difficult and damaging few months of pain and hurt I was supported by many kind and considerate people in the Falklands and I would like to say thank you to all who helped even if in a small way.

Tom Clarke

In the light of the potentially damaging comments made in the above letter PN offered the RFIP the right of reply the same week

Confidence in police

I AM sure readers will be aware of the vitally important service the RFIP provides to the people of the Falkland Islands. I am sure they will also appreciate that the role of a police officer can be a challenging and demanding task especially in a small community.

The RFIP is not a UK police force but models itself on UK policies and procedures including training. The RFIP aims to ensure that all of its officers both regular and reserve are trained as appropriate to meet the typical demands they are likely to face in the Falkland Islands within the resources that are made available.

Currently the RFIP are hosting members of Devon and Cornwall Police who are delivering the most current probationary training available which is what is being delivered in the UK to new recruits, this also involves operational training.

In relation to police management as Chief of Police I have the utmost confidence in every member of the RFIP and its command team including Chief Inspector McGill who was recently promoted as an illustration of his leadership abilities.

I would like to take this opportunity of thanking the public for their ongoing support to the RFIP in their often difficult task and for their assistance in preserving the low crime culture of the Falkland Islands.

Give us two minutes...

Sheri Willis

- 1. What is your most prized possession? OK so a very soppy choice but my most prized possession is a book in which I keep all of the letters sent to me by my boyfriend when he was on tour in Afghanistan. No matter how bad a day I've had reading those letters always makes me smile. It'd be the first thing I'd grab in a fire
- 2. What is your nickname and why? When I was at school the kids used to call me 'Willy', a highly intelligent play on my surname Willis. I adopted it and later, as I'm the oldest in my family, it was adapted to 'Big Willy'. Got to make the most of these things
- 3. What in your everyday life drives you crazy? Mess. I'm house-proud to the point of insanity
- 4. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Cancun in Mexico. I'd love to go there and see all the Mayan temples and snorkel down the river into Xel-Ha lagoon
- 5. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I am a hide-and seek champion. I once spent eight hours crammed into a tiny space in a hollow tree hiding from my family, though it did accidentally spark a small search and rescue operation
- 6. What is your happiest childhood memory? There was a natural spring in the woods close to my Grandad's house. My happiest childhood memories are times he would take me there and I would play bare-foot in the spring with the water tickling my toes
- 7. What would your 'Mastermind' specialist subject be? European Herpetiles (Reptiles and Amphibians). I have a passion for all things scaly and slimy as I'm a member of the British Herpetological Society and I have two pet snakes, named Legs and Jaffacake

FITV's first ever intern Sheri arrived in the Islands on March 6, just in time to be thrown in at the deep-end reporting on the referendum. She graduated Bournemouth University with a BA in Multimedia Journalism. She is originally from All Cannings, a small rural village in Wiltshire. From a family of seven Sheri has a twin sister and her dream is to become a leading war correspondent. ## Questions and answers from the public meeting

£38.5 million to surface MPA road

At a public meeting some months ago it was suggested it would be helpful to know how much the current state of the MPA Road costs the economy. Nobody disagreed and it was suggested the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) could be tasked to find this out. But, at the meeting on March 18, 2013 MLAs said it would not be appropriate as the PAC can only look back and not forward.

Can MLAs please explain why undertaking an exercise of looking at costs that have been incurred is not regarded as looking back?

How do MLAs come to the view that FIG cannot afford to blacktop the MPA Road when the costs to the economy of not doing it have not been quantified?

What was the estimated cost of the investment in blacktopping the MPA Road when the project was last submitted to Executive Council for inclusion in the Capital Programme but rejected as unaffordable?

What benefits to the economy were identified in the cost-benefit analysis in that submission?

The estimated cost to surface the MPA road, when this was considered in April 2012 was £34,112,000 which was based on an estimated cost of £701,900 per kilometre.

The project cost is very directly affected by the price of bitumen, which rose very sharply during the period when the project was being reviewed and costed – with the price of bitumen increasing from £750 to £1,280 per tonne over that period. This made a cost difference of just over £94,000 per kilometre – this price change adding £4.5 million pounds to the overall cost of the project. The general trend since April last year has been upwards although remaining variable.

The projected capital cost per year, per kilometre, based on the above costs and an assumed life of 20 years was £35,000.

The additional annual recurrent cost for the higher level of salting needed if the road were to be surfaced was £21,660.

The projected overall direct additional capital cost per year to FIG of surfacing compared with not surfacing based on a 30 year usable life was £493,000.

Although the project was costed on the basis of progressive surfacing over a 14 year period, it would have been necessary to commit the full cost of the project which would have either required significant transfer into the equalisation fund, or impacted on the recurrent budget to offset the additional capital expenditure.

Cost benefit analysis within the paper related to capital and operating costs to FIG and in relation to broader economies these obviously link to level of nature of usage of the road, but also to the length of the road relevant to the rest of the network.

The MPA road represents only 6 per cent of the road network and much of the heavier traffic on the MPA road itself relates to the shipment of cargo into Mare Harbour which is then road hauled into Stanley.

At the time the paper was considered the capital equalisation fund was already fully committed in meeting the projected programme and it was clear that the new deep water port was going to be constructed in the Stanley area, which would potentially change the traffic pattern significantly and it therefore appeared prudent not to commit to a project of this magnitude at that stage, particularly when the benefit of doing so was going to reduce when the port was built.

Hospital problems addressed

THE following questions about the hospital were submitted by Carl Evans and were responded to by the Director of Health Services.

A recently purchased new vehicle for patient transport has now been deemed 'not fit for purpose'. How has this come about, and especially when in terms of clinical priority, the existing Ambulance(s) are constantly breaking down, are past their usable service life, and have on at least two occasions recently, not worked when asked to respond to 999 calls, possibly risking lives in the process?

The small fleet of vehicles at KEMH is available to cover a number of different uses and this is kept under review. There have been some issues around the use of particular vehicles for transporting patients and changes made to these arrangements to ensure the most appropriate vehicles are always used. All vehicles are regularly maintained but as with any piece of equipment or vehicle, breakdowns do occur. Although it gets little use, the second ambulance is available as back up.

Why is it that the main Hospital telephone switchboard is not manned at lunchtime? This seems entirely unacceptable, a constant 'engaged' tone can usually be heard (not even a courtesy answer machine message stating that the caller should ring back later). For clinical safety purposes, and a professional image (both local and International callers) deficit that this system allows, some resolve is needed to such a basic yet fundamental issue.

Arrangements for KEMH lunchtime cover are being reviewed by the recently appointed Interim Director of Health and Social Services, with a view to a more appropriate arrangement being instituted. These will be in place shortly.

How are MLAs addressing the recruitment and retention crisis of clinical staff at the Hospital? There are outstanding long term deficits such as a lack of Health Visitor, Occupational Health Service, and Speech and Language Therapist. Trained Nurse and Midwife together with GP vacancies are being filled by expensive agency/locum personnel at excessive cost to the Falkland Islands taxpayer. This issue needs addressing urgently!

There are recruitment and retention issues at the Hospital, but there is no single cause – rather, a range of factors that have created the present situation.

These include salaries that are not competitive with those in the UK, generalist posts that have limited appeal in an ever increasingly specialist health world and delays in the appointments process for some posts.

The Interim Director of Health and Social Services has already made progress in some key areas and is, in consultation with colleagues, beginning to vigorously tackle these issues by reviewing the content of some posts to make them more attractive, examine the potential for more flexible staffing arrangements and identify how the appointments processes can be more efficient.

How long has that buoy been bobbing around?

GERALD Cheek asked when the wave/swell measuring buoy had been installed in Port William, what has been its total cost to date and most importantly how many days since its installation had it remained operational?

Director of Central Services Simon Fletcher provided the following response.

The swell measuring buoy was deployed in Port William in early December 2012. When retrieved in early February 2013 it was found the buoy was damaged and unfortunately no discernible data was able to be recovered.

The electronic element was sent back to the UK for repairs/replacement under warranty and we expect to receive the buoy back in the Islands and for it to be operational by July 2013. The total cost to date is £34,294. It is anticipated that the additional operational costs once redeployed will be roughly £10,000.

Exploring the Grand Old Lady

PHD student James Muirhead needs your help in exploring the life of the SS Great Britain.

As part of a Collaborative Award Doctoral Scholarship, James is researching the vessel, "after she ceased to be a seafaring vessel," and he will visit from July 5 until August 3.

As well as engaging in archival research relating to the history of the Great Britain, during the trip he also aims to form a collection of memories of individuals who remember the ship before 1970 when she was beached in Sparrow Cove.

James said a significant portion of the SS Great Britain's life was spent in the Falkland Islands, "and this project aims to record the layers of history and memory associated with the vessel whilst she was here."

"In addition to providing an enormous contribution to an underexplored aspect of the ship's life, the project also has potential to contribute to the interpretative work at the SS Great Britain museum in Bristol."

SS Great Britain

The project is supported by the University of Bristol and the SS Great Britain Trust.

James commented: "I would like to talk to anyone who remembers the SS Great Britain in Sparrow Cove or who recalls the ship leaving the Falkland Islands in 1970. If you have recollections of the SS Great Britain whilst she was in the Falkland Islands or know others that do please get in touch. If you have any stories to tell that relate to the SS Great Britain and you would like the opportunity to tell them please contact me via email on jm8648@bris.ac.uk"

The ship

The former passenger steamship was the longest in the world between 1845 and 1854. She was designed by Isambard Kingdom Brunel for the Great Western Steamship Company's transatlantic service between Bristol and New York. While other ships had been built of iron or equipped with a screw propeller, SS Great Britain was the first to combine these features in a large ocean-going ship. She was the first iron steamer to cross the Atlantic, which she did in 1845, in the time of 14 days.

After her owners were forced out of business she was sold for salvage and repaired, she carried thousands of immigrants to Australia until converted to sail in 1881. Three years later, she was retired to the Falkland Islands where she was used as a warehouse, quarantine ship and coal hulk until scuttled in 1937.

In 1970, she was returned to the Bristol dry dock where she was built. Now listed as part of the National Historic Fleet, Core Collection, she is an award-winning visitor attraction in Bristol Harbour, with 150,000 -170,000 visitors annually.

In search of seaweed by Alexandra Mystikou

A TEAM of seaweed biodiversity researchers arrived in the Falklands in January 2013, their starting point a snow-covered Aberdeen in north-east Scotland. Their research trip lasted for almost two months, from January 24, until March 15. Alexandra Mystikou takes up the story:

Our team consisted of four researchers, Professor Frithjof Kuepper and Professor Pieter van West from the University of Aberdeen, Dr Aldo Asensi from the National Museum of Natural History in Paris and myself Alexandra Mystikou, a joint PhD student between the University of Aberdeen and the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute.

The seaweed biodiversity around the Falklands remains only partially explored. Since the pioneering work of Skottsberg in the early 20th century, few phycologists have visited the Islands. More specifically, there are significant gaps in the understanding of the Falklands' deep-water brown algal flora - mainly due to the reason that none of the earlier explorers had dived here. The purpose of this expedition was to sample live isolates of macroalgae (seaweeds) and their pathogens around the Falkland Islands. Oomycete pathogens affecting algae and fish were collected as well.

Moreover, the main aims of this expedition include the study of the molecular biology, ecology and physiology of macroalgae of this Subantarctic region.

During the expedition samples

of seaweeds for molecular identification, herbarium specimens and cultures of live isolates were collected.

Over the two months of our expedition, we collected 300 samples from 16 different sites around the Falkland Islands. Four sites at Sea Lion Island, nine sites on East Falklands including North Arm, San Carlos (Blue Beach), Rincon Grande, Port Louis, Mt Kent Farm, Port William and Fitzroy; and Port Philomel, Fox Bay East and Fox Bay West on West Falklands have been sampled.

The expedition exceeded our expectations as two likely new species of brown epiphytes on the two kelp genus that occur at the Falkland Islands (Macrocystis and Lessonia) were discovered. Furthermore, three new records of species that potentially have not been recorded before were made.

Another significant finding was the rediscovery of Cladocnion chnoosporiformis in Port Philomel, West Falklands, which had not been seen across the world for a hundred years. Scientists were not sure about its current existence as it has been recorded for the first and last time only by Skottsberg in 1921.

Locals have noticed the presence of the 'red sand' on various beaches around the Falkland Islands. After microscopic observations we hypothesize that this might be due to a mass proliferation of a unicellular red alga (of the group Porphyridiophyceae).

Members of this group usually occur in tropical and subtropical areas; if our hypothesis was right, this would constitute something quite novel for the Subantarctic region.

We were amazed by the seaweed biodiversity at North Arm in Lafonia, where we found 63 species. This is twice the number of individual species found in any other sampling area.

Our base was the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI) in Stanley that generously provided us their hospitable offices and facilities for processing our seaweed samples and specimens. Their help is much appreciated.

We specially acknowledge Dr Paul Brickie, the director of SAERI, and his team members Dr Deborah Davidson and Rachael Crowie who did everything they could to welcome us and to make our stay there pleasant and productive.

We would also like to thank the dive team that supported a part of our sampling. Frithjof Kuepper dived with Sarah Lee, Simon Browning, Dr Paul Brewin and Steve Cartwright who generously provided his boat for sampling by scuba diving. Finally, we also appreciate the help of Dr. Vladimir Laptikhovsky for assisting the diving.

Special thanks go to Kay McCallum for her hospitality, the excellent catering and her great sense of humour.

Nothing would have happened without the financial support from the Government of the Falkland Islands and the University of Aberdeen. We would like to thank both for their kind contribution to our study.

Alexandra is a PhD student, jointly funded and based at both the University of Aberdeen and the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute. Originally from Thessaloniki, Greece, she obtained her undergraduate degree from the University of the Aegean in Mytilene (Greece) and her MSc from the University of Aberdeen in Scotland (UK).

1435 Flight run to the aid of Liberty Lodge

Runners at the Liberation Monument

AN intrepid team from 1435 Flt raised £1,435 for Liberty Lodge in Stanley as a result of a run from Mount Pleasant to Stanley on May 18.

Organiser Colin 'Doc' Martin told Penguin News "When we were doing the run we were overwhelmed by the generosity from people passing and on the day itself we raised nearly £400. We initially were looking to raise £500 but had no idea what the final figure was going to be.

"We had lots of donations from back home with one donation of £250 coming from a runner's mother, Christine Howard, who had collected the cash from donations from her work place."

The group included 12 runners and three support drivers.

Liberty Lodge provides accommodation for 1982 war veterans visiting the Falkland Islands.

Thanks from May Ball organisers

ON behalf of the Falkland Islands Beavers, Cubs, Scouts, Leaders and committee, we would like to say a big thank you to everyone who came along and supported the May Ball last weekend.

We would especially like to thank Derek, Marlene, Lisa and Lee for arranging the dance lessons, to Myriam for the lively music, Derek and Nigel for the loan of music equipment and to Jason for setting up the music and lighting.

Huge thanks to Stevie Burston for help with decorating the hall and to Decor Services, NCB Solutions, Globe Tavern, and FIC for their help and to Richard Fogarty and his crew for providing the bar.

We would also like to thank Cable & Wireless for their help in sponsoring us and printing the programmes and posters and Nikki Buxton for creating such a lovely sash for the May Queen and to the Beavers and Cubs who made the decorations, the parents for all of the baking for the refreshments table and the Scouts who did a great job serving

There was a change to the second night this year; a family dance was run for 11 year-olds and above.

This proved really successful, everyone who came said how much they had enjoyed it. Robert Rowlands did a fantastic job with the music and kept everyone on the dance floor, it was great to see the young ones joining in with the traditional dances.

We would like to thank our May Queen - Michaela Clifford (who looked stunning in her ball dress, crown and sash) and Prince Charming, Wade Ford for drawing out all of the winning tickets in the raffle.

Winner Bill Chater

ISLANDER Bill Chater picked up the Stanley Running Club 5 Kilometre title at a race held in frosty weather in Stanley on Sunday. Bill who will compete for the Falklands in the Nat West Island Games in Bermuda later this year completed the run in 18.17 minutes. Just behind the winner was Anton Wolfaardt in a time of 18.29. Carl Thompson, Mark Bournier and Claudio Ross also put in good times.

The race was divided into two categories with adults running 5 km from the Beaver Hangar to the Seamans Mission, while the youths started out from the Town Hall and ran 3k to the same finishing point.

Becky Frostick, winner of this year's Stanley Running Club Half Marathon took the women's title in a time of 21.52. Other ladies included KEMH physiotherapist Nats Hill (22.30) and International Tours and Travel Manager Awards at the Seamans Mission Sally Ellis (26.15).

The four youngsters competing wowed watchers with their excellent times. First boy was Dean Ellis in 14.50 followed by Albie Evans (15.15) and Hamish McKee (15.15) while little Flora McKee finished the race in 18.55.

Weather permitting further races are planned for June 9 and 23; keep an eye on the Penguin News for an update.

THE Falklands 1st Scout Group's biggest fundraising event of the year, the May Ball, was held on Friday evening.

May Queen 2013 Michaela Clifford and Prince Charming 2013 Wade Ford scooped the top prizes of the night, alongside May Princess Tiegan Curtis and runner-up Prince Charming Kieran Roberts. The young ladies were resplendent; Michaela in layered turquoise green satin, chiffon and sequins, and Tiegan in pale pink chiffon and sparkles.

There were nine entrants for Prince Charming with the handsome winners chosen by popular vote. May Queen and May Princess were chosen from six stunning entrants by three judges new to the Falklands: Michelle Chiverton, Isabel Simon and Phil Cooper.

All the champions of the night received prizes presented by Acting Governor Sandra Hayward and the ladies received beautiful bouquets and tiaras to further adorn their fine dresses.

May Queen Michaela wore her sash with pride but it took a while for the shock of winning to sink in.

The entrants, though not as many as previous years, whirled around the patriotically themed Town Hall smiling enthusiastically. Old favourites like the Circassian circle and St Bernard's Waltz proved they still know how to get the Falklands crowd out of their seats.

The evening takes a lot of planning each year and there were plenty of people to thank, not least Derek, Marlene, Lisa and Lee who helped generations of youngsters get in step for the occasion with months of dance lessons.

Classic May Ball music on the night was provided by Myriam Booth and Robert Rowlands took to the decks after the winners were announced.

The licensed bar in the refreshment room was brimming with customers, and finger food made by the parents of the Scout Group was served in the main hall by a gang of merry young scouts.

The second night proved popular. The Saturday event was a bring your own and doors were open for accompanied children as young as eleven to attend.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Don't miss your last chance to see the Falklands 30 Exhibition

The Museum's special exhibition marking the 30th anniversary of the Falklands war will end in less than three weeks.

Final weekend: June 15th and 16th.

This powerful and moving exhibition focuses on Islanders' experiences during the Argentine occupation, as well as explaining the military campaign itself, and is not to be missed.

Open in St. Mary's Church Hall on Wednesday evenings 6.00 – 8.00pm, and Weekends from 2.00 – 4.00pm.

Outside hours visits by arrangement: telephone 27428 or e-mail falklands.museum@horizon.co.fk
Admission £3.00

With continued thanks to Fortuna Ltd. for their support

In April 2013 Executive Council approved the following changes to FIGAS Flight Policy beginning 01 July 2013.

- Up to two early morning flights with a fixed departure time of 08:30 covering flights to all destinations
- Up to two flights following on with variable departure times at or earlier than 12:00 mid-day, subject to customer demands and covering flights to all destinations
- One afternoon flight to follow on with a variable departure time, subject to customer demand and will cover flights to all destinations
- Additionally, during the summer season only, there will be, subject to demand a late afternoon follow on flight
- The revised summer season flight programme begins on 01 September and ends 30 April each year (eight months). This is a seven day week operation
- During the summer season, flights will operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday regardless of load limit. Remaining days will be subject to normal planning to ensure economical loads
- FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, especially where a return flight is jeopardised by the cancellation of fellow passengers which, under normal circumstances, renders the flight uneconomical to operate.
- Capped Resident Fares and Capped Resident Fares (Outer Islands) to remain at 2012/2013 levels but all other rates and tariffs increase by 10%
- Capped residents baggage will stay the same at the same 14kgs per person and standard fares will also stay the same at 20kgs per person, anything over this will be charged at £1.40 per kilo as of the 1st July 2013.
- Concessionary freight rates are to be removed from existing beneficiaries and will be offered only to the outer islands.

Further information can be obtained from the FIGAS General Manager, Morgan Goss either on 27220 or mgoss@figas.gov.fk

Controversial hockey

A PENALTY was conceded to Flyers two minutes in to the first match on Tuesday when Hurricanes' Goalie Stuey Duncan was caught outside of his area. Gordon Lennie took the shot but Stuey blocked well.

The match began uneventfully with lots of interrupted passes and over-shot assists. Hurricanes looked like they were playing with a new team, fronting two new pool players in their line-up. Frank Chiverton and Marco Leyton.

Antoine Daille head-butted in the first goal, which was disallowed initially, but was later decided to be legal after consulting the rule book. Flyers' Goalie Ever Perella was quickly becoming the 'ever pelted' by Hurricane attacker Grant Budd who eventually managed to whack one in from across the hall.

The legendary Lennie came back for Flyers with a double-tapped score, after his first attempt on goal was rebuffed by the rail. Grant scored again two minutes later to be followed by another from Gordon another two minutes on. Martyn Barlow scored next for Flyers and Toby Poole stretched their lead further scooping a goal between Stuey's legs. Grant pulled one back for Hurricanes before half time but they were still trailing by two goals.

Hurricanes were on the attack in the second half, scoring three goals in as many minutes thanks to Grant and 'Boy' Miranda. Fourteen year-old Marco Leyton was impressive throughout the game but it finally paid off when he secured a tricky goal; and became the youngest player ever to score on his debut.

Flyer Antoine struck back by sliding a goal past Stuey, and Gordon found another moments later. Keen to have the lead back Antoine secured his hat-trick for the evening and Gordon followed suit with two minutes to play on the clock. Flyers 9 - Hurricanes 7.

The second game of the evening between Blackhawks and Coyotes was cut short by four minutes as a result of poor time management before the game.

Blackhawks Dan Fowler scored a hat-trick and Jordan Phillips scored their forth goal.

Top scorer in the league so far, David Hewitt scored twice for Coyotes before the game was unexpectedly stopped.

Exciting year ahead

'EXCITING' is how the Financial Secretary Nicola Granger described this financial year in her budget speech yesterday. She added that the Budget Select Committee had taken advantage "of the additional revenues in recent years to continue investing in the economy and to freeze a number of Government fees and charges."

She stated that the proposed appropriation was £60,930,500. The operating deficit excluding oil, £3.8M and including oil revenues and expenditure is £6.8M.

Referring to specific areas of spending within the departmental spend of £43.7M she said the largest share of funding went to PWD (£9M) £8M to Health and Social Services, £6M for Natural Resources and £5.7M for Education. The remaining £15M is split between the other FIG directorates.

New approvals in the year include provisional funding for a service level agreement with an NHS hospital to improve Health services. There will also be increased funding for higher and further education due to increased numbers of students studying overseas. Miss Granger added that provisional funding for a revised structure for Members Remuneration Public Consultation, was still underway and a final structure is due to be approved prior to the election.

There will be increased funding for the AG's Chambers to pursue a variety of projects, and the creation of 21 new or extended Government posts.

Transfer payments this year total £7.2M, including £3.5M for economic development, which will be distributed as follows:

- £1.8M to support the ferry between East and West Falkland;
- £1.2M to fund FIDC and economic development loans;
- £1M in support of shipping links.

- £870,000 for FITB;
- £312,000 for the Rural Development Strategy;
- £247,000 to support agricultural development programmes including a new cattle genetics programme;
- £180,000 each for FIMCo and FIRS;

New gold standard head

MARTIN Winward has been appointed as Headmaster at the Falkland Islands Community School.

Mr Winward is currently Deputy Headmaster at Bradon Forest School in Wiltshire, a school of nearly 1,000 students. Tom Hill, Acting Director of Education described the recruitment as, "one of the most successful recruitments undertaken by the Education Department for some time."

- £146,000 for the Museum and National Trust.

- Just under £100,000 for Falklands Conservation;

- Funding to mark the 100th anniversary of the Battle of the Falklands;

- The remaining funding is provided to finance a number of schemes and projects.

The budget also includes funding to encourage the development of the Oil sector.

Miss Granger said over the next five years a surplus (including oil revenues and expenditures) is projected of £2M.

This is based on a number of high level assumptions regarding Illex, investment returns and the timing of oil exploration and drilling. She noted this situation could change, but would be monitored.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

I COULDN'T help but smirk in agreement with MLA Elsby's Honourable colleague that the former appeared to be dropping in a degree of electioneering, at the opening of the Budget Session on Tuesday, in introducing his debate on how best to consult the public on future developments.

Not of course that I disapprove of the promotion of discussion in the House. In fact the resulting exchange of thoughts was interesting and it was reassuring to note the variety of points of view amongst the Assembly, when more often we are simply informed of a final decision with no inkling of which member thought what.

So electioneering? Perhaps, but I suppose there's nothing wrong with being nice to the voters. In fact it's probably preferable to being treated as though their words were in danger of exploding like bad smell bubbles under the noses of the listeners; an occasional breach of etiquette rather naughtily committed by MLAs Cheek and Halford at public meetings. Ironic really bearing in mind the latter has the portfolio for Public Diplomacy.

That said, the budget itself appeared to be largely about decorum and sensibility and all of the other social graces more usually found in c1800 novels about a woman in a bonnet and pelisse, clutching a small leather bound bible.

Along with plenty of sympathetic nods to the less well off (rent and service charge rebate allowances, and thresholds increasing, plus an MST allowance), the masses were rewarded with an increase in the tax threshold, and government employees a pay hike (probably not before time bearing in mind the speed at which they seem to be defecting to the private sector.)

Welfare allowances up, pensions up, fostering allowances up. What next? A gingham covered basket of preserves delivered to the door of single mothers on Christmas Day?

In fact the only unseemly dent in an overall air of propriety and savoir-faire that I could spot was: "Likewise the charge for funerals is proposed to increase by 15% and for septic tank cleaning to £130."

First of all I'm not entirely sure the two should be lumped together, and secondly, bearing in mind the dearth of deaths in a small population, I'm not convinced that punishing the grieving is really worthy of the resulting revenue measure.

Miss Austen would certainly not approve and Mr Dickens would be positively apoplectic.

Contract signed for new FM radio in camp

THE Falkland Islands Government and KTV Ltd this week signed a contract for a new FM radio network to enable the broadcasting of three radio channels throughout the Islands.

Implementation of the new FM network will be split into three phases, with Phase 1 comprising the procurement of materials and installation of two transmitter sites on West Falklands.

Phase 2 will be the installation of transmitters in Stanley with UHF telemetry and control equipment on remote sites and at the FIRS studio, and finally, Phase 3 will include the installation of the remainder of transmitters to fill gaps in coverage on East and West Falklands.

Director of Central Services, Simon Fletcher explained that it was the whole network would be complete by June 1, 2014, but it is anticipated that some areas might go live prior to that, depending on the final channels selected for broadcast. Mr Fletcher told Penguin News: "The Falkland Islands Government is very pleased to be able to award this contract to a local company, we look forward to working with KTV Ltd on the project."

A public consultation exercise will be carried out shortly to assess the most popular channels listeners would like to have made available to them.

MLA Elsby rouses debate at budget opening session

IN an attempt to generate more debate in Legislative Assembly, MLA Barry Elsby raised the issue of how well informed the public were on what will take place as the Islands gear up for the possible extraction of hydrocarbons.

He said constituents had expressed concern to him that major decisions were being made by MLAs behind closed doors with little input from the public.

We all know change is coming, but it is how to manage it without changing the fabric of our society, he said.

MLA Elsby referred to the Regeneris socio-economic report prepared for government which detailed what changes were likely as result of oil exploitation.

If oil remained at $100 per barrel Regeneris had predicted revenue of £150 million by 2018 with an estimated £4.5 billion from the field in its lifetime along with an estimated population increase of 475 to fill jobs around the peak development period of 2015 dwindling away to around 175 full time jobs.

Referring to the many issues a long term increase in the population would bring MLA Elsby questioned how the public should best be consulted, adding that he had concerns the current methods were not reaching the younger community.

The final Regeneris report would be available soon and was an ideal tool for elected members to engage with the public and discuss the matters which will affect the future.

But how this could be best implemented in view of the relatively low responses received to recent consultations was worthy of consideration by MLAs he said.

MLA Gavin Short

MLA Gavin Short said he doubted half the population had been reached in recent consultations and this was a particular worry for him with an immigration consultation pending. On line was the way to go to reach a certain percentage was MLA Short's view. Summing up he said there were problems ahead, but they were "good problems" because it meant the country was going somewhere.

MLA Dick Sawle

We do try to consult as best we can with people, said MLA Dick Sawle, adding, "but if people don't wish to be consulted you can not force them to answer questions."

He agreed that electronic consultation would increase the returns, however some people had indicated they were over consulted and a fine line had to be found between leading and consulting,

MLA Barry Elsby

MLA Mike Summers

MLA Summers responded: "What is the fabric of society? What do you think it is that you are trying to preserve?"

He suggested that some kind of sociological study should be carried out, adding, "because I don't think we even know what it is we are trying to preserve."

MLA Summers referred to the fishing industry being set up in the 1980s and the fact that nobody had really known what to expect in the long term. "What we did was put in something which generated 10 times the annual income and then reacted to it and adapted it." The fabric of society was different then to it is now, so what is it we are trying to capture, he asked.

He said he had no answer to the debate but he was glad MLA Elsby had opened up the subject and discussion could take place. "But we have to be quite circumspect about what we think it is we are trying to preserve and more visionary about what it is we are trying to create and it is not just

Speaker of the House Keith Biles

"This house believes that when the final version of the socio economic report by Regeneris is published it will represent a basis for the public to clearly express their views as to how they wish to see the Falkland Islands develop following the discovery and planned exploitation of oil."

about how big Stanley is going to be," he concluded.

MLA Jan Cheek

MLA Jan Cheek said she too had wrestled with how to get the views of the silent majority, adding, "But we do get them silently in the privacy of the ballot box every four years." She said each of the MLAs listened to a different group of people and there was a need to be receptive to views and recognise that many have no wish to speak at a public meeting or stick their head above the parapet.

MLA Cheek said she was not against consultation but not everything could be decided by public referendum. "that's not the way this form of democratic government runs."

MLA Ian Hansen

Referring to MLA Elsby's opening of the debate MLA Ian Hansen said he had not been sure if he was being invited to take part in a debate or was listening to an election speech.

He said the difference with the subject of where the Islands would be in 20 or 50 years time to other consultations was that there was less control over it. "At the end of the day until that oil starts coming out of the ocean, is exploited and the money is in our coffers, it doesn't mean anything." He agreed there should be a consultation regarding opportunities ahead if it happened, "but I believe that when people know more of what is happening in the oil industry and it's more positive, then we will see more interest and people coming forward to talk to us. When there is something concrete to build on."

MLA Roger Edwards

"Consultation is good, listening is better," declared MLA Roger Edwards. "Consultation is necessary but leadership is key and that is where we as MLAs should be leading the way," he said.

MLA Sharon Halford

MLA Sharon Halford flagged up that consultation was needed beyond Stanley if the view of the Falklands was to be gained.

MLA Elsby said many important points had been made and it would give people something to think about.

He said there was a danger of over consulting and subjects needed to be chosen carefully to make it easy for people to respond and that will need to be online.

He encouraged the electorate to get involved, talk to MLAs and respond to consultations

HE addresses the nation

HIS Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood spoke of the challenges of the last year and the aims and aspirations for the future in his address to the nation on Tuesday at the opening of the budget session of Legislative Assembly.

He said successful drilling campaigns over the last three years had proved that oil companies can work with remote re-supply, adding that South American politics had not restricted their activities in the Islands.

Governor Haywood expressed gratitude for the unequivocal support from the UK Government for the right of the Falkland Islands Government to license offshore exploration.

"Serious multinational oil industry players from the UK, Europe and the US have interests in the Falkland Islands, which are judged to be a good place to do business. Unfortunately, Argentine pressures are mainly affecting business opportunities for South American companies who are unable to take advantage of the new logistical opportunities that a successful oil industry will provide," he said.

The Government was working with the private sector to define policies that would encourage and maximise opportunities for local businesses to work with the oil industry, he said, adding that the future of the Islands was by no means dependent on oil. There was continued optimism in the farming industry and an ambitious new Action Plan had been agreed to implement the Rural Development Strategy while tourism which would still be here after oil was gone continued to be an increasingly important part of the economy, said Governor Haywood.

"In contrast to many other parts of the world, the Falkland Islands economy is booming and another significant Government surplus was evident last year. This was partly due to additional Government revenues from the hydrocarbons industry but it was also the result of an excellent year for the fishing industry. Illex squid catches were again high and the current season also looks promising. Whilst the Islands are not immune to the problems of the world economy, the Government has substantial reserves that are invested wisely and prudently," said Governor Haywood.

Youth banned

A TRIAL was held on Thursday afternoon (May 30) after a youth (16) denied a charge of reckless driving when he appeared in court on Monday.

The youth was found guilty after two witnesses verified that they had seen him driving the wrong way along a one way street, narrowly missing a taxi.

He was given a 12 month discharge, banned from driving for 12 months and ordered to pay £300 court costs.

Prohibition order

GRAHAM John Hemming was placed on a prohibition order for 12 months in the Senior Magistrates Court on Thursday (June 6).

Mr Hemming appeared in court as a result of a breach of probation which had been put in place following a drink driving offence.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said although it had been reported that Mr Hemming had attended probation in a drunk state he did not intend to take action on that. However in view of Mr Hemming's health he said he would be doing a disservice to him not to put him on the Black List and warned of the consequences which include prison for anyone supplying alcohol to him.

Police efforts recognised

Members of the RFIP, Social Services, JSPSU, Attorney General's Chambers at Government House

THE efforts of the Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP) were recognised at an awards ceremony hosted by H E The Governor Nigel Haywood at Government House on Tuesday evening. Chief of Police Barry Marsden also used the opportunity to present awards and thank members of the public and other departments, "who have assisted them to achieve their work," including the JSPSU, the Attorney General's Chambers, the Social Services Team, RFIP staff, Reserve Police Officers, those who have assisted in coronial cases, and the Devon and Cornwall Police.

The first presentation and described as the most important was the Colonial Police Forces Long Service and Good Conduct Medal which was presented to Reserve Sergeant Dave Roberts. Reserve Sergeant Roberts joined the police in July 1994. Via other promotions he became Sergeant in 2003 and left the police in 2010 but remained as an active Reserve Sergeant. Awards were also given for exceptional work in the highest traditions of the RFIP. The youngest person to receive an award was PC Alex Pearce (23) for recognition of his hard work on the Initial Police Learning & Development Programme held in mid 2012 and for being appointed best student on the course.

In April 2013 Executive Council approved the following changes to FIGAS Flight Policy beginning 01 July 2013.

- Up to two early morning flights with a fixed departure time of 08:30 covering flights to all destinations
- Up to two flights following on with variable departure times at or earlier than 12:00 mid-day, subject to customer demands and covering flights to all destinations
- One afternoon flight to follow on with a variable departure time, subject to customer demand and will cover flights to all destinations
- Additionally, during the summer season only, there will be, subject to demand a late afternoon follow on flight
- The revised summer season flight programme begins on 01 September and ends 30 April each year (eight months). This is a seven day week operation
- During the summer season, flights will operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday regardless of load limit. Remaining days will be subject to normal planning to ensure economical loads
- FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, especially where a return flight is jeopardised by the cancellation of fellow passengers which, under normal circumstances, renders the flight uneconomical to operate.
- Capped Resident Fares and Capped Resident Fares (Outer Islands) to remain at 2012/2013 levels but all other rates and tariffs increase by 10%
- Capped residents baggage will stay the same at the same 14kgs per person and standard fares will also stay the same at 20kgs per person, anything over this will be charged at £1.40 per kilo as of the 1st July 2013.
- Concessionary freight rates are to be removed from existing beneficiaries and will be offered only to the outer islands.

Memorial maintenance help sought

A LADY determined that the Falkland Islands Government should take over care of war memorials, is seeking someone who might be interested in undertaking the work at Blue Beach cemetery.

Marilyn Grimmer told Penguin News, "I have been informed by a reliable source, that there is funding for anyone who will take on the maintenance of Blue Beach Memorial.

"You may have heard me at the public meeting trying to get our Government to take on the responsibilities of the main memorials, 2 Para at Darwin, Lt. Col H Jones VC and all of the Fitzroy Memorials. It appears that I may have been successful with those ones but a question mark lies over the Blue Beach Memorial."

She said: "As far as I can ascertain, the military still have this one but I am sure that they would be happy to pass it on to someone locally."

Mrs Grimmer added: "As it is, the people who are employed by the MoD one way or another, try to 'tidy' it. They have successfully dug up all the plants that have been planted by various veterans and others. On my last visit, Nannette Morrison and myself pushed in and covered a great deal of bulbs that were dug up and left to frost. Initially there may be a bit of work to do but after that it will be easier to maintain."

If health allowed her to do it, Mrs Grimmer would do it herself but, "I think it would be an ideal job for someone retired but capable, but this is not a necessary criteria."

If you are interested please contact Mrs Grimmer on 31017 or email her at keilyn@horizon.co.uk and she will forward your details to the relevant person.

She said: "These people died for the Falkland Islands. I strongly feel that we should at least maintain the memorials erected in their memory. Please help if you can."

Fitzroy service

THERE will be a short memorial service on Saturday June 8 at Fitzroy to commemorate the Welsh Guards, RFA Crew members, and Army Medical Corps personnel and others who lost their lives at Fitzroy in 1982.

The three part service will start at the Welsh Guards Memorial at 11am led by Reverend Richard Hines, the second part at the RFA Memorial and the final part at the 3 Brigade Memorial at Fitzroy. If there is a wreath layer from the Army Medical Centre, then the RAMC Memorial is also included. Afterwards all are welcome at the Fitzroy Community Hall.

Eisteddfod Youth gold for Matthew's craft

MATTHEW Freer has been awarded a gold medal in the design and craft section at the recent National Youth Eisteddfod 2013, held annually in Wales.

Matthew, son of Paul and Pam Freer of Stanley, faced stiff competition with a high standard of entries from all over Wales, and was initially very pleased to have won first prize at the regional event, held in April this year, for his wooden stool with a woven bark seat.

The winners of the regional events were then entered into the national event held in the last week of May.

Matthew is about to complete his third year of overseas study with the Ruskin Mill Education Trust, having spent his first year at Horsley Mill, near Stroud, before moving to the Pembrokeshire village of Mynachlog ddu to continue his studies at Plas Dwbl.

While at Plas Dwbl, Matthew

has particularly enjoyed working in the forge to make both decorative and practical items, and also developing his wood-working skills.

He said he has also enjoyed working on the college farm and a work placement in a nearby sawmill with the National Parks department.

Matthew will return to the Islands in August, and hopes to pursue a career with his newly developed skills.

The National Youth Eisteddfod or 'Eisteddfod Yr Urdd', organised by Urdd Gobaith Cymru, involves Welsh youth aged 7 to 24 in a week of competition that also includes singing, recitation, dancing, acting and musicianship during the summer half-term school holiday.

The event is claimed to be Europe's premier youth arts festival.

Regional heats are held in advance and, as with the National Eisteddfod, the Urdd Eisteddfod is held in a different location each year.

PUBLIC NOTICE

ANNIVERSARY OF LIBERATION DAY 2013

To mark the anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands from Argentinean occupation in 1982, the following programme has been arranged for Friday 14 June 2013.

A Thanksgiving Service will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 9.45am. His Excellency the Governor, Members of the Legislative Assembly together with the Chief of Staff will attend the service. The marching troops will consist of the Royal Navy, Falkland Islands Defence Force, Army, and Royal Air Force. The Royal British Legion and Associations and Youth Groups will be in attendance. Veterans from 1982 will also be present.

At 11.00am a ceremony will be held at the Liberation Monument in front of the Secretariat building. After prayers His Excellency the Governor will lay a wreath. Wreaths will also be laid by a Member of the Legislative Assembly, the Chief of Staff, Veteran associations, and by relatives and others wishing to do so.

Members of the community wishing to attend are asked to arrive no later than 10.45am. Attention is drawn to the fact that Ross Road between Barrack St and Reservoir Road will be closed to traffic to enable the ceremony at the Monument to take place.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to be worn on this occasion.

A public reception hosted by the Falkland Islands Government, will be held in the Town Hall from 1130hrs to 1300hrs. All residents and members of the Armed Services are cordially invited to attend.

Equality for all

LISTENING to the phone-in last week with reference to the minimum basic pay proposals there are a couple of points I would like to make.

While it is correct to establish a minimum wage structure the real problem facing the vast majority of the low paid workers is the rapidly increasing differences between the lowest and highest earners.

Because of the introduction of the Hay Management plan and the future pay increases now being based on a percentages rather than a real time cost, we are seeing the top earners getting vast increases to their wage packets while the lowest paid are getting almost nothing extra.

When is the Assembly going to realise that with or without a minimum wage structure there will always be a catch up situation.

Cost of living is increasing at a rate faster than the lowest paid can keep up with.

To give an example to demonstrate my point. Say a top earner is earning £60,000 per annum and the bottom earner is earning £10,500 per annum based on the minimum full time wage proposed, and the cost of living index suggests a pay increase of five per cent. This would mean that the highest paid would receive an additional £3,000 per annum while the lowest would get just £525.

Yet the daily cost of living for every individual is the same but the top earner will see an increase of £3,000 to offset the living costs while Joe Bloggs on the bottom line has still got to pay the exact same for their living costs.

This is not equality for all as many would lead you to believe.

If the system continues to follow this method of pay allocation two things are going to happen.

First the lowest paid will be forced to apply for government assistance to equalise their daily needs. Living on the dole you could say.

Second and ultimately the top earner will likely reach a point where the government can no longer afford to pay any wages.

We all know what happens using percentage systems. It is not rocket science to work out where we are going to be in 20 years from now.

Poverty on a frightening scale and an enormous financial cost to government which could far exceed the cost of top level pay structure.

It needs to stop now before we see our economy stripped of most of its money. The Hay management system has in my opinion been one of the worst case recommendations ever allowed to be introduced.

Many will argue that to get top level people we need to spend a lot of money and this may be true but in that process as described above, these same people will continue to make huge additional amounts simply because the system allocates pay rises using a percentage system.

Why can we not simply have a system that pays a set amount to the wage packet as used to happen in the old days that way everyone can live on a more equal basis.

My motto is look after the donkeys the real grafters in life because with out them the fat cats would not be in business.

Morning con

DAILY, I hear an ever increasing number of people bemoan the dark mornings when going to work, or to school.

These comments come from a wide range of the public, from radio presenters, school teachers, students taking exams and workers loitering waiting for daylight to come in. Think of the cost of lost work hours!

Even the Chief Executive said on a radio interview, the change in time was one of his most difficult undertakings in his new job.

In the build up to the Referendum an MLA said, "voting would be restricted to persons on the electoral roll. Not like the time change when it was included in the census, otherwise the world watching would think it a fiddle."

The year before time stood still, as it now is, we had a trial run by keeping summer time all through the winter. I strongly believe the following year we should have remained on sun time (Camp time) for the summer, to give a fair balance to assess the impact change in time had on our lives.

Why did we not also give natural sun time an all year trial? For more than a century sensible farmers worked by sun time all year around. It does not matter how much you spike the clock, the depth of winter will still be 7.5 hours of daylight.

For 35 years I worked on the farms with Camp time, the chief nuisance during those years was contending with Stanley summer time, causing inconvenience in communication with the town, be it radio telephone, local air traffic or office hours for business. One always had to stop and think what time it was in town before making a call.

This is the right time of year to take a look at how summer time throughout the winter affects all of us.

You know who did it and with the general election in this year's calendar you can have your say for change. Make sure it will be on time.

That extra mile

LETTER to Gypsy Cove Wardens from a cruise ship tourist, sent from Ushuaia, Argentina, in February. After a lengthy time in transit the post card eventually reached the Falklands.

I sincerely appreciate the trouble you took and the effort you expended in finding my sunglasses. Thanks a lot for going that 'extra mile' to find them.

BILL Hunter-Christie, a loyal supporter of the Falklands since the 1960s, is honoured with the Freedom of Stanley. The announcement was made at the annual Lincoln's Inn reception when Sukey Cameron read a message from the Governor, Mr David Tatham.

Councillors decide to petition the Committee of 24 (C24) at the United Nations. Cllrs Bill Luxton and Terry Peck are nominated to represent the Islands and reaffirm the people's right to self determination.

The Power and Electrical department begin the installation of card meters, however Superintendent Les Harris says it could take five years to completely convert the town from the outdated coin meters. The beauty of the card meter, says Mr Harris is that it cannot be tampered with as it will trip out and can only be reset by an electrician.

FIG seeks legal advice overseas on "ludicrous" PSAI claims for £10.3 million for additional works not specified in the contract. The company was given 14 months to construct a road to New Haven for £2.4 million, but actually took 26 months to build just half of it.

Anglo United, owner of the Falkland Islands Company and Coalite report a pre-tax loss of £30.5 million, compared to the previous year's profit of £4.8 million. The company attribute the loss to restructuring.

Thirty-two young darts players take part in the first Victory Bar Junior Darts competition. A large number of teenagers piled into the pub on Sunday afternoon to cheer on their mates and enjoy free access to the jukebox and video game. Jan Clarke (13) was the champion on the day beating Chris Eynon (15) in a hard fought final. Jan, having already won £30 was then pitted against a league player whose name he drew in a raffle. The chosen man, Lewis Morrison was duly beaten two straight and Jan doubled his prize money clocking up the highest checkout of 92 in the process.

COUNCILLORS indicate they are less than happy with the outcome of the budget which aims to spend more than £40 million. Cllr Dr Andrea Clausen, who received congratulations for her first time chairmanship of Standing Finance Committee from retiring Financial Secretary Derek Howatt, said she was disappointed with the outcome. Veteran Councillor Mike Summers said he had more reservations about the budget than any other he had been involved in, "save perhaps for the 1997 one when the outgoing council voted £17 million in the Capital Estimates."

The threatened immediate closure of Stanley Dairy is averted by Executive Council which decides to approve financial assistance of £137,188. ExCo were told the current operating loss is expected to be temporary and will be rectified as soon as the Mount Pleasant market has been sourced.

Eddie Andersen summed up the situation with a typical one-liner on the letters page: "An ugly budget is bad enough, the best we can hope for is that LegCo is never televised."

Living in the here and now

MY parents were not people who had a great deal of time for the past. I know other people who actually prefer their own backstories to living in the here-and-now, but I don't believe that Mum and Dad could really understand that attitude. For them, it was the present that was vibrant, exciting and offering new opportunities and friendships.

That is not to say that old friendships did not matter to them. People from the past were always welcome to stay for the ride, or walk back into the present. But there was no room in our family homes for things that were old, faded and dusty. The place for those artefacts was in boxes, cupboards and drawers, if they were not discarded altogether.

I suspect that this tendency to live for today is not an instinctive part of me. I am a little prone to keeping those tangible things from the past, and even putting them on show. I have to work at this carpe diem thing. But work at it I do, and I aim to do so even more energetically now, after being reminded of my parents' philosophy while sorting through my mother's property.

But for now there is still a part of me that wants to explore the past, and right now, as I face the

Bound Ungagged

Graham Bound is the founding editor of Penguin News

dangerously emotional task of tying up the loose ends of my family's life, I feel I must do so.

This exploration has been difficult, of course, but not all bad. What has emerged is a picture of a couple who were happy at every stage of their lives, who had a taste for hard work, enterprise and fun, and who broadened their minds by travelling far from their isolated islands. Most strikingly, it is clear that their life decisions were very often shaped by an overwhelming concern for my brother and I.

Perhaps Mum and Dad would not entirely approve, but I think I will blow the dust of some of the items in our little family museum and archive, and share them. Perhaps I will also give some prominence to them in my home. But I hope I do not choose to do this for long, because my parents' main legacy is a lesson about embracing the here-and-now, and always looking ahead rather than back.

Humour on Outpost

Just for now, though, some nostalgia is OK. So I share with you here some gems from a photo album that had not seen the light of day for many years. It is my father's rather remarkable record of life on outpost duty with the Defence Force during the Second World War.

When I was very small, Dad would speak of this time with great humour. His stories, often featuring friends and contemporaries like Joe King, Bill Jones and Tim Martin, might have inspired Dad's Army. His was an often hilarious account of boys sitting atop mountains and on fingers of land pointing into the ocean. They amused themselves by whatever means possible, while manning giant six-inch guns and waiting for the Japanese or the Germans to turn up.

Thanks God the enemy never did get as far as the Falklands. But Stanley had considerable strategic value in those days, so the worst could have happened, and these boys must have known that. But you cannot detect anything serious in Dad's photos. What you do see is a sense of humour and early signs of that determination to enjoy the present, however challenging it may be.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

I REMEMBER once hearing that having plenty of Rowan Mountain Ash (Sorbus) berries on the trees and keeping them until late summer meant a fairly mild winter ahead.

It was probably just an 'old wives' tale but it seemed to work last winter so, as all their berries (and there were not so many of them this year) had disappeared long before the end of March what can we expect this winter?

I'm not going to take any chances either way, and all outdoor plants in containers are either being taken into tunnels or greenhouses or, if too heavy, wrapped in bubble wrap and raised to allow good drainage, as any snow or rain inside the pot will freeze the roots and kill them.

Already, during last week's snow Bill found himself inside the 'wonder-wall' tunnel pushing the snow off the mesh from the inside before it could become too heavy.

The cold wet weather over this past few weeks has meant little could be done in the garden and I am becoming too depressed about it to have my usual 'plant patrols'.

The sight of all that grass and the other weeds growing and, in some cases, smothering some precious plants in the ornamental borders has had me grinding my teeth in frustration, for the ground is much too wet to do anything at all about it. I guess nowadays that should read, to 'address the issue'. I really hadn't realised quite how much our language had changed and become rather 'Americanised' until an eight year old granddaughter showed me the spell-check facility on the computer the other day (yet another thing I did not know existed). Well, I think I will stick to doing my own thing, so apologies in advance for all spelling mistakes and old-fashioned sayings too.

One of the jobs I must get done is not weather dependent. I just can't get myself motivated enough to get going and start scrubbing out the greenhouses but I must.

I find some Jeyes liquid in a bucket of warm water and lots of 'elbow-grease' behind a soft brush and cloth does the trick. A plant label is very useful for getting into any nooks and crannies, especially the corners. The time has come too to wash all those pots and seed trays left over from last season.

This is a wonderful time for taking cuttings; shrubs have matured enough to produce great, fresh, hardwood and you are not likely to ruin the flower display at this time of year either.

This is especially true of roses and I have just spent many happy hours, indoors, putting cuttings into pots filled with compost made lighter and more open with either vermiculite, perlite or sharp sand. About eight parts compost to two parts of one of the others seems to be about right.

Each cutting, having been trimmed of leaves and, in the case of roses, thorns too, is then given a small wound down one side, starting about a quarter inch from the bottom.

This end is then dipped in water before being popped into rooting powder and then into the soil in a pot. I like most cuttings to be between six and eight inches long and more than half their length to be in the soil.

All are then watered and some sort of cover put on each pot, preferably a proper propagating lid but, if I run out of those, then large plastic coke or lemonade type bottles get pressed into service. With the bottoms cut off and the lids removed they do the job quite well.

Failing those alternatives, a plastic bag with a small hole for ventilation and held well away from the sides and above the cuttings with some small sticks or canes will do the job.

Of course if you have an electric propagator, especially one of those with some heat control and the space inside in a well lit area, propagating becomes quite predictable and easy. Whichever method you use you should end up with more plants than you started with.

As long as the ground isn't frosty now is a good time to plant trees and hedges. In fact any shrubs, if they are in containers, can go in. They will be far safer in the ground than freezing in a pot. But it pays to check after a frost that they haven't been lifted from the soil.

The seed catalogues are starting to arrive and have been tucked away to await those dreary winter days when their contents brighten up my day. Many ticks are then made on those pages and poor Jan and Tim start being pestered early on in the spring.

The truth is that, mouth-watering though some of those plants seem, in reality many would not be hardy enough here, especially some of the half hardy annuals which would not find our seasons long enough to give of their best. But they do give you an idea of what is available, and one can dream, no?

Meanwhile, there are some shrubs and alpine seeds to put into trays and leave outside covered with netting or some form of animal and bird deterrent to over-winter; they will germinate in spring.

The phormium (New Zealand flax) seeds which germinated last year in spring are now about two inches tall and are begging to be pricked out into their own pots to grow on for a while longer before finally going into the open ground.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:

Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

North goes south for a Viking birthday

A northern tradition visited the Falklands on Saturday in the form of a Viking invasion and a rip roaring birthday party on the beach.

Shetlander Malcolm Jamieson's family and friends assured he reached the big four-oh in style with an Up Helly Aa celebration which included a parade through town and culminated in the burning of the beautifully constructed galley on Surf Bay later that evening.

Up Helly Aa (UHA) originated in the early 1800s and is celebrated throughout Shetland between January and March. "There will be no postponement for the weather" is the proud boast of our northern counterparts who reside on the same latitude as southern Greenland.

For hardy Falkland Islanders who voice the same motto when it comes to barbecues and can often be found in padded boiler-suits and rigger boots devouring mutton chops while a snow flurry keeps the fire in check, Up Helly Aa seems like a suitable celebration even if historically the Vikings never ventured out of the northern hemisphere.

The idea to have the event was formed over a glass or two of wine and snowballed from there. Malcolm's wife Trish said that soon they had a mini UHA committee, the squad meetings began in early May and were nearly events in their own right.

Snoozer Smith and Buster Summers soon had a galley taking shape, Sonia Felton created the beautiful dragons head and a couple of phone calls to Shetland got the torch making skills perfected.

"Some started the day with hot rums in one of the 'meeting' sheds and then we all gathered at Shorty's for breakfast at 10," said Trish. The Lowe's took the squads out on tour at midday which included several garage stops and squad 'Capt Monty's' preformed an act loosely based on the Full Monty.

A tour through town behind the galley driven by Edward Neilson gave many a good laugh and left others wondering just exactly was going on before they all headed to the beach for the procession and the burning of the galley.

"The dragons head was still standing clear of the flames when the galley was almost gone so we rescued it from the fire. It was then auctioned at the burning site and £450 was raised for SAMAS2," Trish told Penguin News.

Nigel Bishop's team had set up a marquee on the beach along with music equipment and hot water for warming the rums.

The day was rounded off with traditional Shetland tattie soup and more merriment at one of the meeting garages.

Falklands team show their cutting edge

THE first in a series of six football matches between Falkland Islands FC and BFSAI took place on Saturday May 25, in challenging conditions. The hard fought final score was Falkland Islands 2, BFSAI 1. Jaap McStam reports...

There were blizzard like conditions at kick-off that ensured even the passing Penguins had hats and scarves on. Who said football was a game for softies?

In the first half, BFSAI settled quickly and their early pressure was rewarded in the fifth minute when they secured a penalty after Parry was chopped down in the box. He duly dusted himself down (wiped the snow off himself?) and despatched the spot kick into the bottom left hand corner with aplomb. This seemed to cajole Falkland Islands FC into action and they threatened up the other end with Rafa Sotomayor shooting straight at the BFSAI goal. Both teams had now started to settle and were producing some fine passing.

FI were soon back in the game and a loose pass from BFSAI was punished when it was driven in at the back post by Claudio Ross.

Falkland Islands FC were beginning to get a foothold into the game and a lovely flowing move saw them earn a corner aimed straight at the BFSAI goal.

A swift counter from BFSAI resulted in FI keeper Ben Hoyles pulling off a fine instinctive save from Williamson as the game flowed from end to end as both teams searched for the crucial third goal.

Falkland Islands FC were beginning to get a foothold into the game and a lovely flowing move saw them earn a corner aimed straight at Algar in BFSAI goal.

Coin toss in very frosty conditions

After some great footwork from FIFC their forward, Rafa Sotomayor, blazed over the field with the goal at his mercy.

As the half drew to a close the wind picked up and hail stones started to fall as FIFC continued to press. Some great work down the right saw the resulting cross turned a yard wide by Andres Balladares and another dangerous Falkland Islands cross resulted in some pinball in the BFSAI box before a goal bound shot produced a magnificent clearance off the line by Nunn. The match was finely poised: after great start by BFSAI with the early goal and some good passages of play, any thoughts of an easy victory were quickly dispelled as Falkland Islands came more and more into the game as the half progressed.

BFSAI were the quicker team into their stride in the second half and carved out a couple of early chances. But FIFC ran from their own 18 yard box in a magnificent flowing move, involving several players, covering the length and width of the pitch and the impressive Rafa Sotomayor produced a wonderful first time finish past Rich Godfrey in the BFSAI goal to put Falkland Islands 2-1 ahead.

BFSAI were quick to react, and great endeavour by Williamson earned a corner chasing down a fine header from Rowe that drifted narrowly wide. Both teams continued to get the ball down and play and with some meaty challenges, this continued to be an engrossing encounter.

The elusive equaliser wouldn't come for BFSAI and a counter attack again saw Rafa Sotomayor shoot over for Falkland Islands. In a dramatic finale, BFSAI were denied recovery by the width of a post. Both teams served up a thoroughly entertaining and competitive match, in harsh playing conditions, with no quarter given by either side. Played in the best of spirits, Falkland Islands edged the first half and BFSAI edged the second with BFSAI being denied by the woodwork to claim a leveller their second half play had deserved.

Saturday Match

The match on Saturday, June 1, was less successful for the FI team midfielder James Langdon scored first followed by Martyn Clarke for the Falklands team. Dan Fragnosli unfortunately provided an own goal to favour the Falklands team leaving them one goal ahead at half time.

In the second half centre midfielder Scott Hyndman equalised for MPC and Dan Fragnosli edged them into the lead soon after. Forward Rafa Sotomayor drew the Falklands back into contention and Luke Clarke supported with another goal, positioning the Falklands team for the win. However, MPC struck back with a goal from Sean Haymann to end the game four a-piece.

Golf News

LAST Sunday fifteen players signed in for the June Medal sponsored by Décor Services Ltd. Troyd Bowles rounded off his two year reign as Club Captain with a fine win after putting together an almost error free round of 72 and posting 36 stableford points.

The winter medals are stableford this year in an attempt to speed up the pace of play, returning to the traditional format of strokeplay in October. Glenn Ross shot 73 for 36 points and second place.

Notably, three players of ages 16 and under took part in the medal with the latest product from the Club's junior section James Tyrrell; joining Sunday regulars Ieuan Ford and Bermuda bound Declan Bonner.

The medal was followed by the AGM with the committee mostly remaining unchanged. Eugene Hurley takes over as Club Captain and the team Captains for the 2014 Falklands Cup are now known. Roy Smith will lead the defending champions, the Kelpers XI and Ian Stewart will once again proudly lead the Presidents XI. Tony Locke former Captain and Secretary of the Club was elected unopposed as our new Club President.

The next scheduled match is the Décor Services sponsored July Medal, which takes place on the first Sunday of July; players are asked to sign in by 10:00 for a 10:15 tee-off. Glenn Ross

Remember: This year there are no outfield players guests allowed - goalie guests are allowed if organised by the team captain 48 hours before the match (in emergencies one hour before the match is acceptable) only goalies not already playing that day can guest. A team not dressing enough to play will forfeit the game and the opposing team automatically wins 3-0. If both teams do not have enough players a 0-0 draw will be recorded. A team without a goalie has the option of playing on with four outfielders.

Oil &amp; Gas Industry Directory

FIDC is to establish a directory for the Oil and Gas Industry that intends to include businesses already or wishing to become involved in this industry.

Those listed in the directory will assist FIDC to identify relevant certification that is required to provide products or services to oil and gas companies. The intention is to develop a FIDC scheme to assist local businesses acquiring the relevant certification. The first phase is to investigate Health and Safety certification, specifically OHSAS 18001.

If you wish to be included within the directory and participate in certification discussions please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fide.co.fk

PWD Highways has opened new areas for the disposal of mineral waste (excavated materials) in the Mary Hill area. Anyone wishing to use this facility please contact 27387 to discuss the new arrangements. Please do not tip mineral waste in Mary Hill tip, or by the bund outside of Mary Hill tip. Users of Mary Hill tip are also reminded that this tip is for inert waste only. All household waste and combustible materials should be taken to Eliza Cove tip, even if that means you have to segregate your waste.

Government says sorry for dumping oil in quarry

THE discovery of a disturbing quantity of oil dumped in the Mary Hill Quarry by the Highway Department has caused the government to apologise to the public, while Falklands Conservation's CEO says oil company officials are already "aghast at the low standards they find in the Islands."

MLA Gavin Short said it appeared that oil drums taken to Mary Hill last week were not checked to see whether they were completely empty and consequently, used oil was dumped in the quarry.

He said he had been in touch with the Public Works Department, for which he has portfolio responsibility, and it had been confirmed that this was indeed, "an own goal."

"I am deeply embarrassed and not a little cross that this has happened," said MLA Short adding, "I have been assured that more care will be taken in future but that does not take away from the fact that something has happened that should not have. I can only hope that we do take more care in the future and apologise unreservedly to the public for this totally avoidable incident taking place."

MLA Short said we all make mistakes, and it was important to learn from those mistakes, "from the top down." He had been assured by PWD that in terms of lessons to be learned, any future disposals would have to include careful checking of "empties" before disposal, and a system would be set up to ensure this was the case.

Dr James Fenton, CEO of Falklands Conservation, said events like this were perhaps inevitable bearing in mind the current, "cavalier approach," to the management of Stanley's waste, both at Mary Hill and Eliza Cove.

"I know of officials in the oil industry who are aghast at the low standards they find here – oil companies would never be allowed to get away with it," he said, adding, "Waste management, including the design and construction of tips and recycling, needs to be brought up to 21st century standards – not something one would be shocked to find even in the Third World."

This particular situation was made worse by Mary Hill being sited in a National Nature Reserve, said Mr Fenton.

"In this case, whilst prevention is better than cure, when accidents happen it is the action taken afterwards to report, assess, clean-up and monitor the situation that is important – and any learning applied to prevent future occurrences."

Falklands Conservation staff have expressed their concerns to the Environmental Planning Department.

A spokesperson for the Public Works Department said he did not think there would be any long lasting effects, as the floor of Mary Hill was impervious due to the nature of the rock. "I have not, having checked in various locations around the site over a fair period found any signs of leaching out," he said.

Oil-spill response equipment has been sourced from the Fisheries Department, with a boom deployed to contain the surface oil and absorbent material used to collect it. Crusher dust has been spread to absorb the spilt oil on the track, and will be removed in due course.

Referendum coin

POBJOY Mint has announced the release of a new coin which commemorates the Falkland Islands referendum held in March 2013.

The result of the referendum was overwhelming with 92 per cent of eligible voters turning out and 99.8 per cent voting in favour of retaining the current political status.

The design on the coin shows the Totem Pole erected by servicemen after the Falklands War with Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II on the reverse.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THOSE with stocks and shares in the oil industry may have been forgiven for thinking the long awaited black gold was seeping through the earth's crust and collecting in the base of Mary Hill Quarry this week. Unfortunately that was not the case; there was a discovery, but only after a deposit had been made by a government department disposing of 'empty' oil drums. (See front page story)

Following a tip off from a concerned member of the public I set off for the quarry on Friday armed with my trusty Nikon. I don't have a licence for anything more heavy duty, the perpetrators were already long gone and anyway, a camera is the best weaponry for a bit of investigative journalism.

I knew I was on the right track when I spotted a big slosh of oil at the edge of Boxer Bridge which had been covered with a cat litter like substance. Cat owners will be familiar with the routine.

Further into the quarry and the smell of oil was strong with thick puddles formed to the west of the access road and no doubt seeping into the water table. Yeuk! I had been expecting a bit of diesel rainbow on the puddles given the recent commendable clean up from Gordon Lines of old vehicles, but this thick sludge was beyond a bit of leakage from old trucks, or even dregs from old drums - it was nothing short of environmental plunder.

We've been assured it was a one-off slip-up and that the drums were believed to be empty. Let's hope it's a one-off, because if our own government can't abide by the rules it won't matter one jot how much everyone else tries to identify what the fabric of our society is and how to preserve it if we are not all prepared to look after our natural environment first and foremost.

I would argue that the fabric of our society was preserved 31 years ago when British Forces ensured we would remain under the Falklands flag. But we can't expect it to be set in stone. Three decades on there has to have been change within the makeup of society to embrace not only necessary development, but also the influx of new people, many who have made it their home for all the right reasons and in so doing added some valuable, not to mention characteristically colourful threads to that very fabric. It's not about freezing the Falklands in time, but about ensuring we have something we'll be proud to hand over to future generations.

"We do not inherit the earth from our ancestors; we borrow it from our children," were the wise words of Chief Seattle back in the 1800s ... and the battle continues.

Church visit means badges for Beavers

AS part of working towards their challenge badges, the Beaver Scouts held last week's meeting at Christchurch Cathedral, where Reverend Dr Richard Hines kindly showed them around and answered any questions they had, reports Scout Leader Jan Miller.

In the photograph Richard is showing the Beavers the stained glass window dedicated to District Nurse Mary Watson who would visit her patients on her bicycle. The window is probably the only stained glass window in the world with a bicycle depicted. Beaver Scout Kevin is holding the hassock that also shows Mary Watson.

Planning and building news

A NUMBER of planning applications were granted at a meeting of the Planning and Building Committee on Wednesday.

Applications were presented for external bulk storage tanks and silos for FIC Ltd at Plot 8 Coastal Road, and by Morrison Byron Marine Consortium for a laydown area at the temporary jetty head cause way in the same area at site (i) and laydown and storage facilities at Gordon Lines Road. These applications were deferred until the next meeting as the committee had not had a response to queries made to the companies.

Decor Services was granted permission for the expansion of their existing store on Lookout Industrial Estate and Government for eight new parking spaces to the north of the Secretariat Building and four new parking spaces and a new hardstanding for waste skips to the west of the hospital.

Jeannie McKay was given permission for a change of use of building from commercial to residential at Speedwell Paddock, 2 Villiers Street, Sullivan Shipping for a light industrial warehouse at Gordon Lines, and site containers also at Gordon Lines for Chris May. Permission was given for a site park home for Stanley Services Ltd in the grounds of Darwin Lodge, to Lee Molkenbuhr for a change of use from dwelling to self-catering unit at Johnsons Harbour, retrospectively for a barbecue hut for Arlette Betts at Lafone House in Stanley, for the erection of a dwelling at 5 Ross Road East, Stanley Erect for Chris Harris, a residential caravan for a temporary period for Vladimir Sytchov at 1 Felton Court and a new access and track from the MPA Road near Estancia turn-off to join an existing track to the south for Bluff Cove Ltd for Bluff Cove Farm.

Nine Building Permit Applications were also reviewed by the Building Adviser.

Proposed amendments to the approved permission for 26 two bed apartments with parking and amenity provision at land west of 34 Fitzroy Road for FIC Ltd were also examined and accepted, along with a request to vary planning condition for the erection of a dwelling at 9 Dean Street.

Also on Wednesday, at the Historic Buildings Committee, an application to remove the RT building from St Marys Walk and re-erect it at the Dockyard was approved for the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust. It was noted by Museum Manager Leona Roberts that special attention would be given to the disassembly of the buildings chimney so it could be carefully reconstructed at the buildings new home, west of the new museum.

The building will be used to display the development of radio communications equipment in the Islands.

Suspended jail sentence

STANLEY man James Patrick Lang (54) was given a suspended prison sentence in the Senior Magistrates Court on Wednesday.

Mr Lang had previously pleaded guilty to one charge of possessing an offensive weapon in a public place, three of making threats to kill and one of assault by beating.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley concluded that Mr Lang had been suffering from an illness that had made him act out of character when he had committed the offences.

The court heard that Mr Lang had objected to whom his 20 year old niece was dating, and on February 8 had entered into an argument with her which had resulted in her being pushed and falling to the floor.

He had not consumed alcohol in 14 years but had started drinking early in the morning on February 13. He had later gone to Deanos Bar and brandished a knife while making several threats to kill the man who was dating his niece. Not finding him he had proceeded to FIC Electrical Store where after establishing his niece was not there he had dropped the knife and it was retrieved by a customer. The customer had offered to take Mr Lang home, but the police arrived and arrested him. In police interview Mr Lang said he did not remember being in either establishment due to the amount of alcohol he had consumed and medication he was on.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson said his clients actions were so far out of character as to be unbelievable, describing the incident as a "psychological snapping."

Mr Gumsley described Mr Lang as an enigma; a bit of a lad in his youth who had decided to give up alcohol some 20 years ago, was in a loving marriage and had remained committed to his voluntary decision not to drink until significant stress levels had caused him to turn to alcohol.

He said he was mindful of a pre-sentence report which said any future risk of Mr Lang offending was negligible and urged him to continue to seek help to deal with mental health issues.

For the offence of possessing an offensive weapon Mr Lang was given a prison sentence of nine months, for the threats to kill 12 months imprisonment to run concurrently and suspended for 18 months. He was also placed under the supervision of the probation officer for 18 months. The stringent bail conditions Mr Lang had been under for the last four months were also lifted.

Concordia's new baby

IT will be business as usual for Workboat Services come mid-August when they take possession of the Concordia Baby.

The robust sea truck designed to meet the needs of the outer islands which do not have purpose built landing ramps suitable for the mothership Concordia Bay to berth at, is able to carry everything from a Land Rover to a small JCB within MCA regulations.

Workboat Services Manager Adam Cockwell said Almaritec had been selected from a number of suppliers due to the excellent reputation the company had, their experience, and confidence they would be able to provide a design solution to meet the Islands needs. "We had to ensure that we achieved the highest possible payload whilst keeping the overall weight and size to a minimum," said Mr Cockwell.

Theft under investigation

STANLEY woman Veronica Mieres Tromo (34) was released on bail after she had surrendered her passport to the court on Friday.

Miss Mieres has been charged with 15 counts of theft and although no plea was taken, Crown Prosecutor Alison Inglis said police intelligence had been received that the defendant intended to leave the Islands.

The allegations were made after a member of the public who employed Miss Mieres from the company Easy Clean had noticed that items of jewellery with limited access were missing. A search of Miss Mieres home carried out under warrant revealed a number of items which had been reported missing. Several have now been reclaimed. Miss Mieres had made no admission to the alleged theft during police interview, said Ms Inglis, adding that investigation was ongoing. Miss Mieres is to reappear in court on June 26.

Pictured below is a selection of property that was recovered by officers of the Royal Falkland Islands Police in Stanley as part of the investigation of alleged theft. The property consists mainly of jewellery and only part of the property has been identified. If anyone has jewellery missing please contact PC Nobby Ford or PC Testor at Stanley Police Station on 28100.

Driver banned and case adjourned

MOUNT Pleasant man Juan Carlos Cortes was banned from driving and fined after he admitted driving under the influence of alcohol.

The court heard that Mr Cortes had recorded a reading of 76 micrograms per 100 millilitres of breath on June 7 when he had been apprehended while driving on a provisional licence.

Mr Cortes was banned from driving for a period of 18 months and ordered to pay a fine of £600 plus £85 prosecution costs.

Also in court was Stanley man Robert Karl Kiddle who had his case adjourned until June 19 in order to seek legal advice. Mr Kiddle faces a charge of burglary and is also in breach of a probation order.

Uruguayan call for solidarity with Kelpers

URUGUAYAN Opposition National Party MPs Jaime Trobo and Jose Cardoso last week invited their government to examine what it was missing out on, economically, by aligning with Argentina in refusing links with the Falklands.

Mr Trobo spoke of his recent experiences in the Falklands (the pair visited during referendum week in March) and recalled Uruguay's historical links with the Islands.

"We do not admit that the Islands community is not recognised, and considered as alien to the South American coast," said Trobo who called for solidarity with the 'Kelpers' and rejected the de facto Argentine blockade of the Falkland Islands.

He also noted the potential for trade relations and business with the Falklands community.

No increase in FCO officials

ANDREW Rosindell MP (Conservative) asked the Secretary of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on June 10 whether he had any plans to increase the number of officials in his department that are based in the Falkland Islands.

The Minister, Hugo Swire responded: "Staffing levels in all our posts are reviewed regularly. "There are currently no plans to increase the number of Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials based in the Falkland Islands given the broad range of responsibilities that are devolved to the Falkland Islands Government."

"We did, however, increase by half the size of the Falklands team in London during 2012."

Queen's Award

NOMINATIONS for this year's Queen's certificate and badge of honour close on Thursday, June 13. The award recognises individuals who have provided services of exceptional benefit to the people of the Falkland Islands. Anyone can nominate a person for the award and nomination forms are available on request from the office of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly in Gilbert House.

Farmer reps

FARMERS Louise Pole-Evans and Hew Grierson have been appointed as members of the Agricultural Advisory Committee to serve for a period of two years as RBA and independent farmer representatives respectively. John Ferguson the General Manager of the Meat Company has also been approved by Executive Council.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

BUDGET week is always a bit of a challenge with so many competing demands to be balanced, something only achieved by caution. Were we to overreach ourselves in budgetary terms the next Assembly might find themselves forced to make painful cuts. Colleagues who visited Norway were warned against 'Dutch disease', that is spending revenue as fast as it is received and then suffering as revenues fall. I'm confident that the public will not be taken in by anyone attempting to turn the General Election into a bidding round by promising to squander tax payers' money. If we do not maintain our financial independence we will risk having our budgets dictated by others.

Many thanks to those who have contacted MLAs with their views on the budget. I would just ask that if you phone while I'm out, please leave your name and number so that I can get back to you.

This week we have had a presentation on the work that will go out for consultation on immigration issues. The aim of the process has been to ensure that we have a robust and rigorous system in place when a larger influx of population is inevitable to cover all the work that needs to be done. Extensive consultation is planned on this essential review and I would urge people to fight any 'consultation fatigue' they may be suffering and get actively involved in the process.

The remainder of this week is taken up with all the regular meetings moved over from last week. Planning, Lands and HMSC plus the meeting of Education Board.

MLAs Halford and Summers will be in New York next week for the customary airing of speeches at the Committee of 24, which is, as I've said before, a thankless but necessary task. One can only wonder what the members of the committee think about it all and whether they ever privately question their own usefulness in this apparently futile annual ritual and whether it has achieved anything in the last 30 years. Sad when held against the high principle on which the UN was founded.

Foreign Secretary pays tribute to Sir Rex Hunt

THE British Government's "pride and thanks," was expressed at Sir Rex Hunt's memorial service in London on Tuesday.

In a message read out by former Governor Alan Huckle at the service held in St Clement Danes, the Central Church of the Royal Air Force, the Foreign Secretary William Hague said he was sorry he was unable to attend but said: "I did not wish to let this occasion pass without recording the British Government's pride and thanks for Sir Rex's contribution - and especially for his role in those fateful days of April 1982."

He added that it was probably true that Sir Rex's unremitting advocacy of the Falkland Islanders' perspective often vexed those officials seeking an accommodation with Argentina, in the months and years before the invasion of the Islands. "But it is rarely wise to seek to be popular: it is far better to be right."

He said Sir Rex's concerns about Argentina's intentions proved, "all too well founded. His injunctions that the wishes of the Falkland Islands people must always be forefront in any consideration of the Islands' future now form the corner-stone of Britain's policy on the Falkland Islands."

Mr Hague said, "His friends and family can take great comfort that, as the events of over 30 years ago recede into an increasingly distant past, Sir Rex and his reputation rest firmly on the right side of history."

He added: "Crises expose character and test mettle. We could not have wished for a better man at the helm when the disaster struck. But Sir Rex's courage, leadership and fortitude not only gave hope to the Islanders and rallied the people of the UK to resist this unprovoked and illegal aggression. They were also the mark of the man: it is not lightly that the Prime Minister described Sir Rex, last year as a 'British hero'."

Rex Hunt's affection for the Falklands was clear for all to see, said Mr Hague, "as was the affection that the Falklands held for him. Rex was instrumental in helping to champion the many positive changes in the Falklands that followed the conflict."

"He was proud to lead the Islands in this new adventure. As we look today at the prosperous, democratic, secure and confident Falkland Islands, we have much to be grateful to Sir Rex for: indeed, I am reminded of the epitaph of Sir Christopher Wren: 'If you seek his monument, look around.'"

Land secured for hotel

A STAFF paper by the General Manager Falkland Islands Development Corporation Marc Boucher notes that promoters have secured land for the development of a hotel facility in Stanley, and are continuing their work in developing the project.

He said, "FIDC staff continues to communicate with the individuals to ensure all relevant information is provided in support of the potential investment opportunity."

The paper was presented to the Falkland Islands Development Board on Wednesday.

Mr Boucher also referred to FIDC's approach to credit union associations in 2012, saying discussions with the World Council of Credit Unions, "has provided initial financial forecast for the establishment of a credit union in the Falklands. However, these are very preliminary at this stage and will require a detailed review."

FOGL oil data in two months

DATA from the completed Falkland Oil and Gas 3D survey over its southern area licences off the Falklands will be processed and a fast-track product available for interpretation in around two months. The final processed data is expected to be available in late 2013.

FOGL said the survey aimed to target a number of prospects and leads immediately to the west and northwest of the Darwin condensate discovery.

Operated by Houston based Noble Energy, the survey was performed by the PGS MV Ramform Sterling seismic vessel. It was conducted over Cretaceous Fault blocks with a total of 1,018 square kilometres of full-fold seismic data acquired.

Airbridge services localisation

AIRBRIDGE traffic and cargo and airbridge security services, are two of a number of proposed opportunities for localisation according to a Falkland Islands Development Corporation paper.

Other areas include airbridge air booking, load control (passenger section) and in-flight catering. All of these may be in place by March 2014 as part of a phased transfer.

The proposed opportunities come under the auspices of the Localisation Commerce Board (LCB) which is a liaison to the Programme Coordination Committee where the private sector has the opportunity to feed its comments into the localisation project. The LCB is administered by the General Manager FIDC.

Another good year for Falkland Islands Holdings

CHAIRMAN of Falkland Islands Holdings (FIH) David Hudd this week announced, "another encouraging year of trading for the Group."

Referring to the final results for the year ended March 31, 2013 he said: "We ended the year in a strong financial position with available cash of over £11.0 million. The Group is now well positioned for the growth the Falkland Islands will experience in the build-up to oil production."

Referring to the Falklands economy he added that it was, "on the threshold of a decade of dramatic growth with the development of the Sea Lion discovery."

He said they were, "focussed on ensuring that the Group is able to exploit the resulting opportunities. The Falkland Islands Company is unique with a platform of leading retail and support service businesses, a significant land bank, a committed workforce and the funds to develop them."

"We have an exciting future in prospect."

Falkland Islands Company (FIC) revenues were up 1.6 per cent at £15.22 million with operating profit of £1.33 million after charging increased costs incurred positioning the company for growth.

It was also announced: "The focus during the year has been on preparing FIC for the opportunities that oil field development and production will bring to the Falkland Islands, by modernising operations and strengthening the management team."

In relation to Falkland Oil & Gas Limited (FOGL) it was stated that the market value of the investment was £3.4 million and the farm-ins with Noble Energy and Edison International, "were a major achievement for FOGL and with cash resources of $220 million FOGL is in the fortunate position of having secured funding for its share of the planned exploration programme."

It was also noted: "We remain optimistic about the prospects for FOGL and expect to retain a substantial share holding through the planned drilling campaign."

In relation to the group as a whole, revenue has increased by 4.4 per cent to £35.6 million (2012: £34.1million). Other highlights include:

- Underlying pre-tax profits increased 1.9 per cent to £3.29 million (2012: £3.23 million).

- Underlying basic earnings per share of 21.6p (2012: 26.3p) reflecting the 33 per cent increase to share capital following the equity issue in July 2012.

- Cash balances totalled £11.4 million (2012: 2.8million).

- Bank borrowings were £2.0 million (2012: £3.0 million).

- The Board is recommending an increased final dividend of 7.5p per share, which makes a total dividend of 11.5p per share, up 4.5 per cent on last year (2012: dividend: 11p).

FIH is an AIM quoted international services group that owns essential services businesses in the Falkland Islands and the United Kingdom.

Receiving cargo for All Islands & FXB July 3rd, cargo closes 1200 on July 5th

In April 2013 Executive Council approved the following changes to FIGAS Flight Policy beginning 01 July 2013.

- Up to two early morning flights with a fixed departure time of 08:30 covering flights to all destinations
- Up to two flights following on with variable departure times at or earlier than 12:00 mid-day, subject to customer demands and covering flights to all destinations
- One afternoon flight to follow on with a variable departure time, subject to customer demand and will cover flights to all destinations
- Additionally, during the summer season only, there will be, subject to demand a late afternoon follow on flight
- The revised summer season flight programme begins on 01 September and ends 30 April each year (eight months). This is a seven day week operation
- During the summer season, flights will operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday regardless of load limit. Remaining days will be subject to normal planning to ensure economical loads
- FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, especially where a return flight is jeopardised by the cancellation of fellow passengers which, under normal circumstances, renders the flight uneconomical to operate
- Capped Resident Fares and Capped Resident Fares (Outer Islands) to remain at 2012/2013 levels but all other rates and tariffs increase by 10%
- Capped residents baggage will stay the same at the same 14kgs per person and standard fares will also stay the same at 20kgs per person, anything over this will be charged at £1.40 per kilo as of the 1st July 2013
- Concessionary freight rates are to be removed from existing beneficiaries and will be offered only to the outer islands

Fabric of society

IN relation to the budget session and MLA Elsby's reference to the, "changing fabric of our society," a debate was sparked that included MLA Summers' questions, "What is the fabric of society? What do you think it is you are trying to preserve?"

This is where politicians appear to lose the real connection with the majority of people when they become so involved with running the country.

If MLA Summers and indeed other MLAs stopped for a moment and actually took a little time out from the headlong rush to develop our oil industry and economy in general and listened to some of the other voices of our community they would begin to understand just what it is that they want to preserve.

Our way of life; our very existence that our forefathers worked so hard to create.

While the vast majority support the need to move forward they also recognise that a way of life could be lost that for more than 150 years was envied by many around the world. We have been praised as being some of the friendliest people in the world, for having an enviable ecosystem and being multitalented.

What the majority of Islanders are seeing is much of their way of life disappearing as our country forges ahead with its new industrialised ideals. The theme being "do as we say" and not as we want.

We have already seen over the last 30 plus years a degraded farming community due to the massive subdivision of once large community farms, with families forced to leave their rural way of life to live in the town or emigrate. We have seen our traditional annual events being eroded away. Things like sports weeks are so controlled now, people no longer have the fun they used to have. The egg week and penguin egg collection is all now controlled - that was once a traditional part of our lives.

We have seen our cost of living soar to the point that many now struggle to live. We see crowding within the heart of the town on a scale never dreamed of. Houses between houses seem to be the order of the day.

The very seat of Government in a move to push change through offered a sweetener to locals in the form of a £1 a day scheme to trick the population into accepting massive change. Then when that was achieved they took away their £1 a day treat.

No longer can we leave doors unlocked; we are starting to live in fear of losing what we have worked so hard for.

We are becoming hard liners and more like the very core of what our forefathers tried to get away from when they migrated from the industrial revolution of other parts of the world.

These and many more little things are quietly being eroded away. We hardly know our next door neighbours anymore in a society that used to know everyone. But that is the price we will pay for development.

We are moving into a more human greed factor scenario and away from our traditional way of life and it is worrying that the not so well off will be trampled upon in the future just as happened in the Shetlands when oil became their major industry. Poverty could happen on a scale unthinkable.

These and many more concerns are what forms the fabric of our society. Everyone now operates in high speed motion and very little time is available for people to chill out. It has been mentioned that the sports weeks are dying because of the fact that so many people simply cannot attend because the industry cannot afford to slow down for a few days.

We often hear people say, "but look at the benefits like roads, telecommunications available, access to money you never had before and improved medical and education."

The list is endless but none of these improvements are of real value if the people are becoming subdued by things they valued being lost to society.

We can go forward in society without losing our very heritage if careful plans are adopted but this will only happen if we take a slower approach, but that is not likely to happen while our planners, leaders and business tycoons rush headlong in their race to make a fortune.

Sadly people get trampled in stampedes and this is what is happening now on the Islands because the mind set is financial wealth for an elite few.

Once our society cared for our land, now most through implementation by others are joining the gold rush and what was once a way of life is now slipping into the history books.

It is causing unrest among the genuine Falkland Islanders who while welcoming progress do not want to lose their traditional way of life.

The Governor in his speech said that the future of the Islands was "by no means dependant on oil."

Can we be so sure, because from an Islanders view we are changing so much we may very well depend on revenue from oil to survive because when it happens, the true fabric of society that we once held dear will be long gone.

Well done to 1435 Flight

THE Falkland Veterans Foundation would like to thank all the people from 1435 Flight at MPC who took part in a charity run on Saturday 18 May 2013 and raised £1,435 for the charity.

Cpl Colin (Doc) Martin from 1435 Flight contacted Ellen, Manager of Liberty Lodge and she, along with Gary Clement, FVF Trustee, were invited to MPC to give a presentation about the FVF and Liberty Lodge.

The runners left MPC at 8.30am and arrived at Liberty Lodge at 2.25pm, the distance was 35.2 miles. Ellen and Gary met them at the Lodge and they were all treated to a good soak in a bath and experienced Ellen's home-made cakes and refreshments.

In the evening they visited the local public houses, with their bucket and raised further donations for the FVF.

The people that took part in the Charity Run were: Cpl Colin (Doc) Martin, Flt Lt Charlotte Turner, C/T Kev Morris, Sgt Chaz Cutting, Sgt Mark Wragg, Sgt Stu Dawson, Cpl Stephen Lynch, Cpl Gaz McKeating, Cpl Jonathan Todd, SAC Russ Freeman, SAC Fraz Williams and SAC Jamie Wright and not forgetting their support drivers, Sgt Colin McCormack, C/T Matt Breen and Cpl Stu Wright.

Our thanks and gratitude go out to all the above and the Islanders who donated to this event.

Derek 'Smokey' Cole - CEO, Falklands Veterans Foundation

Thanks for the good times

AFTER five wonderful years in the Islands, it is with some sadness that we are departing to return to South Africa. The vast landscapes, abundant wildlife and the warm and generous community of the Falklands have enriched our lives in so many ways. We feel privileged to have called the Islands home during this period, and are truly grateful for the opportunity, and for the friendships we have made along the way. We are excited about our next adventure - a combination of farming, conservation and art, based near Nature's Valley at the foothills of the Tsitsikamma Mountains - and will forever cherish, and be positively influenced by, our time spent in the Falklands.

Love, light and peace.

Grade A waffle

JUST to record that while Mr Marsden's letter (PN June 7, 2013) was an object lesson in Class A waffle it did not actually address the issue raised in Mr Clarke's letter of contradictory statements being made under oath in court by serving members of the RFIP.

Perhaps Mr Marsden would like to have another go, this time with less flannel and more substance.

Kind sponsors

I WOULD like to say a very big thank you to all those that sponsored my drastic haircut. Money is still coming in and the total is now £600. Around £150 came from the UK whilst most of the rest came from the very generous Hill Cove and Port Howard people. A very special thank you goes to my youngest sponsors, Jessica (nearly 7) and Daniel (4) Lee, who each gave me £2.50 from their own money boxes.

What is the Oil Development Reserve?

The Oil Development Reserve has been devised so that Government can monitor the financial management of the operating budget without the large oil related revenues clouding the picture. Standing Finance Committee will monitor the funds received from oil and spent on oil projects over the year.

Where does the money go?

The Oil Development Reserve will be paid into the Consolidated Fund and if any of it needs to be used this will have to be approved during the normal budget cycle. All money received by FIG goes into the Consolidated Fund and all approvals to spend any money will be approved in the normal budget cycle.

Why do we need it?

It's a way of ensuring careful financial management within FIG, and it will also make sure that the increased reserves are distributed in a way which serves the community as a whole, whether for oil development or other objectives. By considering

Briefing: Take a look at the Oil Development Reserve, how it works and what it means to you the areas separately the Budget Select Committee was able to review the underlying operating budget that will be needed to run government services irrespective of the progression of the oil and gas industry.

What will it be spent on in ### developing the oil industry?

It will be spent to encourage exploration and development in the oil and gas industry and the areas where FIG envisages there will be a need to spend public funds to encourage this work.

These will be projects that are set out in the Oil Readiness

Checklist published recently, for example, improving legislation and regulation, new posts to specialise in oil related work, infrastructure relating to port development and improvements to Stanley Airport. A full list will be published in the Budget Book soon. Financial Secretary Nicola Granger confirmed.

So none of it is being spent on us at the moment?

Some of it is. Mrs Granger explained that increasing pressures in prices, wage bills and expectations for service levels did not allow for a balanced budget (excluding oil).

Because of this the targets for this year's budget are based around the use of oil exploration revenues equal to the same expenditure as last year in real terms. Increased revenues have also made it possible to increase the personal tax allowance and create a personal allowance for MST (Medical Services Tax).

How much is in the Oil Development Reserve now?

At the end of this financial year there is expected to be £12.9M unspent, however after the expenditure planned over the next five years there will be only £2.1M.

PUBLIC NOTICE

ANNIVERSARY OF LIBERATION DAY 2013

To mark the anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands from Argentinean occupation in 1982, the following programme has been arranged for Friday 14 June 2013.

A Thanksgiving Service will be held in Christ Church Cathedral commencing at 9.45am. His Excellency the Governor, Members of the Legislative Assembly together with the Chief of Staff will attend the service. The marching troops will consist of the Royal Navy, Falkland Islands Defence Force, Army, and Royal Air Force. The Royal British Legion and Associations and Youth Groups will be in attendance. Veterans from 1982 will also be present.

At 11.00am a ceremony will be held at the Liberation Monument in front of the Secretariat building. After prayers His Excellency the Governor will lay a wreath. Wreaths will also be laid by a Member of the Legislative Assembly, the Chief of Staff, Veteran associations, and by relatives and others wishing to do so.

Members of the community wishing to attend are asked to arrive no later than 10.45am. Attention is drawn to the fact that Ross Road between Barrack St and Reservoir Road will be closed to traffic to enable the ceremony at the Monument to take place.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to be worn on this occasion.

A public reception hosted by the Falkland Islands Government, will be held in the Town Hall from 1130hrs to 1300hrs. All residents and members of the Armed Services are cordially invited to attend.

Gilbert House, Stanley, June 2013

Albatross conservation debated at international conference

THE Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels (ACAP) is a multilateral agreement that seeks to conserve albatrosses and petrels by coordinating international activity to mitigate known threats to their populations.

ACAP is a relatively young international agreement, having come into force in 2004.

The Agreement is currently ratified by 13 countries, including the United Kingdom, whose ratification extends to the South Atlantic Overseas Territories of the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, the British Antarctic Territory and Tristan da Cunha.

ACAP's Advisory Committee meets every 12 to 18 months. Stanley resident Anton Wolfaardt was the UK Overseas Territories representative at the albatross and petrel conservation meeting in La Rochelle, France over a two week period in April and May.

MR Wolfaardt reported that the status of albatross and petrel conservation in the UK Overseas Territories featured prominently at the meeting.

He summarised the meeting as follows: The formal conservation status of Black-browed Albatrosses was discussed. The species is currently classified as 'Endangered' according to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) Red List. However, based largely on the increasing population in the Falklands, which comprises about 70 per cent of the world total, it has been proposed that the species be re-classified to 'Near Threatened' – a more favourable conservation status. Results from recent census work in the islands of Southern Chile have revealed that the population there has increased over a nine year period, between 2002 and 2009, lending further support for an improved global conservation status for the species.

Black-browed Albatross and chick

Unfortunately, the Black-browed Albatross population at South Georgia, the second largest after the Falklands, continues to decline. There is no evidence of any threats to Black-browed Albatrosses at the breeding sites of South Georgia, and bycatch of seabirds in fisheries within the jurisdictional waters of South Georgia has been reduced to negligible levels. The main reason for the continued decline of Black-browed Albatross numbers at South Georgia is likely due to high levels of fisheries mortality in international waters, and in the waters of other nations, especially in the highly productive waters of the Benguela current off South Africa and Namibia, which is popular amongst South Georgia birds during their non-breeding period. This illustrates how the conservation efforts of one country can be undermined by actions elsewhere. It also highlights the importance of engaging in international agreements, such as ACAP, to ensure a collaborative and co-ordinated approach to the conservation of albatrosses (and indeed other wide-ranging species), whose conservation is a matter of international concern and shared responsibility. The declining trend of the South Georgia Black-browed Albatross population has been considered in the Red List assessment, and because of the positive trend of the much larger Falklands population, the species still qualifies to be reclassified from 'Endangered' to 'Near Threatened'. All proposed changes to the Red List status of bird species are currently available for comment on the online BirdLife Threatened Bird Forums (www.birdlife.org/globally-threatened-bird-forums), which remain open until July 2013, with the final decisions expected to be announced in September 2013.

Recent and ongoing seabird bycatch mitigation research being led by the Falkland Islands Government Fisheries Department also featured at the ACAP meeting, as did the operations to eradicate rodents and reindeer from South Georgia.

The next ACAP meeting is due to take place in Uruguay in August/September 2014. Given the number of important initiatives underway to conserve albatrosses and petrels in the UK Overseas Territories, and indeed the global importance of the Overseas Territories for albatrosses and petrels, the 2014 meeting will be a good opportunity to progress this work internationally.

Appeal for Environmental Education Centre in Stanley

FALKLANDS Conservation has launched a new appeal to fund an Environmental Education Centre in the heart of Stanley, with a target of £100,000.

Falklands Conservation operates its office and shop from 41-42 Jubilee Villas on Ross Road and has gained planning permission to replace the sheds at the rear of the buildings with a purpose-built Environmental Education Centre.

This will provide a permanent home for the Watch Group. The Group, for children aged 8-15, aims to educate and enthuse young people about the wildlife and environment of the Falklands.

The Group was founded in 1999 and is supported by Standard Chartered Bank. They earned recognition this year by being voted runners-up in the RSPB's Club of the Year Competition.

As well as providing a central facility for of the Watch Group, the new Centre will also be available to the local community at large for talks and environmental educational activities. Over the next few years the Falklands will see a wide range of changes due to commercial development and the purpose built centre will provide a location for activities aimed at stimulating sustainable and environmental awareness.

James Fenton, CEO of Falklands Conservation, said: "All individuals and members of the business community are invited to help create a legacy for the Falkland Islands' youth by engaging with this exciting new opportunity.

We will be circulating an appeal leaflet, which can also be found on our website:

www.falklandsconservation.com
Additionally, donations can also be made directly to our office at 41 Jubilee Villas."

Atacama magic with ITT

INTERNATIONAL Tours and Travel Agent Dahiana Burucua offers Penguin News readers a personalised insight into San Pedro de Atacama in Chile

After just under two hours flying over the picturesque Andean Mountain range I landed in the City of Calama, located 2260m/7410ft above sea level. The drive to San Pedro was just over an hour long during which we were able to appreciate the beauty of the Andes, Salt Mountain Range and Demeyko Mountain Range.

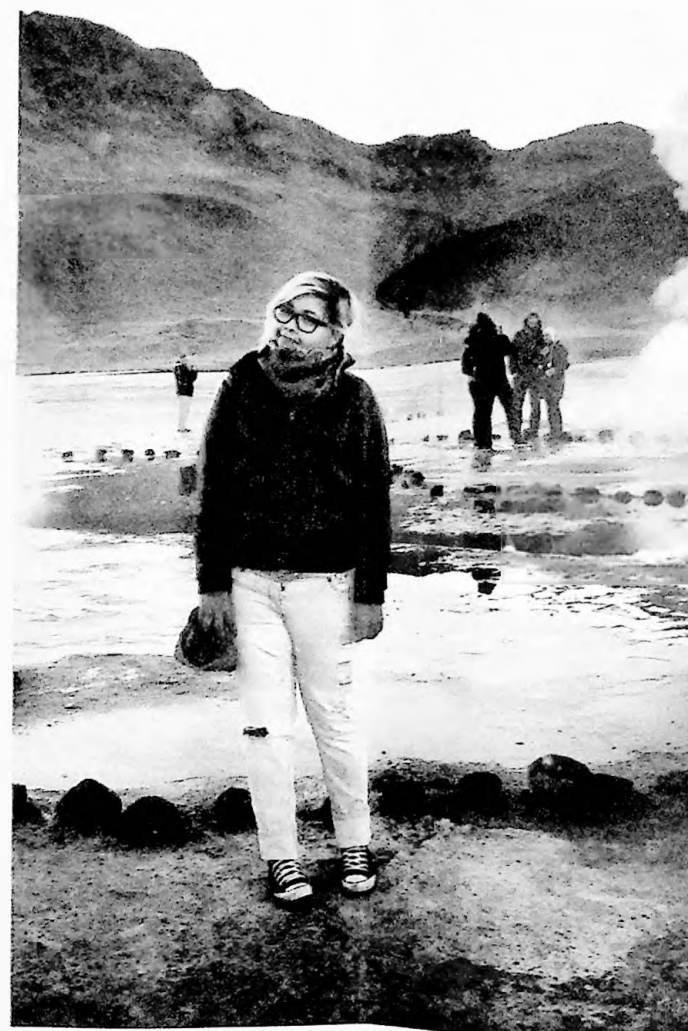

Due to the altitude, which changes dramatically throughout the drive, I took the afternoon off in order to acclimatise and explored San Pedro: a humble arid town full of terracotta roads and old houses. On the main road (Caracoles) you will find a large variety of restaurants where they specialise in cooking with local plants, grains and seeds such as 'quinoa' which can be eaten with breakfast as a sweet treat or cooked to accompany main courses such as fish due to its similarity to couscous.

The following morning I took part in an archaeological tour. First we visited the Pukara of Quitor which is located 3km away from San Pedro. The Pukara was originally built on a slope on the Salt Mountain Range by the San Pedro River as a fortress by the Lican-antays (indigenous Atacamans). As we explored the national landmark, our guide told us stories about the ancient tribes from the area, their conflicts and how after appointing a chief in common, the Pukara of Quitor became a trading route for the tribes and was used as a 'watchtower' by the tribes to keep a look out for their potential enemies, as it provided them a complete view of their surrounding from its elevated position. Later on this would be where the colonisation took place and the Lican-antays would lose their name and traditions to Spanish rule.

We then visited the remains of Tular village, a site more than 3,000 years old. It was here the first sedentary tribes lived and dedicated their time to weaving, agriculture, livestock and pottery. These houses are now mostly buried in the sand but you can see the outlines of the settlement. There is a reconstruction of the houses that can be visited during the tour. In the surrounding area, you can also see plants which are still used by the Atacamans for cooking and medicinal purposes; amongst them you can find the 'rica rica' and the 'quinoa'.

Continuing our morning tour, we visited a local Atacaman farm for a tasting of typical flavours of the culture of the Pukara the Quitor such as toasted grains, sweet breads, marmalades and quinoa seeds.

To conclude the morning, we were dropped off at the Museum Padre le Paige where we could see small fragments of the Lican-antay culture such as ancient urns, artefacts and gold.

In the afternoon we travelled to Moon Valley (19kms from San Pedro) to explore various places of interest such as the Tres Marias rock formation. This formation has been sculptured by the wind, sand and rain over the centuries regardless of its man-made appearance. From this point, we were able to appreciate the beauty of the Dinosaur and Death Valley.

After that, we hiked by the Great Dune to the top of one of the formations. From there, you can get an exceptional view of the desert including the Canyon of Salt and the Lincabur Volcano (which the Lican-antay culture revolves around).

To complete an afternoon full of beautiful sceneries we visited the Stone Coyote Viewer to watch the sunset while overlooking the Salt Canyons.

The following morning we travelled to the Atacama Salt Flat (55km/34miles from San Pedro): a beautiful point of interest located between the Andes and Demeyko Mountain Range surrounded by the Lincabur and other volcanoes including the Lascar which is the most active volcano in Chile.

Part of the Salt Flat includes the Flamingos National Reserve where we took a walk to get closer to the Chaxa Lagoon in order to identify the different types of birds.

We then continued to the Altiplanic Lagoons (Miscanti and Minique) which are located at 4,220mts/13845ft above sea level. This is also part of the National Reserve and it is managed by the So-caire community.

Over 1 million years ago, the eruption of Miniques volcano caused the damming of the water that used to flow to the Salt Flats creating the clear blue lagoons of fresh water with white salt shores. In this area, we were able to see groups of Vicuñas. We visited So-caire and tried some local cuisine before moving on to the small town of Toconao where we were able to purchase handcrafted items before returning to San Pedro.

On the final day, we were up before dawn to visit Tatio Geyser (4320mts/14173ft) and the town of Machuca. We set off at 4.30am from the hotel and drove 129kms/80miles to watch the geyser activity at its peak (6-7am). We were able to see the great fumaroles which come up to the surface through the cracks on the terrestrial crust; they reach a temperature of 85°C/185°F and up to 10mtrs/32ft in height. Well worth the early start!

After the activity of the geysers slowed down, we went for a swim at the hot spring. The warmth of the water (30°C) from the spring was welcomed after visiting the geyser before sunrise where the temperature can drop to -15°C. We drove on to the town of Machuca stopping briefly by the river to take pictures of some of the local birds including the Altiplanic Goose; once in Machuca we were able to purchase warm snacks such as empanadas, sopaipillas and kebabs from the villagers.

Amongst this tiny community of only seven inhabitants, we were also able to purchase clothing and small mementos handcrafted from Alpaca and Llama wool.

This was an overall fantastic experience. The Atacama Desert is beautiful, full of lovely people and rich in history. I would definitely recommend it to anyone and will be returning in the near future.

Emergency Radio Frequencies
The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Bands:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Firefighters awarded for 192 years of experience

THE dedication of Falklands' firefighters was recognised with the presentation of long service medals at Government House on June 6.

Director of Emergency Services and Chief Police Officer (CPO) Barry Marsden said he had been lucky enough, "to see them in action at camp fires, minefield fires, road traffic collisions and searches for missing persons," which he said was just a fraction of their work, "and despite working in appalling conditions over long periods of time the firefighters do a very impressive professional job second to no one."

The Bronze Long Service Medal (ten years or more service) was presented to Station Officer Gerard Jaffray, Sub Fire Officer Geoffrey Loftus, Firefighters Robert Legg, Richard Morrison, Ian France and Gabriel Ceballos. Craig Paice received a five year bronze bar for 15 years service. The bronze bar can be added to the bronze medal when a minimum of 15 years service has been reached. The silver medal (20 years service) was presented to Firefighters Andy Brownlee and Ralph Harris and Chief Fire Officer Gardner Fiddes.

Firefighter Derek Clarke received two additional silver bars. Derek has unofficially served for 40 years. CPO Marsden explained that, "sadly for the purpose of these awards verifiable evidence has to be provided and we can only provide evidence going back to 1979."

Derek has served since 1973.

CPO Marsden said: "Tonight we have recognised 192 years of experience between 11 individuals," adding that this was, "a life commitment and a genuine community spirit towards their fellow Islanders."

Top scoring IJS archers

THE Infant and Junior School Archery Club gather pace with seven students grading after completing their second round of lessons with scores and techniques improving all round.

Caitlin Fowler was top scorer on the day with a score of 235 out of 300 and was the only other to score with all of her arrows and just beating the last sessions top archer by 5 points, Connor McLeod. Congratulations to Caitlin and Sam who both moved up a grade.

Here are the results of each club member with their score, number of scoring arrows and the certificate colour they achieved.

Caitlin Fowler - 235, 30, Red
Connor McLeod - 230, 30, Red
Thomas Watson - 201, 29, Blue
Jordan Francis - 187, 29, Blue
Sam Hill - 157, 27, Blue
Jack Cartwright - 129, 24, Black
Vaughan McGill - 124, 23, Black

The fun aspect and very keenly contested part of archery at IJS, is the Balloon popping. At the end of each session all shoot at balloons to see who can be the first and use the least arrows to pop a balloon.

Any remaining after three ends are shot at by the parents. Sadly for the parents, these young archers did not leave many over the seven week course.

Top balloon popper was Jordan taking an average of just two arrows to pop a balloon, which is much harder than you think.

Competition is fierce and the running 'Balloon League Table' with the child's average, and number of arrows used, looks like this:

Caitlin and her impressive shoot

Jordan Francis - 5, 2
Connor McLeod - 6, 3.3
Sam Hill - 7, 4
Caitlin Fowler - 5, 4.4
Thomas Watson - 5, 4.6
Jack Cartwright - 5, 9
Vaughan McGill - 1, 14

Many of the students are very keen and well supported by their parents as most now own their own archery equipment which would be the envy of many an adult. A bright future exists for both the sport and these young archers in the Islands as there is opportunity for those with the right commitment to take part in the Youth Commonwealth Games in Soma in 2015 for 14 to 17 year olds being just one example.

Children in years 5 and 6 from IJS who wish to take part in archery should contact their Head Teacher Mrs Steen.

The next seven week course will start on July 7 and continue through school holidays. FICS students interested in the sport should contact FFA Club Secretary, Jo Lazo.

Eleven insane weeks to 'rock-hard abs'

THE Insanity 70 day Challenge was considered to be the best attended fitness sessions ever held with around 90 people trying it out over the eleven weeks. The programme offered a variety of interval and cardiovascular training with sessions of varying length and intensity five days a week, Monday to Friday. Eleven weeks later the group are very happy with the results.

Regular attendee Brenda Bone admits she was not in the best shape before starting the regime, but after putting herself through the stresses of Insanity she is happy to recommend it. Brenda has lost weight over the weeks but says the biggest benefit has been the increase in tone in her body: "I feel better in myself. It's been really good and I'd be interested in doing another programme," she said.

The sessions could be taken at their own pace but the course encouraged the group to push themselves, and as it progressed the intensity noticeably increased. They had to 'power through' some very painful sessions and even some of the 'recovery' workouts seemed a little unfairly named. But once they adjusted to the tough regular training their fitness has improved with marked improvement in aerobic recovery, flexibility, strength, power and importantly the ability to keep up with the 'bi-ionic' people in short-shorts on the projector screen.

Ian France said that the whole workout course has been, "intense, but worth every bead of sweat, the tears and pain along the way. It's personally made me fitter and healthier," and as promised by Shaun T, the creator and motivator of the Insanity program, he is also sporting a six-pack as a result. Mr France is looking forward to doing another intense workout course over the winter period and added that he thought the Insanity workout was, "perfect for all genders, ages and levels of fitness who want to 'upgrade' their body shape and feel better about it."

Andrew Brownlee has only missed two sessions in the 70 day programme that he plans to catch up on before officially finishing, and he has seen the improvement in his aerobic capacity; "my recovery time is quicker and my leg strength has improved to double," and has noticed that when he walks the dog now his step is a lot sprier.

There is good news for the energised bunch, and anyone else who wants to join in, as sessions of "Tapout XT" circuits will be coming soon. Timings are to be confirmed yet but it's hoped they will be held three nights a week to start with.

For survivors of the Insanity Challenge there is an end of Insanity superhero fancy-dress party this Saturday, June 15, at the FIDF Canopus Bar. If you have done one day or 70 days all are welcome to join in the fun and bring a guest.

Public notice

FIG Environmental Studies Budget 2013/14

The Falkland Islands Government provides annual funding to help people in the Falkland Islands to conduct activities which benefit and enhance the environment.
Projects eligible for ESB funding must assist in the management or enhancement of the biodiversity of the Falkland Islands.
Priority will be given to initiatives addressing the key three themes of the 'Falkland Islands Biodiversity Strategy', which are: environmental research, on-ground action, and education. Anyone can apply for assistance.
The deadline for applications is Friday 5th July 2013.
A detailed call for proposals and application forms can be obtained from the Environmental Planning Department (Tel 28480, email MChiverton.planning@taxation.gov.fk or online at <http://www.epd.gov.fk>

Oil &amp; Gas Industry Directory

FIDC is to establish a directory for the Oil and Gas Industry that intends to include businesses already or wishing to become involved in this industry.
Those listed in the directory will assist FIDC to identify relevant certification that is required to provide products or services to oil and gas companies. The intention is to develop a FIDC scheme to assist local businesses acquiring the relevant certification. The first phase is to investigate Health and Safety certification, specifically OHSAS 18001.
If you wish to be included within the directory and participate in certification discussions please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk

To advance claims to Falklands is abuse of C24's purpose say our reps at UN

"To advance, or support, claims to the Falkland Islands, or any other territory, in this forum, is an abuse of this Committee's purpose," Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers told the UN Committee of 24 on Decolonisation (C24) in New York on Thursday.

In something akin to a pincer movement, MLA Summers and MLA Sharon Halford in their speeches to the annual meeting, first, with reference to the results of the recent referendum, promoted Islanders' right to self determination, and then reprimanded the committee for not putting first, "those people for whom they have assumed responsibility."

Speaking of the referendum, MLA Sharon Halford said: "The message is clear. We, the people of the Falklands, are happy with our current relationship with the UK.

"It is not an anachronistic colonial situation as characterised by Argentina, but a modern relationship where the UK listens to our wishes and we are responsible for our own internal self-government."

MLA Halford also reminded the Committee, which aims to, 'decolonise' remaining Non Self Governing Territories (NSGTs) under which the Falklands is classified at the United Nations: "The right of Falkland Islanders to determine their own future is unequivocal. The principle of self-determination is enshrined in Article 1, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations."

She also condemned the worldwide spread of misinformation by Argentina on the matter of the Falklands and said: "We desire to live in peaceful co-existence with all of our neighbours, including Argentina, and remain disappointed that the Government of Argentina has walked away from co-operation with the Falkland Islands Government on a range of issues."

MLA Summers reminded the C24 delegates that it was not the purpose of the C24 to hear, or discuss, or have any opinion on the sovereignty of a territory.

"This Committee is not charged by the Secretary General or the General Assembly with discussing or resolving sovereignty disputes. And to advance, or support, claims to the Falkland Islands, or any other territory, in this forum, is an abuse of this Committee's purpose," he said.

"Nor is it this Committee's responsibility to judge whether or not any particular territory on the C24 list is entitled to self-determination. According to UN Resolutions 1514 and 1654 every territory on the list is entitled to self determination," he added.

Argentine Foreign Minister Hector Timerman also spoke at the meeting.

He attended with a large delegation that included Islands born Alex Betts and representatives from all political parties to emphasise Argentine cross party support for their position on the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands.

Independent panel recommends full time Assembly Members

A REPORT on roles and remuneration of Legislative Assembly Members (MLAs) was released to the public yesterday and recommends the role be full time and MLAs be paid £40,000 per annum.

According to the report from a panel made up of Richard Cockwell, Lewis Clifton and Justin McPhee this is the opinion of the majority of people consulted, and that MLAs have the same pension rights as FIG employees during his or her period of office.

The panel also recommends that MLAs receive a tax free allowance of £4,000 per annum, "for use for expenditure arising," from being an MLA, and that an extra allowance be given for MLAs travelling overseas.

The panel recommends that a resettlement grant of one month's pay be made to an MLA not reelected. Formal professional training should be provided and undertaken by new members says the panel and Camp members should have all travelling expenses to and from Stanley reimbursed.

Other recommendations relating to Camp members include the provision of Stanley accommodation allowance for days spent on Assembly business, and financial support for Assembly related travel within their constituency.

Under the headline 'Working Times', among a number of other recommendations, the panel recommends that Members be expected to attend business in Stanley from midday Monday until Thursday evening, and all formal meetings requiring Members attendance should be held between Monday afternoon and Thursday evening.

Formal recess periods are suggested and Members who have an occupation or business interest that requires them to work during the established Assembly business hours should have to resign this occupation.

A second report covers organisation in relation to election issues, Executive Council and the Assembly. With regard to the latter the panel notes, "The electorate have made it very clear to the panel that they wish to see debate in public on non confidential issues."

A new Assembly building and a review of staffing is also recommended.

The paper can be accessed at <http://bit.ly/104O13L> or obtained from Gilbert House.

FORMER Director of Mineral Resources Phyllis Rendell (second from right) collected her MBE from Buckingham Palace last week. Mrs Rendell said: "It was an amazing day for all of us, but particularly due to the fact that the Queen made the awards. She looked so well and really appreciated good wishes being sent from the Falklands to Prince Phillip." Mrs Rendell is pictured with her husband Mike, son Nick and Nick's partner Farrah Peck.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

PENGUIN News staff watched with interest a lively Facebook debate earlier this week generated by the gentle question 'do you prefer your life in the Islands as it is now or as it was?'

Bearing in mind the page is one created to reunite old 'chavs' the author probably intended it to be little more than an invitation to reminisce, but of course in the face of looming oil development the subject is enormously topical. And while those Falklands residents contributing probably didn't number more than twenty or so (mid week) it was refreshing to have a glimpse at the thoughts of individuals we might not normally hear from in more formal forums, and in turn belied worries that serious musing on the future of Falklands' culture is limited to a select group.

In case you haven't checked it out yet, while there was a degree of 'ooh it was better in the old days - why hasn't time stood still' there was also a healthy balance of those happy with progress and willing to embrace further change but all enfolded in an enthusiasm to look after that part of the Falklands' 'essence' worthy of protection.

So what is worthy of protection? Well our environment for one, as the Deputy Editor pointed out last week after the quarry cock-up (for an update see page 3). So it was excellent to hear the Bernitsen family's brainwave for a waste disposal/recycling company (see page 5) aimed at reducing land-fill while making some dosh along the way.

While worrying about the passing of the old ways is understandable (and I would argue that we're doing a reasonable job of preserving and even resurrecting a few) clinging to the past for the sake of some overly romantic ideal is self-defeating. Like Ben and Lucas Bernitsen's idea, what we need are even more locally led plans that combine both progression and protection.

Even on a less industrial level, if we do it right, money from oil could be used to promote traditional arts and crafts businesses, or pay for residents to perfect their talents in order to teach it in schools.

But anyway, despite being mature enough to remember a reasonable amount of days gone by, I happily direct you to the insightful comments made by younger residents on the Facebook group Chavs stop for smoko. Between them they defend the Falklands current hardworking attitude, community spirit and friendly lifestyle while simultaneously applauding progress and point out that all of those components will offer future generations their own 'good old days' to look back on. After all every generation has its own version of what that phrase means.

***

DID I really hear the upper echelons of government hurumphing at Falklands Conservation in a radio interview for criticising FIG for cavalier behaviour towards the environment? That's what environmental watchdogs do chaps. What's the phrase? Oh yes, 'Suck it up (pardon the pun) Princesses'.

Supporters applaud Islands progress since 1982

THE remarkable transformation of the Falkland Islands into the democratic, prosperous, hard-working community of today, was applauded by hundreds of supporters gathered in London for the annual reception marking the liberation of the Islands from Argentine invasion and occupation in 1982.

Journalist Harold Briley attending the reception said the guests were delighted and impressed by the positive, dynamic, hard-working community described by Legislative Assembly Member Dick Sawle, who gave an upbeat assessment of the way the Falklands is overcoming the challenges of building a new oil industry, safeguarding and strengthening its democratic principles and its relationship with the United Kingdom, and challenging Argentina's rejection of Falklands' democratic rights.

Mr Sawle declared that the referendum, "was the exercise of self-determination, and the result was incontrovertible proof of our desire to remain British - an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom with our own democratically-elected Government, our own rights under a modern Constitution that reflects the modern day relationship between the United Kingdom and the Falkland Islands - a relationship that is not based on old colonial principles, but one based on mutual respect and forward-thinking democratic ideals."

He went on to speak of the MLAs' worldwide campaign to spread the word of the Falklands referendum, paid tribute to Sir Rex Hunt and Lady Thatcher, and also praised, "excellent" research by two British academics, Peter Pepper and Graham Pascoe, which has, "effectively disproved the myth," that an Argentine population was expelled from the Islands by the British in 1833.

MLA Sawle also outlined the new challenges that the Falklands had faced as a result of oil exploration.

The reception was entertained by the Central Band of the Royal Air Force, prevented by rain from carrying out the traditional march past.

Your questions answered

Q It has been sometime since the mammography team from Santiago was here and there was talk about them coming back. Can you assure that they will be returning to undertake further screening?

A Provided by Director of Health and Social Services Derek Muhl: A mammography visit is planned for 2013/14 and funding has now been allocated by Government. At the present time, we are considering when would be the best time and the detailed arrangements. More information will be available in due course, but in the meantime, any views from members of the community would be welcome and should be sent to the Director of Health and Social Services at KEMH.

Sticky situation for FIG as oil spreads near Mary Hill

AN accumulation of oil on ponds in the vicinity of Mary Hill Quarry within the National Nature Reserve (NNR) of Cape Pembroke discovered by a member of the public on the weekend is not as a result of a government department disposing of oil in the quarry last week, a spokesperson has said.

Made aware of the situation through photographs on Facebook, MLA Gavin Short called a meeting on Monday and the area was investigated by the Public Works and the Environmental Planning Departments.

An FIG spokesperson said oil was not believed to have leached out from the quarry following the incident reported in last week's Penguin News, but was caused by, "a small amount of diesel leaking from the fuel tank of a scrapped vehicle that was parked immediately outside the quarry towards the end of last week."

Environmental Planning Officer Antony Payne confirmed that he had been to inspect the pond area thought to have been affected by diesel from a vehicle outside of the quarry. He said although the vehicle had been moved into the quarry there was a clear path by which any spilt fuel would have reached the ponds, especially given the rainfall over the weekend. "As far as can be ascertained, the amount of fuel involved was very small," he said.

That a second incident should occur in such close proximity to a clean up operation has caused concern among many users of the area, while one observer at the site when a bulldoze operation got underway on Monday was asked to leave, thus excluding any independent assessment or oversight of the situation.

Grant Munro a former chief executive of Falklands Conservation and a horse owner, visited the quarry on Saturday during the heavy rains and observed that surface run-off was carrying oil from the inner quarry, down the track to the outer quarry and access area and hence through the stone bank to wash out and into the ponds below the quarry where it collected as scum and 'mayonnaise'.

Mr Munro was rather surprised when on Tuesday what was described as a 'light sheen' on the ponds was attributed to a dumped vehicle. "This mysterious vehicle may have contributed to some of the pollution, but having visited the site over the weekend, not all," he assured Penguin News.

He said it was now difficult to judge, given FIG's less than open and transparent approach to the incident that excluded observers from the site during works.

Mary Hill quarry is located on Common land, utilised by residents for recreation and grazing livestock and the tourism industry to showcase Falklands wildlife and landscapes and is also an Important Plant Area (IPA) and National Nature Reserve. Just a few of the reasons to ensure that it is cared for as a national asset and that it is managed appropriately. What happens on Cape Pembroke is the responsibility of FIG and this includes Mary Hill quarry.

A Falklands Conservation spokesperson pointed out that the rules and regulations of use of the quarry and how successfully they are adhered to are part of this responsibility. "something that PWD disappointingly seem reluctant to accept as they now place blame for a second oil leak on a third party."

FIG's responsibility of the quarry includes the containment of all waste and all substances leaching from it, and cleaning up an oil spill is far less desirable, more time consuming and costly than preventing one, said the spokesperson.

"At the end of the day, if vehicles are permitted to be dumped at Mary Hill quarry with no prior stipulation of removing oil, petrol or diesel by FIG on public users, then it is up to PWD to ensure leaking of such liquids are contained within the quarry and then dealt with appropriately."

"It has been saddening to observe the situation worsen and polluting materials now occurring outside the quarry in grazing areas and ponds; something that could probably have been avoided by a more rapid and committed response."

Mr Payne (EPO) said that although diesel evaporates more quickly than heavier oils it may take a bit longer to disperse in this instance due to the current low ambient temperatures. "The proposed course of action - to contain the spread and employ absorbent pads is the best response in this case," he said adding that other forms of clean up such as using detergents, other chemicals or digging the affected areas out were inappropriate and likely to make the situation a lot worse.

In consultation with Falklands Conservation, absorbent pads have been used to remove the fuel and minimize further spread onto the Common. Fencing is also being put up to keep horses away from the affected area, although there is little risk of them attempting to feed or water in the area given the strong smell of fuel, but further damage may occur if they walk through the area and spread the contamination further.

Disposing of oil properly

THE main sources of waste oils produced by the Falkland Islands Government come from the Plant and Vehicle section and the Power Station.

These are collected in IBC storage containers and are stored at Megabid. The oil is then used to power the waste oil burners which provide the heat for the Plant and Vehicle garage and the new housing shed. These burn at a rate of 3-4 gallons per hour and it is estimated that the fuel saving created by using this system is approximately £11,000 per annum.

Visiting ships have also requested oil disposal within the Islands. These requests are infrequent and therefore are dealt with on a case by case basis and where possible we accommodate these requests and add the waste oil to the above mentioned storage area for burning.

Tim Miller (Stanley Growers) also has a waste oil burner and takes supplies both from the storage area at Megabid and also from the visiting ships.

With regard to individuals who have waste oils for disposal, it is suggested they contact the Public Works Department where staff will help and advise them on the best disposal solution depending on the relative volumes. Alternatively they can speak to Tim Miller or Stanley Services who also offer a waste oil disposal and recycling service.

Information provided by Deputy Director of Public Works, Colin Summers.

Queen's coins

A SERIES of coins have been issued from five British territories and dependencies which pay tribute to the 60th anniversary of the Queen's Coronation, as well as a lifetime of service to the Commonwealth of Her Majesty and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Issued by the Treasuries / Governments of Ascension, British Indian Ocean Territory, the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and the Isle of Mann, the crown coins together are part of an overall greater series which honours the six decades of the Queen's reign and her consort; the couple together have served the British nation, Commonwealth and territories longer than any other British sovereign and spouse in history.

For more information on these and other coins offered by the Falklands Government, visit www.pobjoy.com/ukworld/section.php/815/0

Repeat offender sent to jail for burglary

STANLEY man Robert Karl Kiddle (63) was sent to prison for six months on Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary.

The court heard that Mr Kiddle who was already on a probation order for a burglary in February, had entered the home of Mrs Yona Davis on June 4 and stolen a bottle of vodka from her lodger's room.

Mr Kiddle admitted in police interview that he had gone to Mrs Davis' home to see if she had any cigarettes and when there was no one there he had gone upstairs to see if her grandson had any, but had entered the lodger's room instead and stolen the vodka.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson said he could think of little to say in Mr Kiddle's defence, adding however that his client had indicated he did not wish to spend time in prison.

People did not tend to go to prison for nicking an £18 bottle of vodka, said Mr Watson, however when Mr Kiddle's previous 40 years of offences were taken into account there seemed little doubt he would end up back in court.

In sentencing Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said sending Mr Kiddle to prison would not stop him from offending again, "but it might dry you out for a while."

The offence was serious in so much that he had entered the home of an elderly person in a community that laid considerable trust in being able to leave doors open, said Mr Gumsley, adding he was satisfied a custodial sentence was appropriate.

It was clear Mr Kiddle had a number of issues leading to alcoholism which desperately needed to be addressed, said Mr Gumsley adding that it gave the court no pleasure sending him to prison but it must be made known that if the court gives someone a chance and they blow it, consequences will follow.

Mr Gumsley revoked the probation order and replaced it with a two month prison sentence for the February offence plus a four month sentence for the June 4 offence to run consecutively.

Also in court Stanley woman Lucy Butler (22) pleaded guilty to stealing £20 in cash on June 11 and had her case adjourned until August 6, for a pre-sentence report to be prepared.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

I HOPE lessons have been learned from the recent spilt fuel incident. Long term we will undoubtedly have to invest more in facilities for waste disposal across the board. It is a world-wide problem exacerbated by consumerism and wastefulness. I recycle everything possible but there is a limit to what we can do here. Even in the UK there is disagreement on the environmental value of some forms of recycling which may themselves be wasteful of resources. FIG commissioned a report some years ago (the Halcrow Report), but even if all its recommendations had been implemented it did not provide all the answers.

This week we will discuss the findings of the remuneration review panel with them and I anticipate that the detail will shortly be made public. It is important that anyone thinking about standing for election in November knows on what basis he or she will stand so that they can plan. Meetings often have to be called at short notice and anyone with time bound commitments can find it impossible to fulfil the expectation of the electorate that they are available to work whenever required.

By the time you read this our representatives the Honourable Sharon Halford and the Honourable Mike Summers will have spoken at the C24. As always they present a fair and factual summary of the situation, which will sharply contrast with the usual Argentine rhetoric and attempts to misrepresent facts. There is a simple and peaceful solution, they could concentrate on solving own their domestic problems, accept our clearly expressed wishes and become co-operative good neighbours. But that would denote political maturity and respect for human rights not possible for the current regime.

The stunning weather on Liberation Day, along with the huge turn out made it as usual a very special occasion. The many children present behaved very respectfully. Unfortunately the same could not be said for a handful of adults who gossiped through the wreath laying, seemingly oblivious of the fact that relatives and comrades of the fallen were involved in the most solemn and poignant part of the whole ceremony.

Briefing:

Penguin News takes a look at the Public Consultation on Road Designation, what it's all about and what it means to you

What's this all about?

At the moment Road Traffic Ordinance (RTO) doesn't apply to all roads, including some Camp roads on the East and all West Camp roads. Government is consulting you about their proposals for applying those provisions to the road network in the Falklands that has been constructed, "by or at the expense of the Crown."

But what does that mean?

It means the RTO would be applied to any roads that are considered public highways but not private roads.

What difference will it make?

It would mean that the laws about speeding, drink driving and insurance would apply to everybody equally across the Falklands.

If it hasn't happened before why propose it now?

It has been discussed for years but some serious road accidents have brought it to the forefront.

The consultation says that the RTO is intended to make the use of the road by all road users as safe as reasonably possible.

People can drive vehicles on all public roads in the Falklands, both those that are covered by the RTO; and those that are not. However, the risks that people are exposed to when using roads are the same, whether covered by the RTO or not.

On the roads that are covered by the RTO, there can be an expectation that people using vehicles will generally comply with road traffic laws and that they will not drink and drive carelessly, recklessly or speed. When people do break these laws, they can be dealt with by the police and if appropriate prosecuted in court.

Also, the law requires drivers to have insurance, so that people can be sure that, if an accident occurs, they will be compensated for damage to vehicles and personal injuries they receive. Users of roads covered by the RTO are also required to have a current vehicle licence on display.

On the roads that are not covered by the RTO, none of these laws apply and, as a consequence, notes the document, there is an inconsistency in the application of law across the Falklands.

Government believes this can cause confusion as to what roads are covered and what roads are not. Also, the absence of any regulation on much of the road network means that road use is unregulated, placing road users at higher risk from themselves and other road users. There is no sanction that can be applied to those who drive in an unsafe way and no compulsory insurance to compensate those that may be involved in an accident.

Are they proposing it be applied to settlement roads?

No, only where a public highway passes through a settlement or farm. Local consultation is going to be carried out about where it is proposed the application of the RTO should stop and start at settlements and farms.

But some farmers have quite a few vehicles that barely use highways and only occasionally cross them when they move around their own farms. Won't this cost them a fortune in insurance and licensing?

The document recognises this and it proposes that drivers of farm vehicles will still need to carry third party insurance that provides cover while they are on the public road. However, provided certain conditions are satisfied, the requirement for insurance will be limited to cover of £250,000 or £500,000.

Discussion with Caribbean Alliance Insurance Company has resulted in an insurance cover tailored to farm vehicles: for cover up to £250,000, this should cost around £30 per vehicle per year with a 10 per cent discount for over two vehicles (e.g. five vehicles would cost around £135 per year); or, for cover up to £500,000, this should cost around £55 per vehicle per year with a 10 per cent discount for over two vehicles (e.g. five vehicles would cost around £247.50 per year).

In the document it defines 'farm vehicle' and outlines the conditions that would have to be met for limited cover to be available. It also has information about which farm vehicles would be exempt from having a valid licence.

When and how do I get to offer my opinion on this?

Draft legislation is included with the document. Send your comments to Chief Inspector Len McGill at lmcgill@police.gov.fk (use 'Road Designation' in the title) or send a letter.

The consultation starts on June 17 and finishes July 5. Give Gilbert House a call for a copy on 27451 or email cclifford@sec.gov.fk

Waste management enterprise planned as family business

LANDFILL in the Falklands, "could be reduced by 80 per cent," if Ben Berntsen and son Lucas, and Ben's brother in law Steve, are successful in their new enterprise; one that will both manage waste and recycle it.

Ben told Penguin News the idea came from Lucas and as such he spent time with his Aunt and Uncle (Rose and Steve Walker) in the UK who own S Walker Transport Ltd and R&S Recycling Ltd.

Since then the three have set up Kelper Recycling Ltd and spent a great deal of time researching the viability of such a company in the Falklands, making relevant contacts in the Islands and UK and seeking feedback locally.

"Feedback has been completely positive from everyone we've contacted," Ben told Penguin News this week. In the Falklands they have spoken to the Falkland Islands Government (FIG), British Forces and oil companies.

Originally the response from FIG was unhelpful but recently government has been far more interested he explained. Kelper Recycling is currently working on a business proposal to present to FIG.

The facility itself would be based at the Eliza Cove rubbish tip. A conveyor belt/sort line would be required for picking off recyclable waste along with a shed and also a baler so that the materials could be shipped efficiently. Some waste could be re-used in the Falklands also.

Lucas Berntsen and his father Ben

Ben explained that the cost of shipping could be a set-back so they have been making contacts in Uruguay and Chile and examining ways to reduce costs. Talks have also taken place with South American Atlantic Services Ltd in the Falklands with regard to sharing space in containers being shipped out of the Islands.

They hope the business will benefit the entire Islands and can foresee the use of incinerators on larger farms. Scrap metal could also be collected from all over the Islands. In the longer term the business could also take waste from ships visiting the new port. Set up of the business would cost approximately £0.25 million, with Steve able to source good quality second-hand equipment in Britain. The business could eventually employ around half a dozen people.

Ben emphasised his son was the driving force behind the business. "I'm just going out there and helping him set it up."

Ben's sister Rosie, "has always wanted to do something for the Falklands also."

The whole enterprise depends on public support and funding said Ben, but the outlook seems extremely positive.

Who's who in government?

A HOST of new appointments have been made within the Falkland Islands Government since January. Kieran Watt and Emma Harte have taken posts of Learning Support Assistants (part time) at the Education Department. Priscilla Morrison Betts has also transferred from Clerk at the Public Works Department to Learning Support Assistant.

Kristy Buckland is now the Education Department Clerk with Melisa Barnes part time in the equivalent post. Jessica Chapman is working as part time home help at the Health and Social Services Department. Janice Jackson, is now a Staff Nurse at the hospital and Owen Lee, Plant Operator/Handyperson with the PWD along with Henry Mario Guala Romero. Ishmael Stevens is a part time cook at the hospital and Tina Kastris is the new Social Worker. Paloma Nannig Vargas is Pensions Assistant at the Treasury and Samantha Davies has become a Customs and Immigration Officer.

Karen Steen has been promoted to Head Teacher at the Infant/Junior School and Camp Education and Gary Webb has been promoted to Sergeant with the Royal Falkland Islands Police.

Andrew Miller has transferred from Leisure Centre Manager, to Fisheries Protection Officer, and Veronica Sinclair from Administrative Officer, Central Services, to Accounting Assistant at the Treasury.

Port Missioner for Falklands

TRUSTEES of the Stanley Seamen's Mission announced last week the appointment of Betty Turner as the first Port Missioner for the Falkland Islands.

Mrs Turner will assume a key leadership role in providing for the spiritual and material well-being of seafarers and all others connected with the maritime industry in the Falkland Islands, regardless of race or creed. Her work will include co-ordinating the contributions of other paid staff and a growing group of volunteers in providing assistance to seafarers in need. She will also help promote a Christian ethos at the Lighthouse Seamen's Centre.

As well as previous experience, together with her husband Howard, of working among seafarers here in the Islands, Mrs Turner also brings wide professional expertise in welfare and pastoral work, organisation and administration. She will develop further the links with the UK-based Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen which the Stanley Seamen's Mission has had since its inception in the early 1990s.

ABOVE Left: Cub scouts along with their Leaders and five parents took part in their annual memorial hike up Tumbledown Mountain in order to remember the Battle of the Scots Guards which took place that night 31 years go, on June 13.

At the west end of the mountain top, Tim Miller chatted to the cubs about how the battle took place, and how the Scots Guards had to climb up the hill through open ground. The cubs had found great places to hide under rocks so they could imagine how hard it was to win this battle explained Leader Jan Miller. They cleaned and polished the memorial cross and plaques and a simple service followed. Tyrone Henry read out the names of the eight Scots Guards and one Royal Engineer killed, and Hamish McKee read the Scots Guards Creed. The Lords Prayer was then said and Kelly Harris laid a wreath while Sam Hill laid the large cub cross.

Receiving cargo for All Islands & FXB July 3rd, cargo closes 1200 on July 5th

In April 2013 Executive Council approved the following changes to FIGAS Flight Policy beginning 01 July 2013.

- Up to two early morning flights with a fixed departure time of 08:30 covering flights to all destinations
- Up to two flights following on with variable departure times at or earlier than 12:00 mid-day, subject to customer demands and covering flights to all destinations
- One afternoon flight to follow on with a variable departure time, subject to customer demand and will cover flights to all destinations
- Additionally, during the summer season only, there will be, subject to demand a late afternoon follow on flight
- The revised summer season flight programme begins on 01 September and ends 30 April each year (eight months). This is a seven day week operation
- During the summer season, flights will operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday regardless of load limit. Remaining days will be subject to normal planning to ensure economical loads
- FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, especially where a return flight is jeopardised by the cancellation of fellow passengers which, under normal circumstances, renders the flight uneconomical to operate
- Capped Resident Fares and Capped Resident Fares (Outer Islands) to remain at 2012/2013 levels but all other rates and tariffs increase by 10%
- Capped residents baggage will stay the same at the same 14kgs per person and standard fares will also stay the same at 20kgs per person, anything over this will be charged at £1.40 per kilo as of the 1st July 2013
- Concessionary freight rates are to be removed from existing beneficiaries and will be offered only to the outer islands

Conserving South Atlantic wildlife Protected areas talks on Ascension

ASCENSION Island was the venue last week for a group of 30 landowners, government officers and conservation professionals from the Falkland Islands, St Helena, Ascension and the UK, where they spent five days talking about protected areas in the South Atlantic.

Why do we need to talk about protected areas? Well, they are potentially one of the most powerful tools we have to conserve habitats and species.

A strong network of protected areas is also one of the internationally recognised indicators of how well a country looks after its wildlife. The Convention on Biodiversity (CBD) has set the ambitious target of 17.5 per cent of the world's land area under permanent protection and effective management for wildlife.

Almost every country and territory in the world has signed up to the CBD, including Ascension and St Helena, and the Falkland Islands Government is actively working towards signing up. The task of the workshop was to explore what this target means for us, to find out how we can monitor how well our protected areas are doing at conserving wildlife and track our progress towards that target.

We heard some great success stories from around the territories, including practical conservation of the endemic wirebird on St Helena, rat eradication and coastal monitoring in the Falkland Islands and conservation of threatened endemic plants on Ascension. One of the messages to take away from the workshop is that there is a great deal of good work being carried out by dedicated individuals and organisations across the territories, and there is a will in the community to look after the unique wildlife we have in the Falklands. We are therefore probably closer to that protected areas target than we might think. The challenge of the Protected Areas Project over the next year or so will be to put in place a range of voluntary designations, management and monitoring guidelines and reporting procedures, so that we can strengthen protection given to our special places and share our successes with the wider world.

The workshop was judged a success, with lots of new contacts and friendships made and plenty of food for thought. Colin Clubbe of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, and Clare Stringer of the RSPB, both great friends of the Overseas Territories, supported me in planning and delivering the programme. The Ascension Island Government provided us with a fine venue in the Red Lion on Green Mountain and the Ascension Island Conservation team found some interesting sites for fieldwork, patiently answering our questions about what they were doing and why as part of the weeks activities.

The Protected Areas Project is funded by the Overseas Territories Environment Programme, with an additional grant from FIG that enabled the participation of landowners and Camp residents Ann Robertson, Sally Poncet, Marilou Desligniers and Helen Marsh. Thanks also to corporate sponsors FITT and Workboat Services for last minute assistance.

Annie loses locks for Liberty Lodge

Annie Bendyshe Pitaluga

LIBERTY Lodge benefited by £435 this weekend as a result of Salvador farmer Annie Bendyshe Pitaluga sacrificing her hair for the charity.

The brave lady had sections of her hair shaved at the Victory Bar, Deanos and The Rose Bar.

Mark Jones and Darryn Teague also had their heads shaved and donated towards the total.

The cheque was presented to Liberty Lodge on Monday.

Dutch donations to Falklands charities

CAPTAIN Kooiker, master of the Dutch tug Giessenstroom and Captain Verkaik, master of the Dintelstroom, along with their crews have presented donations to both the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund and the Education Department.

Van WijnGaarden, the Dutch company contracted by the Ministry of Defence to operate the two tugs in Mare Harbour recently launched a new vessel, the Amerstroom in Holland. To mark the acceptance of new vessels into the company it has been custom for Van WijnGaarden to make a donation to Falklands charities. Captain Kooiker said: "When the Dintelstroom was taken in service three years ago we donated money to Stanley Sea Cadets and Stanley Seamen's Mission."

Chief Fire Officer and a trustee of the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund Gardner Fiddes, receiving the £1000 cheque said: "It is a privilege to be able to accept this donation."

Training and education manager

Cheque presentation by the tugs at Mare Harbour for the Education Department Eileen Davies, received the second donation of £1000 and said the money will be split between Camp Education, Stanley House and the two schools. Chief Officer Chris Locke, the Queen's Harbour Master, Mare Harbour who was at the presentation with his wife Nancy said: "It is great that the local community is able to benefit from the generosity of our Dutch tug company Van WijnGaarden."

Sunshine and memories

Falklands residents and British Forces remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice in the war of 1982

A BRIGHT blue sky and flat calm conditions provided a magnificent backdrop for the 31st commemoration of Liberation day on Friday and was in complete contrast to the previous year when troops had marched from the church to the memorial in a blizzard.

A well attended thanksgiving service was held in Christchurch Cathedral where the Rev Richard Hines drew on the memories of islanders in 1982 and recounted some amusing anecdotes which demonstrated the true British spirit of those who endured the Argentine occupation.

The Falkland Islands Defence Force was joined by the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force as well as the Royal British Legion and Associations, youth groups and 1982 veterans.

The marching troops were welcomed to the 1982 Memorial on Thatcher Drive with a round of applause from the hundreds of residents surrounding the area.

Following prayers His Excellency the Governor Nigel Haywood and MLA Roger Edwards laid wreaths as well as Chief of Staff Group Captain Steve Ward, veteran association representatives, relatives and others. The Falkland Islands Government hosted a public reception in the Town Hall after the parade past the memorial.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

'I wish I'd said that!' - Witty replies

The aging but still active French comedian, Maurice Chevalier, was asked how he felt about old age. 'I prefer it' he said 'to the alternative.'

A young man was telling a wordly wise widow about his quarrel with his girlfriend.

'Well,' she remarked, 'there is nothing for it. You will have to admit you were wrong and apologise.'

'But,' exclaimed the young man, 'haven't you been listening? I was in the right she was in the wrong.'

'If that really is so,' replied the widow, 'you will have to take some flowers as well.'

'What do you think of publishing as a career?'

Choosing the Right Wines

The wine you choose shouldn't have to taste of typical mothball overtones, oozing a slight hint of road tar, the wiff of well ridden saddle leather, supplemented with the dryness of pencil shavings, gravel dust, animal fur (be it wild, feral or domestic) and everything else mother told you not to put in your mouth.

That's why at THE CHANDLERY we choose wines that flirt with perfection; offering exciting aromas of meadow flowers, soft spices, smoked game, sumptuous black fruits, beautifully integrated acidity and silky tannins with no hard edges

Penguins logo

PENGUINS domination of Falklands' Dek Hockey continues. Prior to their victory against Blackhawks on Sunday, Penguins secured their place in the club's history with an astonishing 20 to zero victory against Hurricanes on Tuesday, June 11.

Ninety seconds into the game they were already three goals ahead. "Of the eight records standing before the game Penguins broke seven of them, and two were all time records," said Falkland Islands Dek Hockey Club Secretary, Martyn Barlow.

It is a clear demonstration of the strength of the current team that even winning all their matches has not stopped them aiming to improve.

Rookie of the team, Sarah Shepherd, is currently the highest scoring female and shows no sign of slowing down, adding another two points to her player standings.

"Before the season started the most goals a player had ever scored in one game was seven; Kyran Evans has broken this on two occasions," said Mr Barlow.

Kyran now holds the season records for most assists and has scored more hat-tricks than anyone has at this stage of the league.

Joining him in the top four of the player tables are Penguin outfielders Duane Evans, Kevin Ross and Ricardo Leyton.

The huge winning margin of twenty goals obliterated the previous record of most goals scored by a team, and the record for biggest winning margin that had been standing for years, since Canadian Craig Dockrill had the club's statistics at his mercy.

Penguins' Captain Marcus Morrison is beaming with pride, he has a talented group of players but says they have worked hard to produce a cohesive team ethic.

"They have been excellent this year," said Mr Morrison. "The team's ethos is to pass and move at all times, defend as a unit and to simply work hard for each other until the final buzzer," a tactic that proves to be working, but added, for them it is mainly about having fun and enjoying the game.

In their last seven games they have scored 71 goals, with only 14 goals against them. They seem "unstoppable," said Mr Barlow, noting that Penguins have also equalled the all-time record of consecutive wins, "but it seems like they are going to break that too."

Glory for Falklands
Archery in Guernsey

PROVING that with dedication and hard work anything is possible, Falklands Archery Club which has only existed 19 months, has scooped a handful of successes at the Guernsey Games this week.

The Falkland Islands team: Joanne Lazo, Javier Lazo, Justin McPhee, Stephanie Thain, Mark Lewis and Jason Lewis is the first to compete internationally for the Falklands in archery, and it was a busy first day of competition on Monday with a FITA (144 arrows at four different distances) starting at 90 metres for the men and 70 metres for the ladies.

GB coach Tony Drabble's pre-tournament clearly paid off said Club Secretary Jo Lazo, they won the Recurve Team bronze medal, only narrowly missing out on the silver won by Orkney; Guernsey won gold.

Stephanie Thain came fifth in the Ladies Recurve and Mark Lewis and Javier Lazo came fourth and sixth in the Mens Recurve. "All the team scored personal bests and did the Falklands proud," said Mrs Lazo.

There were individual and team head-to-head competitions on Tuesday. Javier performed well, coming fourth in the Mens Recurve competition, and joined up with Stephanie, and Mark to claim fourth in the team head-to-head. In the mixed pairs competition Jason won first and Jo second when they paired with players from Guernsey, and Justin came fourth with his partner from the Isle of Mann.

The team agreed the tournament was a great experience for the club and was also an opportunity to spread the Falklands message: "Falklands got the biggest cheer and we have made lots of good friends," said Mrs Lazo.

"Guernsey has made us incredibly welcome and a special thanks must go to Steve Yates and the Bowman of Guernsey."

Archery was not selected to be a tournament in the 2013 Bermuda NatWest Island Games, so competitors from around the competing small islands gathered for their own tournament in Guernsey to pit themselves against each other in their own Games.

This is their first international competition, and their biggest to date, but we hope to see more from the team as they fly the flag with pride, confident in their ability to impress on the global stage.

At the time of going to print the team still had two days of competition left which will be in next week's Penguin News, or follow updates online at the Falklands Archery Facebook page.

Pension payments not pursued

ANY retirement pension payment processed before the date of death of the retiree will not be pursued for recovery, it was agreed at the Standing Finance Committee this week. Any payment processed after the date of death will only be pursued, "following the application of an appropriate level of discretion."

Financial Secretary Nicola Granger explained that if the Treasury was notified of a death in a reasonable amount of time then the payment owing would not be pursued. This would be in order not to cause unnecessary stress to the family at a difficult time. Payment would be pursued if government was not notified of the death.

Also at the meeting approval was given for transfers to Special Funds to improve the stability of the Capital Equalisation Fund, Pensions (Old Scheme) Fund and Retirement Pensions Fund.

Reasonable impact on rent shows government report

THE three per cent increase on government (FIG) rentals will mean an overall proportional increase of 0.5 per cent in household income spent on rent.

According to Policy Unit analysis of the increase agreed as part of the last budget, on average in 2012 FIG rental households spent 17.7 per cent of household income on rent. With the three per cent increase this figure will rise to 18.2 per cent.

In a paper presented to the Standing Finance Committee on Wednesday the analysis also showed that the impact on households renting privately was slightly more significant. On average, households renting privately spend 25.5 per cent of household income on rent and this figure rises to 25.9 per cent with the FIG rent increase. It was noted that although government cannot influence the cost of private rentals the increase may have a 'knock on' effect.

One reason for undertaking the analysis was to ascertain whether any households would be forced to spend what government considers an unacceptable amount (40 per cent) of income on rent. The report shows that this is not the case. The largest proportional increase in rental expenditure would be for households earning between £10,000 - £15,000 and £15,001 - £20,000 where the average increase in expenditure would be 0.6 per cent. This figure has been offset by the increase in personal allowances and increased welfare support from FIG.

In order to identify the above information a comparison between data held by the Public Works Department and that captured by the Census was undertaken.

Theft charges

STANLEY woman Veronica Mieres Tromo (34) appeared in court on Wednesday after she had been charged with a further 18 counts of theft on Tuesday.

Miss Mieres previously appeared in court on June 6, for 15 charges of theft after members of the public who employed her from the company Easy Clean had noticed items of jewellery were missing. A police search of her home recovered several items which had been reported missing.

No plea has been entered for any of the 33 charges to date.

Defence lawyer Keith Watson suggested it would be more convenient for the court to deal with all the matters together and the case was adjourned until July 5, when the charges will be put to Miss Mieres and a plea entered.

Miss Mieres was released on bail with the condition her passport continues to be held by the police.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WHILE words like flourishing, vibrant and developing are often inserted with liberal enthusiasm into Falklands promotional material, if not actually inaccurate, it does create an image (in my mind at least) that we're all running around investing, initiating, designing and devising like a bunch of wild-eyed entrepreneurial maniacs.

The truth is, as one of the former detectives (employed by the RFP for seven weeks) pointed out in a PN interview this week, most of us live and work at "a different pace," a gentler gait, compared to the cities and societies that those three gents originate from. Before I set off any teeth gnashing, and the poor chaps get run out of town, they weren't suggesting we are a bunch of gap toothed, drooling hicks, kicking our heels on the back porch; quite the contrary. In fact from their wistful expressions I'm quite certain they would have truly appreciated the odd infusion of a less frantic pace into their long, city based police careers.

It did set me thinking though, that putting to one side all of the evolving, progressing and 'going forward' talk, how slowly do things actually happen in the Falklands?

Using the report on roles and remuneration of Legislative Assembly Members as inspiration I flicked back through Penguin News in search of the dates on which particular issues were raised, and discovered an editorial I had written in 1997 which referred to growing interest in having full-time councillors. Not only that, I had rather optimistically suggested the idea was, "growing momentum," hmm. Sixteen years on we've reached the recommendation stage. Oh well nobody can say we don't think things through thoroughly.

Another issue raised in the remuneration paper that caught PN's imagination resulted in the recommendation: "Departments should be more proactive and approachable in responding to reasonable requests from the public." As it happens, government departments are generally pretty good at getting back to us at Penguin News, well, mostly.

Two months ago on May 7, we sent a question to FIG's Human Resources, on the matter of whether or not government recruitment had been affected to its detriment as a result of Human Resources' response times to applicants being too slow. On June 3, they told us they hadn't forgotten us. We still don't have an answer. Or perhaps we do?

There are probably countless examples, taken from that remuneration paper alone, that one could use to illustrate our gentle pace, after all just how long have we been debating the subject of 'open debate' in the Assembly? I can't actually remember a time when we didn't.

So to those of you amongst us worrying that Falklands' life will change too speedily.... Don't panic, I'm not convinced we'd know how.

Archery catches on with cubs

MEMBERS of the Falklands' cub youth group will have taken inspiration from the success of Falklands' archers in Guernsey last week, during their very first 'have a go at archery' courtesy of the Infant and Junior School (IJS/CE) Archery Club and Falklands Archery Association (FAA).

Cub leader Jan Miller said: "To ensure everyone got a fair chance at trying the new sport, the cubs came along in two groups on two separate evenings."

"For many it was their first time shooting a bow and all were quickly doing well and soon hitting the targets. Lots of archery potential here," said Jan.

She sends thanks to head teacher Karen Steen and the IJS/CE Archery Club for allowing the school hall to be used, and to Major Peter Biggs of the FIDF for allowing the FAA to host the cubs. She said: "To the leaders from the First Falkland Scouts and others that turned up to help, especially Tom Hill who did a wonderful job making sure that the right cub was on the right spot ready to shoot at the right time, a big thank you in the tradition of the cubs. More youth group news on page 9."

Baroness Thatcher memorial

THE recent public consultation on how to most appropriately commemorate the late Baroness Thatcher received a record number of responses, which is testament to the high regard that Lady Thatcher is held in the Falkland Islands.

Assembly Member Roger Edwards said that more than 140 responses offering a wide range of suggestions were received, from infrastructure projects and renaming buildings, to scholarships and prizes.

"One suggestion received a clear majority, however before we continue, we wanted to inform Margaret Thatcher's family of our plans and ensure that they are content for us to proceed."

"As such we have written to the family, and will formally announce the decision once we have received a response," said MLA Edwards.

Shackleton awards

FOUR academic scholarships have been awarded by the Shackleton Scholarship Fund (SSF) for 2013, covering scientific and historical subjects.

Dr Michael Tabak from the University of Wyoming received £2,000 for a study on the eradication of rats (Rattus norvegicus) from the Falkland Islands. Part of this work will assess the danger of 're-invasion' by rats of islands already cleared by determining the ability of rats to swim considerable distances. Dr Tabak undertook work in the Islands in March 2013 and his project should be complete by March 2014.

Andrew Mathews, who is working for an MSc at Aberystwyth University, plans to spend two months in the Islands from June studying the benthic (sea-floor) community structure in the shallow water environment at Adventure Sound. He will work closely with the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute who will contribute office space and other support. He will receive £2,000 from the SSF.

Ezequiel Mercau is a PhD student at Copenhagen University. He was born in Argentina and took a BA in University College Dublin. He has been awarded £2,500 to study his project - the Falklands War and British Identity. He plans to visit the Islands in October and November 2013 to interview Members of the Legislative Assembly and Islanders generally and to work in the Jane Cameron National Archives.

Finally, Dr Stephen Palmer has been awarded £2,000 to pursue two historical topics: first the European Space Research Organisation (ESRO) in Stanley and second, the ships and vessels of the Falkland Islands Company. Dr Palmer, who was Canon of Stanley Cathedral in the 1990s, will visit the Islands in January 2014. He has received two previous awards from the SSF for research which led to the publication of articles for the Falkland Islands Journal.

No Quality of Life Awards were made this year. These have included top class sports coaches in swimming, golf, fly fishing, shooting and horsemanship; musicians and artists in previous years and are aimed at enhancing the quality of life for Islanders.

The SSF would like to remind scholars and other possible applicants that the 'Flagship' Scholarship of £10,000 to mark the centenary of Sir Ernest Shackleton's 1914 Endurance expedition is available. The closing date for applications is September 15 2013.

Check out www.shackletonfund.com for more information and to find out what previous scholars have achieved.

Enquiry into oil spill

ASSEMBLY Members have assured there will be an enquiry into the recent disposal of oil within Mary Hill Quarry at Cape Pembroke.

MLA Gavin Short said he had written to the Government Chief Executive Keith Padgett to explore the best way for an enquiry to be conducted, suggesting that it needed to be independent and made public to ensure there was no question of any sort of cover-up.

At Monday's public meeting East Falkland farmer Leon Mitchell said he hoped someone was going to be held accountable and prosecuted, just as they would if it was a fishing company spilling fuel at sea. "We need to show people that we take things of this nature seriously, and show that it does not matter if it's one of our own or an outsider. Both should be dealt with," he said.

Deputy Director of Public Works Colin Summers reported this week that the clean up within Mary Hill was proceeding well with the area contained and absorbent pads in place to aid the removal of the oil. "The pads take between 12 and 24 hours to fully absorb any material so the gang is currently replacing them every other day with daily inspections being carried out," he said.

The water in the upper pond is nearly free from oil and the plan was to widen the grip between the upper and lower pond to try and encourage all the remaining floating oil into the lower pond, explained Mr Summers.

He added: "This will then allow us to clean and remove the remaining contamination from the banks of the upper pond and thus allow us to focus our attention on the management of the lower pond."

Clean up of the second spillage into the outer ponds is reported to be progressing slowly, but is now fenced and contained.

"Absorbent pads are less effective on the light diesel fuel but have been used to the best of their ability."

"Due to the small and isolated nature of the ponds the dispersal of this material is likely to take time. With consultation from Falklands Conservation it was decided not to attempt to add a dispersal agent but to isolate and monitor the area," said Mr Summers.

As to whether suitable clean up materials were held in stock by FIG and if there was enough to cope should another incident occur, Mr Summers said suitable materials had been readily available from FIG stocks to deal with the Mary Hill incident.

He said however that a point had now been reached where supplies were at a level where there was a need to retain the remaining supply in case of an incident in an area such as FIPASS.

"We do have stocks of oilsorb for dealing with road hard standing spillages and we have been able to source similar absorbent pad materials from the military at Mount Pleasant where reasonable supplies are available to us upon request," said Mr Summers, adding that FIG was also looking to re-stock.

Campers descend on Stanley

THE Stanley population will increase somewhat next week when farmers make their way to town for the annual Rural Business Association Farmers Week.

The week will be launched in style with a Business Expo at Stanley Town Hall, made all the more attractive with a free breakfast in the refreshment room. Anyone can attend the event and Stanley residents are welcome to take a look at the business displays and catch up with Campers.

Monday will include the RBA Committee meeting, lunch at Hillside Camp, the WoolCo meeting, a talk on farm mapping and later the RBA Annual General Meeting. Premier Oil is providing smoko for the first three days of Farmers Week, and Monday evening will end with the RBA party at the Narrows Bar where members will enjoy the company of invited guests.

Hopefully not too many hangers-on will result as the farmers will be undertaking FIGAS fire training first thing the next morning, however the blow will be softened with smoko provided by FIGAS. A Rural Development Strategy talk on the subject of power will fill late morning and FIDC will provide lunch. Further talks that afternoon comprise RBA representation on Boards and Committees, FIDC and FIMCo.

Wednesday and Thursday will be largely utilised by the Department of Agriculture hosting discussions, and meals, but will also include talks by Cable and Wireless, Falklands Conservation,

Young musicians entertain at last year's variety show

Fire and Rescue, plus farmers' discussions on ditching and beef finishing. HE the Governor will host a reception in the evening at Government House followed by Falklands Conservation's annual curry night.

On Friday Members of Legislative Assembly will face questions from farmers before lunch and then information provided by Workboat Services.

After lunch there will be a farmers discussion on prevention of land erosion and later an RDS meeting. The Camp Education Dance will take place in the Town Hall at 9pm.

Nick drums his way to final

ISLANDER Nick Roberts and his band The Catchpenny Broadcast have made their way to the final of the Chichester Battle of the Bands.

Son of Stanley residents Dave and Leona Roberts, Nick is the drummer of the band which is due to perform in the final on July 13 at the Chichester Inn having beat competition of more than 20 other bands. Check out The Catchpenny Broadcast on Facebook.

Legislative Assembly Diary

MLA Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into the work of a member of the Legislative Assembly

NO surprises emerged in New-York last week but as always much hard work was done by our representatives and others in lobbying beforehand so that member countries' representatives could not plead ignorance when supporting the resolution. As usual just a couple of brave and principled member countries spoke in support of our right to self-determination, ironic when you consider exactly that is the committee's raison d'être.

Management of the common, part of which is a nature reserve, is becoming more pressing if it is to support the recreational activities of a growing population. I've visited a great many reserves elsewhere and with a bit of vision and foresight some glorious areas have been preserved for today and for future generations. We are in a position now where I believe that a bit of careful thought and the framing of some simple rules could improve conditions for all users. There should not be just one group dictating the rules. I hope recent events will concentrate minds and the will to do something about it.

As last month's Exco was for urgent items only we have a heavier agenda this month on which I'll be reporting. The group who have been doing the consultation and work on the shape of MLA roles in the future will report their findings midweek. Apart from that and the usual end of month meetings it is a relatively quiet week. Next week includes a full morning question and answer session for farmers.

The charge for overseas medical treatment was raised at the public meeting and I have had representations from several people where they believe it has been applied unfairly. MLA's were very clear when it was introduced to replace the £400 'elective referral' charge that it should not cause hardship. Unfortunately the threshold set seems to be doing just that. People have also questioned the fact that it is being charged for referrals for ongoing conditions rather than new ones. I believe we should look at a fairer system but in the meantime please do not shoot the messengers, they are just applying the policy.

Organised as a fund raiser by the Christchurch Cathedral the bulk of the funds, some £851 was raised on the ever popular raffle, but there was no less fun to be had with the age old favourites such as guess the number of sweets in a jar, treasure hunt, name the teddy, tombola and the book stall.

The Reverend Richard Hines said it was an excellent result given the weather on the day and thanked one and all for their contribution to the event.

TB cause of seaman's death

INDONESIAN seaman Mukta-din died from natural causes as a result of disseminated tuberculosis Her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley recorded on Tuesday. Mr Mukta-din (35) a crewman on the Her Hung 12 died at sea on April 28.

He had first reported as ill to the Captain of the ship on April 1, when medical advice had been sought from Indonesia and medication administered. On April 27 he again appeared ill, became delirious and the decision to head for Stanley was made.

Crew members pronounced Mr Mukta-din dead at 18.40 on April 28 and a post mortem was carried out by Dr John Clarke at the KEMH on May 16.

Tuberculosis was found to be severe and widespread throughout Mr Mukta-din's body. Dr John Clarke said Mr Mukta-din was highly infected with the disease and could have spread it to other crew members.

Mr Gumsley assured that once the preliminary diagnosis had been made those who had been in contact had been informed of the risk of infection.

Mr Gumsley said he could only wonder at the pain and suffering Mr Mukta-din would have endured in the days leading to his death.

He said it was the second crewman inquest he had conducted with the outcome being severe tuberculosis, adding that he hoped the local authorities would take note and when carrying out routine inspections would ensure that the crew were sufficiently well to carry out the work required of them and that their human rights were taken into consideration.

More claims for rent rebate

CLAIMS for FIG rent rebate have increased from 50 in May 2012 to 60 receiving rebates in May 2013.

Head of Falkland Islands Government Finance Lydia Morrison informed Standing Finance Committee of the increase at the committee meeting on Wednesday.

Assembly Members had requested more detail regarding the levels of rent rebates following a request for a virement for an additional £30,000.

Asked how rebates were applied, Financial Secretary Nicola Granger explained that individual circumstances were examined. Those might include how many children a family had, their income or if they were a pensioner.

She indicated that because of the differing circumstances a single reason why an increased number of persons had a reduced income could not be given.

Back on the beat for retired UK detectives on Falklands tour

THREE former CID detectives from the United Kingdom next week bring to a close a seven week tour with the Royal Falkland Islands Police (RFIP).

The three, Philip Cooper, Philip Testor and Paul Woodward, who have been passing on their many years of experience to Falklands police officers, were recruited via recruitment agency G4S by the RFIP to cover for local officers undertaking an intense six week probationary course.

Being back in uniform was "refreshing," they said, adding that they had very much enjoyed being in a rural setting, and had taken advantage of opportunities to see many parts of the Islands.

The pace of life in the Falklands is, "massively different," to the one they experienced as detectives, they said, but added that once something does happen it becomes, "very busy" as unlike in the UK, in the Falklands the police officers complete their own paperwork without administration support.

Asked what the main differences were between their former work and their tasks in the Falklands, Paul said: "Back at home we'd be dealing with theft or assault, here we're required to be ambulance dispatcher and the fire brigade dispatcher, if there's a problem at sea you are the controller; things that wouldn't necessarily be considered police work in the UK."

All three agreed that they were impressed at how the RFIP operated with their, "limited resources."

Exchanges at C24

SIERRA Leone, a member of the United Nations Special Committee on Decolonisation maintains that the rights of Falkland Islanders, should be paramount to any settlement, and that self-determination is the guiding principle of any resolution to the question.

"There is no dispute that the people are the holders of the right to self-determination," said Sierra Leone delegate Ambassador Osman Kamara.

Ambassador Kamara fully supported accepting the outstanding invitation extended to the C24 to visit the Falklands to assess the situation on the ground. The C24 continues to ignore the invitation made by the Falklands Government.

At the meeting held last week the Argentine Foreign Minister Hector Timerman claimed Argentina was willing to overcome the dispute through dialogue, but said a resolution was held, "hostage in London."

As reported last week, the Falkland Islands was represented by MLAs Sharon Halford and Mike Summers.

Frozen UK pension? Let Roger know

ARE you receiving a frozen UK retirement pension?

Former UK residents who qualify for UK pensions have their pensions frozen at the point of first receipt, a situation which applies only to Commonwealth countries and Overseas Territories MLA Roger Edwards told Penguin News. The Falkland Islands Government is involved in lobbying on behalf of those people penalised because they live in the Falkland Islands.

MLA Edwards said he had been advised by the UK Department for Works and Pensions that, as of November 2012, up to 80 people living in the Falkland Islands are in receipt of a UK Retirement (Old Age) Pension.

He said this is an, "iniquitous situation for if they lived in, for example, the United States of America or Afghanistan, the pension amount would be topped up annually, as in the UK itself."

He said he had personally raised the, "unjust situation," with the Chancellor of the Exchequer George Osborne, "and, needless to say, there is a very active movement across Commonwealth countries and Overseas Territories to resolve the matter."

MLA Edwards said in order to proceed, however, "we now need to establish the true extent of the problem. Unfortunately our own pensions office does not hold the necessary details, thus he would appreciate if anyone receiving a frozen UK retirement pension (or anyone who knows of someone in this situation) would get in touch with him either by telephone or email."

He added: "my thanks for any help that you are able to give."

The situation regarding frozen pensions has been raised by members of the public at an number of public meetings held with Members of the Assembly.

In April 2013 Executive Council approved the following changes to FIGAS Flight Policy beginning 01 July 2013.

- Up to two early morning flights with a fixed departure time of 08:30 covering flights to all destinations
- Up to two flights following on with variable departure times at or earlier than 12:00 mid-day, subject to customer demands and covering flights to all destinations
- One afternoon flight to follow on with a variable departure time, subject to customer demand and will cover flights to all destinations
- Additionally, during the summer season only, there will be, subject to demand a late afternoon follow on flight
- The revised summer season flight programme begins on 01 September and ends 30 April each year (eight months). This is a seven day week operation
- During the summer season, flights will operate on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday regardless of load limit. Remaining days will be subject to normal planning to ensure economical loads
- FIGAS will honour all return flight bookings, especially where a return flight is jeopardised by the cancellation of fellow passengers which, under normal circumstances, renders the flight uneconomical to operate
- Capped Resident Fares and Capped Resident Fares (Outer Islands) to remain at 2012/2013 levels but all other rates and tariffs increase by 10%
- Capped residents baggage will stay the same at the same 14kgs per person and standard fares will also stay the same at 20kgs per person, anything over this will be charged at £1.40 per kilo as of the 1st July 2013
- Concessionary freight rates are to be removed from existing beneficiaries and will be offered only to the outer islands

Further information can be obtained from the FIGAS General Manager, Morgan Goss either on 27220 or mgoss@figas.gov.fk

Falklands united as a political community thus a 'micro-nation' says professor

THE "orthodox" view that the referendum was little more than British voters choosing to remain British, as pedalled by the Argentine government, is not enough to explain the result of the Falkland Islands referendum argues Professor Peter Willetts in his 'A Report on the Referendum on the Political Status of the Falkland Islands'.

Professor Willetts who was in the Islands to witness the referendum on behalf of the South Atlantic Council states in his report: "New tables from the Falklands census show that 11.0 per cent of the referendum electorate were neither born in the Islands nor in Britain. Almost certainly, some 100 to 150 foreign-born individuals, or perhaps more, voted Yes."

In a variety of international forums the Argentine government has dismissed the referendum claiming the Falklands people are nothing more than a British 'implanted' population and therefore not entitled to the right of self determination, as they are guaranteed to vote for British sovereignty.

Professor Willetts says the idea of holding a referendum was the Islanders' response to the increasing pressure they faced from Argentine President Cristina Kirchner, pursuing a sovereignty claim over the Falklands, but, he concludes the President achieved the direct opposite of her intentions.

Instead of weakening and isolating the Falkland Islanders, they were strengthened and given a stronger basis for appealing to the global political community for support, says Professor Willetts. "Ironically, President Kirchner has guaranteed that there will be no settlement of the dispute during her presidency and she has made it much more difficult for her successors to have any possibility of being trusted as potential negotiating partners. The Islanders have become so united as a political community they should be called a 'micro-nation'."

Professor Willetts agrees with the official Referendum International Observation Mission that procedures for a free and secret ballot were scrupulously followed and the result accurately represented the collective choice of the electorate.

It cannot be reasonably argued by the Argentine Government that there was any unfair bias against their sovereignty claim. However, he suggests the Falkland Islands Government (FIG) information about the referendum, sent out to every voter, was "highly prejudicial against voting No to support independence."

The three No votes are widely believed to have been pro-independence and not pro-Argentine. Professor Willetts does not support independence or any other specific option for the future of the Falklands, but he recognises the referendum result has forcefully asserted the right of the Falkland Islanders to have their wishes respected. The Islanders will have to be participants if any negotiations about the future of the Islands are resumed, he says.

He adds that among the whole census population of 2,840 people, 8.9 per cent do not have British citizenship; 24.8 per cent were neither born in the Islands nor born in the United Kingdom, and 24.0 per cent do not chose British or Falkland Islander, when asked to "describe their national identity." These figures cover both people with Falkland Islands Status (FIS), who could vote, and immigrants on work or residence permits, who could not vote.

He explains it is not necessary to be a British citizen to have the vote. New immigrants, who have been in the Islands long enough, are able to apply to belong to the community, to gain FIS and to vote.

Professor Willetts has invented the term 'Incorporated Islanders', to cover people who have been granted Falkland Islands Status, who were neither born in the Falklands nor born in the UK. He then asked the census office for an extra table counting the number of Incorporated Islanders. The answer was 182 people from 58 other countries provided 11 per cent of the referendum electorate.

Given eight per cent of the electorate did not vote, then simple arithmetic proves that a minimum of three per cent or at least 45 individuals who voted Yes were foreign-born.

The largest minorities were St Helenians and Chileans, he notes, but there were also 18 Argentines on the electoral register. These new Islanders are committed to their new country. Over 100 have also chosen to become British citizens, alongside the 42 St Helenian voters who are British. Only one third of the foreign-born Islanders chose their former country as their national identity in the census and two thirds have changed to being an Islander or British or having joint identity.

Professor Willetts deduces, not just 45, but most of the 182 Incorporated Islanders voted Yes with the same enthusiasm as the longer established population.

Professor Willetts is a founder member of the South Atlantic Council, set up in December 1983, to 'promote better communication and understanding between Argentina, Britain and Falkland Islanders'.

What roads?

WHILST the road designation coming in place to improve road safety in the Falklands and reduce accidents can only be a good thing, I cannot see how you can possibly class some of the 'all weather tracks' that we have to endure, as roads. Surely our Government has a responsibility to ensure all roads are in a safe condition at all times, which isn't the case at the moment. On some sections which are known to be particularly bad during winter, drivers have been known to leave the road and drive on the old Camp tracks or even use their own equipment to try and flatten out some of the bad ruts. By all means try to improve road safety, but please build us some roads to drive on first.

Summer farce

ALBEIT late, I write in support of Eric Goss' recent letter on time issues.

Yes it was some MLAs who championed the current situation we are in - but the main cause was the convenient 'mislaying' by the Secretariat of a petition from a lot of those who depend on morning daylight for their jobs, coupled with a suitably confusing wording of the question - on the time issue in the census. The old adage ruled, 'You want an answer? Word the question accordingly to get the answer you want'.

Certainly the farce of pretending it is summertime in winter costs this business money; and continually apologising to clients for later deliveries as we cannot see to start work until halfway through the mornings.

Falklands wool in centenary celebration tapestry

FALKLANDS wool has been included in a large and magnificent tapestry transposing Victoria Crowe's celebrated painting 'Large Tree Group' (1975).

Commissioned by Edinburgh's prestigious Dovecot Studios on Infirmary Street, it celebrates their centenary. Dovecot Studios is one of the world's leading tapestry studios and an international centre for tapestry as a contemporary art form.

The masterpiece has been created using exclusively undyed British wool from 70 producers, across a range of sheep breeds including Corriedale hogget fleece wool from Gonz Hobman and Helen Wallace's Albermarle Station clip, provided by Falkland Wool Growers Ltd. The work has been on public display throughout the weaving process. The finished tapestry, completed after hundreds of hours of careful work by Dovecot's master weavers, will be at the heart of the studio's exhibition from August 2 to September 14, 2013.

Winter warmer helps badminton to Bermuda

A FULL badminton team of ten players will be heading for Bermuda for the NatWest Island Games thanks to the generosity of sponsors through the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association, added to by funds raised on Saturday night at the Bermuda Winter Warmer held in the Town Hall.

Rosemarie King explained that three of the team were new to international tournaments: "Louise Williams our junior player, plus Anastasia Markina and Joe Clarke. Ross Stewart (14) attended the games as a junior two years ago in the Isle of Wight, and this time will attend as a senior player; and seasoned players, Doug Clark, Mike Brownlee, Anna Luxton, Duane March, Cheryl March and Laura Minto."

The majority of the team will arrive in Bermuda on July 7 ready for the Opening Ceremony on

Ralph Harris shows skills in the limbo event

July 12. With temperatures expected somewhere around 40C with high humidity, and no air conditioning in the Badminton venue, "the conditions will be interesting," said Rosemarie.

Attendees of the winter warmer on the weekend were pushed through their paces with a series of entertaining games including tug-o-war, egg and spoon race, hoola-hoops, badminton and football dribblers.

The evening began with a buffet from Shorty's Diner providing fuel for the guests to throw themselves into the later events.

Music was provided by the Pushers, with a guest appearance from student drummer Reece Harris (15) who replaced veteran drummer Pete King on a number of tracks. Reece is being tutored by Pete in drumming and the young man is working towards his Grade 5 qualification.

Rosie said: "I know from listening in on Ant Tuson (bass guitar) that he was very, very comfortable with Reece drumming and didn't even think about it being his first session. As for me, I hadn't even noticed they had changed drummers."

Rosie added, "On behalf of the Stanley Badminton Club and families a huge thank you to all for attending the event." She also thanked the sponsors of FIOGA for their generosity.

Creativity, ice-cream and movies for sleepy rainbows

TEN rainbows (the youngest members of the Girl Guide association) had a sleep over at the Beauchene complex headquarters on Friday; their aim to earn their 'overnight' badge.

Rainbow Leader Karin Sanchez, Girl Guide commissioner Cherie Clifford and Andrea Stanworth bravely supervised the event which included a packed programme of events. The girls began the evening's activities creating friendship bracelets. Even before their fish and chip supper, the girls were keen to get into their pyjamas and sleeping bags to watch a movie projected onto the wall. After midnight most were fast asleep although two stayed awake until a tremendous 1:20am.

Other activities included making decorations with hama beads, baking cakes and decorating bags to put all their goodies in to take home. The girls all agreed their favourite part of the evening was the opportunity to sleep in their sleeping bags with their friends and the chocolate penguin ice-cream!

Shaken but not stirred cubs crack codes and complete secret missions

NOT to be outdone by the rainbows, on the longest night of the year the cubs held their annual Winter Wake Over at the Scout Hut. The theme this year was James Bond/ Special Agents. Leader Jan Miller said: "We were really impressed at how many smart James Bonds turned up in their dinner jackets also some really sinister sneaky special agents too."

Their first task was to earn the 'On Her Majesty's Secret Cub Scout Service Agent cards', which involved cracking codes in morse, semaphore and maritime flags, and pass a taste and memory test.

A tea of sandwiches followed, along with jelly and cakes and cocktails, specially shaken by Tyrone. After a roulette team relay game came the secret mission relay involving carrying their hand grenade under laser beams and across a river full of piranhas before hitting the target with the grenade.

Tents were then pitched and kit stowed and the final game of the night was slug racing in sleeping bags, then into tents for midnight feasts and endless chatter until the last one fell asleep at 2am. Right: Cub secret service and inset Tyrone prepares the cocktails.

A splattering of fun at FICS Gala

ROSS house swam away with a FICS Swimming Gala victory last Friday with a whopping 108 points. Second was Fitzroy with 99 points closely followed by Shackleton with 97 points.

The swim team heading to Bermuda for the NatWest Island Games this month all did very well, especially Daniel Clarke who won all four of his races.

Stanley Swimming Club swimmers Chris Stenning, James Tyrrell, Louise Williams, Emily Barker and Jessica Whalley-King won two races each.

The event went swimmingly, and despite the chilly pool temperature, the cheering was warm and spirits were high with the students keen to compete and have fun with school mates ahead of the end of term holiday.

FICS PE Teacher Ruth Kemp said it was great to see so much enthusiasm: "It was good to see so many of the students taking part and stepping up to the mark to make sure their team did the best they could."

"A big thank you to the students and teachers who took part, and a huge well done to Ross house."

This was Ms Kemp's last big event at the Community School as she leaves the Islands in August, but she told Penguin News that she thoroughly enjoyed her time in the Falklands and hopes to come back soon.

First prize winner Susana Hall in her costume made entirely from Surf Bay kelp on the day

Mid-winter dash and splash

POSTPONED for a day due to the MPA road closure, the annual mid-winter swim was blessed with the best possible weather conditions on Sunday.

A variety of costumes were gradually revealed as the time to charge straight out into the South Atlantic drew near and so it was that cool cats, Roman legionnaires, school girls and even Buzz Light-year were under starters orders at 1pm.

Exactly 100 soon to be certified insane swimmers dashed into the freezing cold surf complying with the rule of having to get their hair wet before with a mighty roar they turned like the tide and rolled back up the beach.

Earning much admiration as well as first prize for her inventive costume was yachts woman Susana Hall who had painstakingly created skirt, top, head dress and jewellery from the kelp and shells she had collected from the beach that morning. The Roman Legion complete with slave made up of Royal Engineers and led by Mike Atkinson claimed the prize for the best group costumes.

The event raised more than £500 to be shared equally between the Seamen's Mission and the Falkland Islands Community School fund for school trips.

Event organiser FICS teacher Emma Brook reported that she had been relieved to see the seal which had been patrolling the waves earlier in the day move off before the swim took place.

She thanked all those who had helped with the organisation of the event; Trev Law for helping erect the tents, John and Cherie Clifford for their generators, urns and knowledge and to all the other helpers particularly the children who worked hard to ensure it all went smoothly.

"Well done to all who took part, it's great to see mid-winter madness is still alive and well out there," said Mrs Brook

Report on roles and remuneration of Legislative Assembly Members

June 6, 2013

by Richard Cockwell,
Lewis Clifton &
Justin McPhee

TERMS OF REFERENCE:

1. The panel to have regard to the role of MLAs and the scope of their responsibilities, together with the scheme of their remuneration and allowances
2. The panel to consider whether there are any financial hindrances to standing for election and suggest options that would maximise the pool of potential election.
3. To evaluate the options for remuneration approaches and recommend the most appropriate remuneration option/s and the level of remuneration which should apply.
4. The panel to review whether the current list of politically restricted posts was appropriate.

THE CONSULTATION PROCESS:

The Panel consists of Richard Cockwell (Chair) Lewis Clifton and Justin McPhee. A number of consultations were held: with the general public, the younger members of the community, the Chamber of Commerce and each MLA individually plus a number of individual meetings. During the CPA Regional meeting the opportunity was taken to discuss roles and responsibilities with the Clerks to parliaments who attended which was very useful. During this consultation we have avoided any issues which might involve a change in the Constitution although some recommendations may require changes in the Electoral Ordinance and Regulations or additions to Standing Orders.

During the consultation process it became very clear that the electorate wished to be able to see their elected members not only being full time but also to be taking more individual responsibility for their involvement in the process of decision making.

At this moment the electorate see decisions as being made by all members of the Assembly despite the fact that some members may have actually disagreed with the final consensual decision. This does not encourage the electorate to understand the decision making process or be able to make informed choices of preferred candidates when called on to vote in an election. The electorate should be able to vote for candidates based on their performance rather than solely on their manifesto and persona.

Decision making has to be seen to be democratic which does not necessarily mean consensual, even though the outcome may be the same. The issue of scrutiny within the process of decision making also needs to be addressed as it is a major element in the democratic process. At present there is no forum open to the public - other than occasionally within the Legislative Assembly - where any scrutiny of ExCo decisions, policy and strategy or other decisions can be seen to be undertaken. We wish to recommend improved systems which will enable the general public to have a better understanding of the processes and decision making of their elected representatives.

Despite the fact that it is inevitable that members will - and should - on occasions, meet in private, it is obvious to the Panel that the non statutory GPC meeting in it's present form is not popular with the electorate in general who would like to see more debate in public over issues that will effect their future. When forming our recommendations these issues have been very much at the forefront of our minds and it is on this basis that we have produced recommendations which amongst others, we intend should help to solve the issue of almost all decision making delivered as being apparently consensual.

The Panel are concerned that during their consultations it became apparent that many of the Government's processes of administration are still processes previously established when the Falkland Islands were a Crown Colony. Although the Constitution has been revised, the underlying administration processes do not always reflect the present constitutional role of Elected Members or modern practice. As considering this issue is not under the terms of reference of the Panel it has not been addressed however we believe that this issue should be reviewed as a matter of urgency.

The panel recognises that the recommendations set out below will create a considerable increase in the running costs of the Legislature, however it is deemed necessary if we are to be seen as having an Assembly which is up to date, fit to purpose and democratic. The Assembly's role must be recognised not only within the Islands but also around the world.

We have to stress that the conclusions and recommendations that we are making should not be considered criticism of the dedicated work of either the present MLAs or the Administration but rather an effort to make the organisation of the Assembly business more efficient and fit for purpose for the Falkland Islands in the future, while also trying not to increase the workload of Legislature staff any more than necessary.

ROLE AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF MEMBERS.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are the democratically elected representatives of the Falkland Islands electorate and as such are required to govern the Islands. This being the case, they are the leaders of the Falkland Islands Community and worthy of the recognition and respect that this position deserves.

It should be recognised that a successful period as a member of the Assembly can enhance the career for a politically and energetic minded young person. The experience of taking an active part in the running of ones country coupled with the management experience, portfolio responsibility, representing one's country around the world, with unprecedented opportunities to meet with politicians from across the globe, public relations experience etc. can only enhance the CV of a successful ex Legislative Assembly member.

Other than the Standing Orders and Code of Conduct documents which lay out the debating procedures and behaviour of members, it has not been possible to find a document describing the actual role of MLAs. After consultation with various bodies both within the Islands and with similar small Parliaments overseas, the panel has produced the following list of what we believe to be required of a MLA:

PROFILE OF RESPONSIBILITIES: (CODE OF CONDUCT)

1. To participate constructively and effectively and openly in the good governance of the Falkland Islands and represent the Falkland Islands Assembly at all times and in any place
2. To be a full time member of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly and be available at what ever times and follow regulations set out in the Assembly Standing Orders and Code of Conduct.
3. To be aware of, and understand the Falkland Island Constitution and to conform with the requirements laid out within the Constitution. Standing Orders and Code of Conduct.
4. To be a effective member of the Assembly - which is collectively the ultimate policy-maker for the government of the Falkland Islands - by contributing actively to the formation and scrutiny of the Legislative Assembly's policies, budget, strategies and service delivery including the Island Plan and other national strategies.
5. To champion causes which best relate to the interests and sustainability of the present and future of the Falkland Islands and campaign for improvement of prosperity and quality of life in the community in terms of equity, economy, and the environment.
6. To represent effectively and impartially the constituency to which he or she is elected as well as the Falklands Community in general.
7. To deal with individual constituency enquiries and representations and act as advocate in resolving particular concerns or grievances, while recognising and understanding the correct channels within FIG to deal with such issues.
8. To participate effectively as the Chair or member of any Committee, Sub-Committee, Working Group or other body to which he or she is appointed and to develop and maintain a working knowledge of the Government's services, powers, duties, policies and practices and promote a good working relationship with officers of the Administration.
9. To work closely with the Heads of Department of all their portfolios, to be fully involved in policy and strategy making and understanding the operation of their portfolio in order to act as leader of the Assembly in any decision making committee or board and leading any discussion on the portfolio issues in Legislative Assembly.

10. As Chair of any Advisory Committee; fully consult the lay members of that Committee on policy issues and ensure that the lay members views are reflected in any report.

11. To represent the Legislative Assembly effectively on any outside body to which they are appointed, providing two-way communication between the organisations and presenting to Legislative Assembly a report on the work of that body.

12. To develop and maintain a good working knowledge of all departments and services within the Falkland Island Government Administration.

13. To contribute constructively to open government and generally encourage all sections of the community to participate in the democratic process.

14. To represent the Falkland Islands in what ever fora, conference, interview or political arena that may be required.

SECTION 1 (FINANCIAL ISSUES)

FINANCIAL CONSIDERATIONS:

The issue of Members' remuneration can be contentious. However the quality of Falkland Island's Democracy depends on the ability to attract able people from across the community to serve as Legislative Assembly Members.

Financial reward should not be the main motivation for holding office as an Assembly Member, however the remuneration has to be at a level which makes it achievable for people from as wide a range as possible across the community to stand for election.

In order to attract able people from across the electorate, the salary has to be sufficient for an able and politically minded person to feel confident that he or she might leave their current career and be elected to the Legislative Assembly for at least four years.

OPTIONS FOR REMUNERATION:

After consultation with the public and Elected Members it has become clear that the position of MLA has become too complex to be treated as a part time position. There is increased overseas travelling added to the workload brought about by the increasing economic activity within the Islands and expectations of the electorate. It is the opinion of the large majority of people consulted that the post of MLA should be made full time and have the same pension rights as FIG employees during his or her period of office.

CURRENT POLITICALLY RESTRICTED POSTS

If the post of MLA is to become full time, the issue of politically restricted posts will be removed. It is proposed that anybody who has an occupation which requires him or her to work during the period that MLAs are expected to be available will have to resign that occupation.

RECOMMENDATIONS

a) Remuneration. (Legislation?)

1. Current fixed allowance and variable daily allowances should be discontinued.
2. Members remuneration should be on a full time basis.
3. Members should be paid an annual salary of £40,000.00 per annum.
4. Members will also receive a tax free allowance of £4,000 per annum (payable quarterly) to be considered for use for expenditure arising from their Membership. (Appropriate attire, the occasional use of personal telephone and internet connection, accommodation not allowed for when travelling within the Islands, overseas and local entertainment etc. If any member wishes to claim more than £4,000 in any one year for expenses other than allowable and claimable expenditure, a detailed list of all expenses must be produced to justify this claim.)
5. The remuneration package should be the same for all Members.

6. No extra allowance should be made for MLAs travelling overseas but properly receipted and allowable expenditure should be reimbursed.
7. Members should be considered self employed but receive the same pension package as FIG employees. i.e. RPC and OPC
8. In the event of a Member not being returned after standing for re-election a resettlement grant of one month's pay will be credited to the unsuccessful candidate's account.
9. It is not proposed that sabbaticals should be required for successful candidates.
10. Formal professional training should be provided and undertaken by newly elected members in order to familiarise them in the organisation and procedures of Government. This training should also include public relations training.
11. Camp members - if not normally resident in Stanley - should have all travelling expenses to and from Stanley reimbursed. Members will be expected to use the most economic means of travel.
12. Camp members who do not have accommodation in Stanley must have a realistic accommodation allowance for days spent on Assembly business in Stanley or have suitable Government accommodation supplied.

13. Camp members should have financial support for Assembly related travel within their constituency. They should be expected to hold regular meetings individually or collectively on both East and West Falkland.

14. Camp members who need to use FIGAS to attend the Assembly, should have priority first flights to Stanley on Monday morning and from Stanley on Friday morning (irrespective of whether there are prior bookings)

b) Working times etc: (Standing Orders?)

1. Members will be expected to attend business in Stanley from mid-day Monday until Thursday evening.
2. All formal meetings requiring Members attendance should be held between Monday afternoon and Thursday evening.
3. There should be formal recess periods - amounting to 30 working days based on a five day week - one of which should take place during the Christmas period, one during the school winter holidays and ten working days to be taken at any time during the year. These days can only be taken after prior arrangement with the Assembly Office.
4. Members when travelling overseas need to be supplied with a suitable portable computer (tablet?) a smart phone and a credit card. (the current situation where a MLA when travelling has to pay certain bills from his own account and then claim back on return is old fashioned and not in keeping with the status that a MLA deserves)
5. Members who have an occupation or business interest that requires them to work during the established Assembly business hours should have to resign this occupation.
6. No extra payment for work outside the three and a half day per week statutory attendance in Stanley will be made as it is deemed that the position is full time.
7. Members whose ordinary career requires CPD (Continuous Personal Development) should be allowed to carry out this obligation but must not use Assembly attendance hours.
8. Friday shall be deemed as a surgery/consultation day.

OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS REQUIRING FINANCIAL CONSIDERATION:

1. Gilbert House is no longer suitable for the Assembly Offices and new premises must be identified. Members will need a personal desk, computer, phone and file system if not a dedicated office. Further, besides a suitable sized conference room, there needs to be rooms available for extra staff also for confidential meetings

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters. Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VHF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.
Pleasant Peak: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falkland and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.
Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves most of the south of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

with members of the general public and other interviews. (Organisation)

2. The time has come for the Falklands to own an Assembly building sufficiently prestigious to reflect the standing of the Falkland Islands. In view of the need for more frequent Assembly meetings and the potential clash with the Court sittings, serious consideration should be given to a new well appointed Council Chamber to be included in this building. This chamber could be used for all Assembly meetings both formal and informal and also Exco meetings. (It has been suggested that the availability of the Court and Council Chamber issue could be resolved in the future. However in view of the real possibility of an increase of population and commercial activity the panel do not consider this realistic. It has to be recognised that a suitable Council Chamber should be available for Members to meet at any time and not at the convenience of the Court.) (Organisation)

3. It is recommended that the staffing of the Legislature Office be reviewed to reflect the increase in work load created by having full time MLAs. (Organisation)

SECOND REPORT (ORGANISATIONAL ISSUES)

ELECTION ISSUES

As the recommendation is that any person who has an occupation or business which requires him or her to be absent during Assembly hours including Constituency time, shall be expected to resign that position; the issue of politically restricted posts will not apply.

Recommendation 1: There should be no politically restricted posts. (Electoral Ordinance)

The issue of resignation of employment prior to election has caused much discussion but in view of the small size of the workforce, and to prevent resignations being accepted before a candidate is or is not elected, it is not proposed that candidates should have to resign their previous position when standing for election except in certain circumstances. (Arrangements need to be made to recognise termination of employment terms members might have with previous employers after being elected.)

Recommendation 2: Persons standing for election should not need to resign their current employment until after they are elected. The only exception is for senior Officers in the Public Service who, if wishing to stand for election, should be required to take leave during the hustings period.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

The need for a reorganisation of ExCo procedures has been pointed out by all Members. They all emphasised the need for more frequent meetings with less non policy content. The deadline system and ExCo paper process needs to be reviewed to simplify the work of the Legislature Department, speed the process and allow more frequent and shorter meetings.

Recommendation 3: A more frequent and simplified ExCo process needs to be established. (Regulation?)

The publication of non confidential ExCo Papers after the meeting is useful. However it has been pointed out that the lack of any indication of the decision restricts the usefulness of the published paper.

Recommendation 4: an indication of the outcome of ExCo's decision should be included with the published paper. (regulation?)

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY:

The Electorate have made it very clear to the panel that they wish to see debate in public on non confidential issues. Public debate would help to replace much of the discussion of non confidential matters within GPC although in no way would it prevent Members meeting in private. An example was given that after the public consultation over a suitable memorial to Margaret Thatcher, Members stated at a public meeting that a decision would be made within GPC.

The issue of scrutiny and public debate needs to be addressed: The Panel proposes that Legislative Assembly should meet monthly with new sections in the Assembly Agenda: Over and above questions for oral reply there should also be questions allowed without notice on policy and strategy issues which can be addressed to ExCo Members, Officials and Portfolio holders (Question Time). These questions should be more along the lines of PMQs in Westminster, except questions are addressed to Members and Officers themselves and debate should be allowed.

In the absence of an Opposition, and operated properly, this would help to create a solution which the electorate have stated they want to see over the present lack of a scrutiny process. These meetings would be conducted under Legislative Assembly Standing orders which will have to be amended to allow such a question process. Portfolio Holders being full time, and involved with strategy, will have a good understanding of their portfolios and thus should be able to answer general questions on policy and strategy without reverting to their Head of Department. This would enable the Members to express their position on controversial issues and thus allow the electorate to understand the individual's views.

Recommendation 5: Legislative Assembly should meet monthly with a new agenda item where Members are able to ask questions without notice to Officers, ExCo Members and Portfolio members. Debate on answers should be allowed.

(Will this need Legislation or alteration to Standing orders?)

New or revised strategy issues should also be brought to this Assembly for debate after being discussed in Advisory Committee and prior to the production of an ExCo paper. This would also enable Members to express their views on strategy issues in public debate. The public would benefit from being able to understand what new or altered strategy is being advocated.

Recommendation 6: Prior to ExCo Papers on new or revised strategy being written, the strategy, but not the implementation of strategy, should be presented before Legislative Assembly for debate. This debate should be led by the appropriate portfolio holder.

(Will this need Legislation or alteration to Standing orders?)

In the interests of clarity, a proper Hansard system should be established. If this system is out sourced, it should lessen the duties of the Legislature Office which would otherwise be increased due to the increased frequency of Legislative Assembly meetings and the needs of full time members.

Recommendation 7: A proper Hansard based system to record all Assembly meetings needs to be established. (This report will be made available to the public both in a written and electronic form.) (Organisation)

The practice of most bills being presented by the Chief Executive is old fashioned and a relic of the Colonial past. Portfolio holders must be expected to be involved in the production of the strategy behind bills and ExCo papers and therefore should take responsibility for the content of the Bill and be able to present it to the Assembly.

Recommendation 8: Portfolio holders should present bills within Legislative Assembly and be held accountable for the policy content. (Standing Orders)

At present motions for the adjournment take longer than the business of the day. In view of the fact that members will be able to address issues during the question time it should not be necessary for long written statements read out during the motion for adjournment.

Recommendation 9: Due to the fact that it is proposed that Legislative Assembly is held monthly, consideration might be given to restrict the length of motions for the adjournment. Motions should be presented under Standing Orders regulations.

(Standing Orders)

GENERAL ORGANISATION:
It is clear that the custom of changing the chair of the Assembly every month causes confusion not only with the community and the Administration but also within the FCO and Westminster. Coupled with this we are informed that the post of a long term Chief Minister - as established in most Overseas Territories - was not popular with most Members.

Recommendation 10: If members are not willing to elect a long term Leader of the Assembly in order to create some clear continuity; it is proposed that members should rotate as Leader of the Assembly of the Assembly every six months. (Arrangements for stand-ins during the absence of the leader of the Assembly need to be established) (Organisation)

There is no documentation stating the role of an Assembly Member. It was made very clear during our public consultations that the electorate wish to be able to see MLAs role published for all to understand.

Recommendation 11: Over and above the Profile of Responsibilities, additions to the Assembly Members' Standing Orders may need to be made to reflect their new status. (This Profile of Responsibilities has already been proposed in section one -Financial Issues- of the report) (Organisation)

The present system where members take various portfolios which may not have any relation to each other causes confusion and does not enable the portfolio holder to be involved with issues which might cross their portfolios. When allocating portfolios Members need to strive to ensure that this does not happen. As well as creating better continuity this would help members of the public understand the Portfolio system better.

Recommendation 12: The Portfolio allocation needs to be rationalised so that each portfolio holder has responsibility for group related departments. (Organisation)

The need for formal professional training was highlighted not only by potential candidates for election but also by some members who cited their difficulties when first elected.

Recommendation 13: Formal professional training must be provided and undertaken by newly elected members in order to familiarise themselves in the organisation and procedures of Government, meeting procedures, strategic planning, public speaking, media relations, public relations and taking into consideration issues particular to the Government of the Falkland Islands.

Ongoing training should be provided to Members throughout their appointment.

(Organisation)

In view of the increased amount of time that members will be expected to devote to Assembly business and be available in the office, proper provisions to accommodate them has to be made.

Recommendation 14: Members must be supplied with suitable personal office facilities including an up to date computer and filing system etc. New up-to-date IT equipment should be supplied to members after every general election. (Organisation)

Some Members pointed out to the panel that the software that they are permitted to use on their computers restricts their ability to work from home or when overseas.

Recommendation 15: Members should be able to utilise any software which may be required for Assembly business including Skype. (Organisation)

Recommendation 16: Members should be able to access the FIG Intranet system even when working from home or overseas at no extra charge. (Organisation)

The Administration and others have pointed out that the lack of an integrated diary system causes confusion and is time consuming. An electronic diary must be established, administered by the Legislature Office. This diary will be accessible not only to Members but also the Heads of Administration and their PAs and keep them informed of the movements and appointments of Members. This should also help to lessen the work of the Legislature office. (There is no reason why individual Members should not keep their own hand written diary)

Recommendation 17: Members diaries must be included within a Government wide electronic diary system. (Organisation)

It was pointed out to the panel that the quality of stationery etc. supplied by the Legislature Office is not in keeping with the status required.

Recommendation 18: The quality of stationery etc. used by the Legislature should be improved and made to be in keeping with the image of a quality organisation. The Legislature Office should also have it's own logo. (Organisation)

During our consultations with other Parliaments the issue of Members voting their own increases in salary and conditions was discussed. The most acceptable system we found was where an independent Remuneration Panel was established which set Members salaries and conditions. Members would not have any input in the process.

Recommendation 19: Arrangements should be put in place to have a permanent Remuneration Panel to review remuneration at regular periods. (Standing Orders?)

FURTHER COMMENTS:

The formal relationship between the Chief Executive and Members needs to be clarified. At present the Constitutional position is that the Chief Executive is answerable to the Governor and does not take instruction from Assembly Members. If Members are to be held accountable for strategy, policy and decision making it will be necessary to review this position. Although at present this issue appears to be handled realistically, under different administrators difficulties could arise.

Under the present process, the point that the Chief Executive being solely answerable to HE the Governor, perpetuates an underlying suspicion - if not the reality - that it can be said that as MLA's have no authority to issue instructions to the Chief Executive they are not in full control of Internal Self Government.

Recommendation 20: The formal relationship between the Elected Members and the Chief Executive needs to be reviewed in order to create clarity and ensure that Elected Members are in control of Internal Self Government while recognising the Constitutional role of the Governor.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are the lawmakers and policy makers of the Falkland Islands. They are responsible for the policies which guide the Administration, but without a ministerial system they are not part of the Administration.

Recommendation 21: It must be recognised by all concerned that portfolio holders are accountable for the process of policy making within their portfolio, and the presentation of that policy, but not the administration of the policy.

There is a need to clarify the role of MLAs as problem solvers: many members of the general public are using MLAs as the first point of contact when requiring action over a problem. The process of what or who is the first point of contact regarding a problem needs to be clarified with departmental heads and MLAs and also the public.

Recommendation 22: It must be recognised that although MLAs are responsible for strategy they are not responsible for implementation and should be the last point of contact for the general public and not the first.

When requiring advice on a problem the general public are not always aware of the correct process of approaching the administration.

Recommendation 23: Departments should be more proactive and approachable in responding to reasonable requests from the public and ensure that the public are aware of the correct procedures for queries and complaints.

There seems that there are differences within Departmental Heads regarding their relationship with their Portfolio holders and their committees. This needs clarifying.

Recommendation 24: It is essential that both Departmental Heads and Portfolio holders understand the established process where Portfolio holders are fully engaged with Departmental Heads regarding any policy change or new policy and the usual practice is that any changes must be discussed within the Advisory Committee where one is established.

The Panel was informed by more than one Committee lay member that when reports to ExCo were made, the views of the committee were ignored and not recorded despite the fact that all the lay members had disagreed with the content of the paper

Recommendation 25: All policy changes reported to ExCo must have been reviewed by the relevant advisory committee and the report must include comments from that committee.

Recommendation 26: As Members will all be full time, an approved list of penalties for contravention of Standing Orders and Code of Conduct by Members needs to be established. (Standing Orders/ Code of Conduct)

It has been suggested that the actual number of MLAs needs revising, the panel has considered this issue and in view of the fact that all members will be full time we do not consider this will be necessary at this time. Furthermore, as this would require a change in the Constitution the panel has not considered this issue further.

The issue of adopting a Ministerial system was discussed, however this would also involve a change in the Constitution and thus it is not proposed that this should be the case in the short term, however this should be the long term goal. It is more important that all the procedures of administration are brought up to date and are streamlined to speed the process of decision making.

The panel would like to thank all concerned who have taken the time to talk to us and help us formulate the recommendations that we have set out. We would also like to thank Una Wallace for the help in note taking and power-point creating at the start of our Consultation period. Finally we would also like to recognise the help and information that we have from other CPA Parliaments, their help in informing us of their systems has been extremely helpful.

We should apologise for the delays in producing the two reports but this was unavoidable due to the fact that two members have extremely busy workloads and it has been difficult for us to find times all three were available for meetings.

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

I GUESS the winter has finally and properly arrived, just in time for those rather crazy people who take part in the mid-winter swim, brrrr!

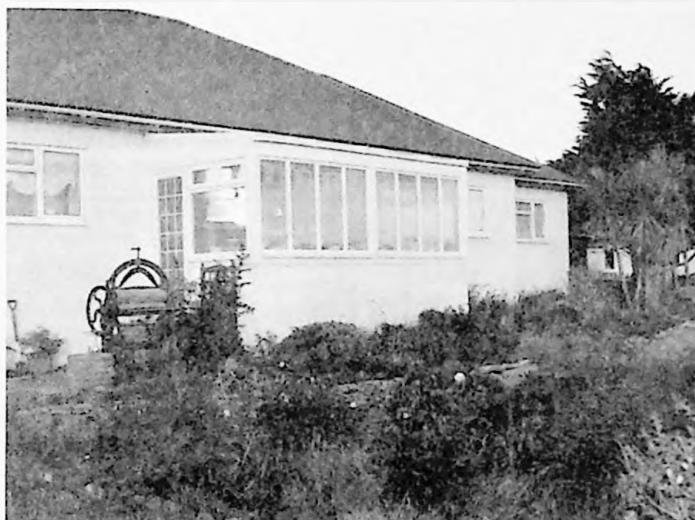

We were very lucky this year to have such wonderful weather for Liberation Day! it was cold, crisp, dry and the sun was shining. Normally at this time of year it is squally and cold with, possibly, snow on the ground.

On those few days of good weather which occurred at that time I was also able to wander around on the paths surrounding the flower borders and pull out some of the weeds close to the edges. Bliss!

It might not have amounted to much but it was great to do something useful out there at last. It also allowed me to see the hardy cyclamens which have grown into large clumps, they should really make a good show later on. Many bulbs are also showing themselves, the little Muscari (grape hyacinth) even have flower buds. I hope they don't try to open up too soon.

Many flowers are still showing willing too, which gives me an excuse to be outside. Strangely, the roses show no sign of stopping for the winter either and haven't even started to lose their leaves. Some primroses are also showing flower buds. The big fat red leaf buds of the paeonias are coming through too. I have left their old leaves on them to give them some protection in winter, I prefer to do this with all plants except bone hardy ones; it might look untidy, but it is like a coat in cold weather.

Bill got stuck-in and dug out a couple of Lombardy poplars which were in danger of falling over, the soil here is rather shallow and there was nowhere for the roots to go any more, with a bit of work and a lot of compost and manure the spaces left will be ideal for a couple of fruit trees and might also allow a clematis or two and a couple of climbing roses in amongst them.

While he was in the mood I got him to lift out a variegated elder growing in the gravel 'island' which had also become too big for its boots. This one had such a hold that not only was the car needed to give it a tug but a turler-winch was required too. It left a massive hole but that will soon fill again with gravel. Behind it the rhododendrons will now be able to show off their full glory.

Various members of the family have been struck down with this cold and I have been fighting it for a while also.

I would probably have been better off retiring to my bed early on, but instead, went on a cooking spree. When the cake tins were full I had to stop for there was no space left in the freezer. This led to making loads of chutneys and pickles, and of course, jams and jellies too. The freezer emptied out nicely as all the fresh frozen produce saved from earlier in the year made its way, in various forms into jars. It was also possible to turn the last few tomatoes into pulp and put them in the freezer. It still seems quite full but there's not likely to be any good-ies going in there for the moment, so why worry.

Earwigs seem to be a little short on the ground at the moment, not that that is a complaint! When I look at our devastated greens I get to wonder if all the work is worth the bother. I certainly haven't bothered to transplant the extra greens for the spring; they have all been defoliated. I have no doubt though, that the absence of earwigs at this time can only mean that they will reappear a month later than normal, with their large new families behind them, ugh!

At this time of year it does get a little hard not to be depressed. The very dark mornings, the drizzle and cold which prevents spending much time outside or getting any pleasure from doing so. But, like all gardeners, I've no doubt I will be back full of vim, vigour and many packets of seeds in the spring.

I have been potting on some plants but only on better days. No point in breaking cold, brittle roots is there? Meanwhile there are all those seed catalogues to look and dream my way through.

In the tunnels the Nerine keep giving their lovely pink flowers, in the porch at the moment it is the Christmas cactus which is doing its thing and the red, pink, orange and white flowers come thick and strong and for a long period at this time of year, very welcome too.

Bill has turned off all the taps outside. He lagged them well but why take any chances? Very few plants need water at this time anyway, and frozen pipes are no fun for anyone to deal with.

Our cress tray is looking a bit sick but it has served us well so shall dump it in the compost bin and start afresh with a new tray full of seed. They germinate very quickly on the surface of the compost on the kitchen window-sill and provide so many healthy snacks that I would feel lost without them.

And now I shall go and do some sewing, and perhaps some knitting too. We don't have an open fire sadly and I do miss that in winter, but maybe it's not so draughty either with modern day double glazing and insulation not to mention central heating. Still, the focal point in the room is missing.

Under 18's
competition

STANLEY Darts Club are holding a tournament for 12 to 17 year olds on Sunday, June 30, at 2pm in the Victory Bar.

There is a £1 fee to enter the competition but because of licensing requirements at the venue all names need to be received by 5pm today, Friday June 28.

Stanley Leisure Centre is collecting the list, so junior players can sign-up at the reception desk.

Archery gold

Mark, Javier and Jason enjoy the sun

pic. Derek Summers

FOLLOWING their success of a recurve team bronze, and establishing high final positions in matches at the beginning of the Guernsey Games 2013, Joanne Lazo secured the first individual medal on Thursday with a bronze in the ladies Hereford round.

Showing they saved the best until last Mark Lewis took gold in the indoor combined FITA on Friday, the last day of competition.

The Guernsey Games were a friendly tournament organised for archers that were unable to take part in this year's NatWest Island Games, as Archery was not chosen by the host island of Bermuda.

The Falklands team have made a lot of new friends and contacts over their week in Guernsey, and the impressed clubs told Falkland Islands Radio that they think the team will do very well at the next Island Games in Jersey, 2015.

The Falklands team are new to the international competition arena, and have only been shooting together for 18 months, but the more established and experienced teams competing alongside them were taken aback by the quality of their shooting.

Club representatives from Sark and Guernsey admitted they expected novices but agreed the Falklands contingent are a "very impressive" team and definitely "to be reckoned with".

Steve Yates, one of the coaches who visited the team as part of the Shackleton Scholarship scheme last year said: "After I visited them in November I thought they had a chance but they've done really well."

He said that though the Guernsey tournament had fewer competitors than the usual number of entrants to an Island Games, the standard of competition was the same with top archers from member islands turning out.

"When the Jersey Island Games comes along in two years they're well up there for a medal as well."

More news of the archers' success next week.

Stanley Running Club hold training sessions on Saturday afternoons.

Meet at the Leisure Centre at 2pm.

Sessions are suitable for all abilities, with length and distance adjusted to suit attending runners and joggers.

BFBS TV Boxes for Camp

BFBS are to supply a new set top box to everyone in Camp currently receiving the service on Government issued equipment. In addition, viewers may also opt to retain their existing set top box. If viewers do not wish to take up the offer of a new box, they must still have a new card & CAM as the present ones will cease to work in a few months.

In order to continue to provide programmes, BFBS has to ensure that the database of viewers is accurate and up to date. We are aware that some people have not informed BFBS when they have moved, and this is a breach of the Terms & Conditions. The opportunity will be taken whilst issuing new equipment to get everyone to sign the new Terms & Conditions. A limited service will be enabled until the signed agreements are returned to BFBS.

To receive the new equipment, you will need to tell BFBS your current viewing card number and provide up to date address details. For those who bought their own set top boxes independently i.e. not from FIG, only new cards & CAMs will be supplied.

The new cards will automatically expire after 1 year and you will be required to call BFBS to re-verify your information in the future.

BFBS intend to be in Stanley for Farmers Week beginning 1st of July 2013. Anyone wishing to collect their new box can come and see us in the Town Hall from 0900 to 1500 Monday to Friday. There are several possibilities:

1) For those receiving the service on a Government issued box and collecting new equipment in person we will, on presentation of their existing card number and signing the new Terms and Conditions, issue a new box, CAM and card there and then. The new box will be issued with the full range of services currently available to islanders. The old card will expire five days later.

2) For those receiving the service on Government issued equipment and having equipment collected on their behalf by someone else we will, on presentation of their existing card number, issue a new box, card and CAM there and then. A new Terms and Conditions document will also be issued which must subsequently be signed by the owners and returned to us. The new box will be issued with only Sky News enabled and will be upgraded to the full package once the new Terms and Conditions have been received by us. The old card will be deactivated on receipt of the new Terms and Conditions or ten days after the issue of the new equipment, whichever happens first.

3) For those receiving the service on their own equipment, a new CAM and card will be issued but not a new set top box. The new CAM and card may be collected in person or by someone else on their behalf as per 1) or 2) above.

4) Anyone in camp not currently receiving the service but wishing to do so or wishing to use an additional box will not be issued with a new CAM and card at Farmers Week but will be given the opportunity get these at a later date.

After Farmers Week, we will provide the same service from our offices at MPA. Anyone who cannot collect their new equipment at either location should contact BFBS.

Make a difference to your environment.

We can help by funding small grants to get you started.

Grants up to £1,000 are awarded for practical conservation, research and/or wildlife education projects in the Falkland Islands.

Some examples of appropriate projects:

- Restoration/protection of tussock/blue grass through planting, management or fencing;
- Control of rodents/cats to reduce impacts on wild birds;
- Control of invasive plants (gorse, thistle etc.) where these are damaging native habitats;
- Provision of on-site tourism information and/or guidelines on Falklands wildlife including signs or leaflets for wildlife sites

How to Apply

Applications will be accepted until 31st July 2013, with grant allocations made by 15th August. Projects must be completed by 30th June the following year (within 10 months of award). Projects should aim to contribute at least 50% towards the total cost - this can be payment in kind such as labour, fuel, accommodation, materials, etc.

For application forms and further information, or to discuss your projects suitability please phone: 22247 or email: sarah.crofts@conservation.org.fk

New Island Conservation Trust, New Island: Summer Field Assistant wanted

Applications are invited for a field assistant to work on New Island on a five month full-time contract commencing in mid-September 2013.

Good salary for the right person, travel to/from New Island at the start and end of contract, accommodation and a food allowance paid/provided by the Trust.

Reporting to the Manager, duties will include the regular monitoring and checking of the reconstructed airstrip and the geotextile coverings, and attending to a range of buildings and infrastructure maintenance.

Some assistance with scientific projects may be required and also clearance of invasive species and land restoration.

Applicants should be physically fit, experienced and competent in mechanical and electrical tasks and be proficient at using 4 x 4 vehicles and agricultural machinery. Certification in First Aid is essential.

This is an opportunity to work in the unique location of New Island, which is a small, remote, wild and beautiful nature reserve.

Auction Auction Auction

Liberty Lodge will be hosting an auction in the FIDF Hall on Friday 5th July 2013 at 5pm. It will be a fun auction so if you fancy a laugh please come along. We will take items to the FIDF Hall and have them on display at 5pm for everyone to view and the auction will kick off at 6pm. If you have anything you would like to auction please give Ellen a ring on 51975 or Gary on 52910 and if you need anything taken up to the hall we can do that for you as well on the morning of the 5th July. We don't necessarily want you to give us things to auction, we want to auction things for you. So if you have something that may be worth a pound or 100 pounds please bring it along. Think of a minimum price that you would accept and we will do the rest. Liberty Lodge will take 15% of the selling price.

Attention all patchworkers and quilters: new range of fat quarters and Swiss rolls being opened at Sew What this week. Sew What at 5 Jersey Road is open Saturdays from 12 noon to 4pm. Tel: 22078, Fax: 22088.

The Camp Education annual fund raising dance will be held in the Town Hall on Friday 5th July. A fully licensed bar will be in operation, so regrettably no under 18's will be allowed. The Town Hall is also a no smoking venue. So come to the Town Hall for what promises to be a great night out and the best dance of the year. £4.00 on the door, and dance from 9pm to 1 am. Sorry no admittance after 11pm.
