Wrong for a wrong? Argentine logic perverse says Falklands Government

MEMBERS of Legislative Assembly, "find it somewhat perverse that Argentina castigates the UK over its treatment of the Chagossians, yet seems to want to treat us in the same way," Chair of the Legislative Assembly Mike Summers told Penguin News this week.

MLA Summers reacted to a letter to the UK media from the Argentine Ambassador to the UK Alicia Castro, in which she reprimands the UK for denying the right of self determination to the Chagossian Islanders while it defends that of Falkland Islanders.

In the late 1960s the UK expelled and then excluded the local population of the Chagos Archipelogo in the British Indian Ocean Territory (BIOT) in order to allow a US military base to be situated there.

A Government House spokesman told Penguin News: "The events in the Chagos Islands took place in the 1960s and 1970s, and the UK Government has said what happened was wrong. The Government's policy on resettlement is under review.

"The views expressed by the Argentinean Ambassador are misinformed. We have no public comment on her article."

Ms Castro also described the appointment of the new Governor of the Falkland Islands Colin Roberts as a "provocation" because of his links with the BIOT issue.

In 2010 Mr Roberts was the director for Overseas Territories and was accused in a Wikileaks scandal of informing a US political counsellor that establishing Chagos as a Marine Protected Area would in effect put paid to the resettlement claims of the ar-chipelago's former residents. The Chagossians are fisherman and the 'no take' terms of the Marine Protected Area would prevent them pursuing their only source of income.

Ms Castro said another striking element is that the UK, "which refuses to resolve," the Falklands dispute, "and aims to justify the continued occupation of the Islands by invoking the right to self-determination for the current British inhabitants, decided to choose none other than Roberts to govern them."

A senior FCO official told Penguin News this week: "Alicia Castro's article simply shows that her understanding of recent events in BIOT is as flawed as her understanding of the Falklands.

"Her contention that the Marine Protected Area was improperly motivated is completely false and was comprehensively rejected by the High Court last year.

"Argentina's attempts to use the Chagos Islands issue to justify the denial of self-determination to the Falkland Islanders is a longstanding ploy, but logically incoherent, a distortion of the facts and unconvincing.

"Ms Castro's remarks do not merit serious attention. Her efforts to denigrate the Governor-Designate, and others who stand up for Falkland Islanders' rights, demonstrate a regrettable lack of professionalism."

Responding to Ms Castro's comment that the UK refuses to resolve the Falklands issue MLA Mike Summers said: "The UK Government supports the right of Falkland Islanders to choose for themselves how they are governed.

"This approach is fully in accord with the universal right to self determination set down in the UN Charter."

He said Falkland Islanders had expressed a very clear wish to remain a UK Overseas Territory: "That does not preclude good neighbourly relations with those around us. Both the UK Government and the Falkland Islands Government have invited the Argentine Government, in writing, to sit down with us to discuss matters of mutual interest. They have refused.

"For Ms Castro to claim that the UK (or the Falkland Islands) refuses to engage is simply untrue."

Wise choice of Governor?

Penguin News asked MLAs if they considered Mr Roberts an unwise choice of Governor bearing in mind the FCO's knowledge that Argentina would use his link to the Chagos controversy for propaganda purposes in relation to the Falklands.

The sports are over Skinny

SPORTS Week on both East and West Falklands have concluded with prize givings, the traditional call of, "the sports are on Skinny," has faded into the distance and the host farms have resumed normal occupancy.

Organisers deserve a well earned pat on the back for the time and energy it takes to put on these events, not to mention their many helpers and of course the jockeys and other competitors who make it so much fun for spectators.

This week we have coverage and full results from the Darwin Harbour Sports Association's two day racing event and dog trials at Goose Green.

Next week we will bring coverage of the West Falkland Sports Association meeting held at Fox Bay as well as a round up of the final events at Goose Green. For those confused by the Skinny reference; many years ago before communication systems were in place a man known as 'Skinny' Watson would walk through town ringing abell and let everyone know the sports were tak-

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

WITH the assistance of Argentine Ambassador to the UK Alicia Castro. I now finally understand why on Twitter I am so regularly bombarded by Argentines crying: "What about Chagos?"

Not, you understand, that I was unaware the Chagossians were treated quite horrifically by the UK Government in the late 1960s when they were expelled from their home to make way for a US military base. However, I had often wondered why Argentines thought that in turn, Falkland Islanders should be treated just as badly. How was this an ethical argument I challenged my furious tweeters?

But now having read Ms Castro's latest plea it has been revealed that the Argentine argument does not compare us with the unfortunate Chagossians but instead with the territories current occupiers. A locale, incidentally, where there are no civilian residents or administrators and no elected government

In truth I feel rather dense. But of course as a sixth generation Islander, having spent my life believing I am part of a 'people' entitled to determine our own future, it's so difficult to truly digest the lament that in fact I am, according to Ms Castro, a nobody. I am part of a non-people entitled to

But perhaps if the lady (a member of a nation whose descendents usurped South America no less) feels such empathy for the former residents of Chagos she should bear in mind that the Falkland Islanders' respect for the UK foreign office was probably on a par with that of the Chagossian people in the 1960s and 70s.

Our rights too were being systematically undermined. Our future was in the balance. Like the Chagossians we were an inconvenience and as such our wishes were increasingly discounted. In fact it is ironic that were it not for the Argentine act of aggression that shone a spotlight on our existence as a population, we too might have ended up a people without a place

Historian Peter Pepper sums the UK FCO's treatment of both ourselves and the Chagossians: "I think that the treatment of both Falkland and Chagos Islanders then was a violation of their rights to self-determination even by the standards then.

Standards have changed; we were lucky in that our wrong was righted (we can only wish the Chagossians luck in their ongoing litigation) but in terms of this particular argument Castro's demand for 'a policy of dialogue and respect between peoples and nations' is farcical. The Argentine Government does not see us as a people and as such has no respect for us. The Argentine Government's standards have not changed. They accuse the British Government of living in the past, "a typical 19th Century colonial saga," yet close their eyes to rights of a population that blatantly pays no resemblance whatsoever to that with which they compare it (a military

But who knows, bearing in mind 'kicking and screaming' is something of an Argentine Government forte - perhaps there still exists a chance they will one day be dragged into the 21st Century.

Perverse Argentine logic

He said MLAs had not discussed this appointment, "either with Mr Roberts or the FCO in respect of the points you raise. We assume the FCO appointment process will have taken into account all relevant past history.

"Mr Roberts is known to a number of MLAs because of his time as Director of the OTs. He has taken a keen interest in the Falklands and has visited previously

"MLA's find it somewhat perverse that Argentina castigates the UK over it treatment of the Chagossians, yet seems to want to treat us in the same way.

Your questions answered

WHY was the £1,000 gifted by MLAs to the East and West Falklands sports associations only used for alcohol, and not soft drinks? Surely designated drivers and children are as important as those enjoying the free beer?

AMLA Mike Summers respond-

MLA's made available to the two Sports Associations a sum of up to £1,000 each to deal with a licensing issue that had come up at MLA's value the sports meetings as part of Falklands tradition for over 100 years, and were keen to ensure they went ahead in the time honoured fashion.

We did not make any stipulations as to how the money was spent, which was the decision of the respective Associations.

We would agree that all attendees are equally important members of the gathering, and encouraging the concept of designated drivers is a very sensible policy. We hope the Sports have been as successful as ever, and that they will continue long into the future.

I HAVE noticed that the Qexit door by the physiotherapy department within the hospital is locked, and wondered why this is the case?

Should the stairwell be blocked there would be no exit from that part of the hospital. Is there a reason or problem with the door?

Director of Health Hilary ARowland explained the current system.

It is correct that parts of the hospital are inaccessible to members of the public. This is to ensure security and confidentiality is maintained in those departments. The doors in question, at the moment, include access to the Pathology Department, Physiotherapy and the Stores Engineering Department. Access is strictly controlled via a computerised card access system.

The access system is directly linked to the hospitals new fire control system, and in the event of an alarm occurring, all access doors are unlocked.

Both systems have been thoroughly checked and commissioned

The Chief Fire Officer, Gardner Fiddes, has also passed the entire system as safe to use. We also consult Gardner on any plans to extend the access control system, and it must be passed by the Fire Service before it is put into opera-

So, it is important to state that there is exit from the Physio department because the fire exit door through pathology would automatically release when the alarm goes off.

Child welfare is paramount

THE first sitting of the Children Bill Select Committee met on Monday afternoon to review amendments to parental responsibility, family assistance orders, and to make a start on the entirely new ordinance binding the Crown to a general duty to safeguard and promote welfare of children.

The Attorney General's new Child Counsel Penny Nicholson introduced the Bill and listed the main changes it supported in three areas, Crown involvement in family life, private law, and fostering.

Once a father is registered on the birth certificate of a child they would be granted parental responsibility; this was in acknowledgement that a third of children are born outside of marriage on the Islands. Provision was also made so that step-parents could acquire parental responsibility and consideration given to the current system of naming guardians to succeed parental responsibility in the event of death. It seemed a "state regulation inconsistency to monitor fostering and not guardianship," said MLA Elsby.

The new ordinance was considered next and MLA Poole asked if more interventions would occur as a result of the Crown being duty-bound to provide for families. Head of Social Services Nicky Murphy replied that it was hoped it would decrease as, "early help so that children wouldn't come under a care order," would be provided.

She explained that Social Services already helped families in emergencies, however, throughout the discussion of the Bill there was a concern that the interpretation on what level of services was appropriate was "open-ended."

MLA Summers was concerned there was no "back-step," and in order for Government to, "retain proportionality," what was appropriate for children's needs should be defined.

MLA Rendell warned that without clarification, Crown commitments might have repercussions as society develops: "What happens when we can't afford it?"

Members then looked at the new ordinance in detail. (This ordinance affects families who have a child in need, described as a child, "unlikely to achieve or maintain a reasonable standard of health or development." or whose, "health or development could be impaired," or who is, "disabled.")

One part of the supporting schedule states the Crown, "must make such provisions as it considers appropriate for the following services to be available," and offers several examples of matters where families can ask for assistance, including "home help (including laundry facilities), "recreational activities" and, "assistance to enable a child and family to have a holiday."

MLA Summers said he thought it was, "a bit odd" to have examples included in legislation, and that he could see this becoming, "divisive of children with substantial need to those who don't necessarily afford it." Members felt that it was not clear that they were just examples and, "which may include" was added to the bill following a suggestion from MLA Hansen.

Also discussed was the creation of a register of children with disabilities in order to track their needs. MLAs agreed it was a sensitive issue, however, it was agreed it was correct to ensure all children receive the appropriate educational and health support.

As described in the supporting schedule the Crown must provide services that offer disabled children the opportunity to lead lives which are as normal as possible, assist individuals who provide care and minimise the effect on disabled children in the Islands.

The use of the word "must" was a point of concern as the majority of Members agreed with MLA Summers that it could, "bind the government to provide services they can't finance."

Principal Crown Counsel Ros Cheek said that the aim was to create a greater onus on the Crown in regard to children with a disability and give them, as a group, a higher status. She did not wish to dilute the effect by removing the word "must" and said the definition of what services were appropriate would vary.

By majority vote the wording was agreed to be changed to. "reasonable steps" to reflect that the Government would do what it could within its means.

Miss Cheek acknowledged that the Children Bill as presented was the beginning of a, "staged approach," to make legislation fit for purpose and was based on UK policy, but it was important to adapt it so it was Falklands relevant. She noted that the Crown already assisted in a lot of matters but it was necessary to make them statutory responsibilities.

The next sitting of the Children Bill Select Committee to finish the work is yet to be announced.

McLaren awaits prison sentence

STANLEY man Kevin Derek Charles McLaren (38) was found guilty of two counts of indecent assaults last Friday following a three day trial.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he had found the evidence given by the two victims to be, "extremely compelling," and although the offences had taken place some 13 years ago he was satisfied their recollection was accurate. Mr Gumsley said he had found Mr McLaren's evidence to be, "incredible at times," and he was entirely satisfied he had lied.

Mr McLaren had been found guilty of 14 sexual offences against children in a trial the previous week. Mr Gumsley said only a lengthy custodial sentence would be appropriate and Mr McLaren will appear in Court on March 10 for sentencing.

Changes to SCB FIG mortgage

STANDARD Chartered Bank and the Government last week announced changes to the General Mortgage Scheme which will come into effect immediately. The salary multiples used for calculating borrowings to purchase existing properties have now been brought into line with those used for new-builds.

This now means that the multiple used for the purchase of existing properties has increased from 3 x first salary and 1 x second salary to 4 x first salary and 1 x second salary.

The scheme has also been extended to allow applications to include the cost of building permanent unattached garages.

Marine Ecologist

EXECUTIVE Council have approved the creation of the post of Marine Ecologist for the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI) which is to be funded for two years by the Darwin Plus scheme.

"This post will better inform us as to how to protect coastal, inshore and the offshore environment" said MLA Barry Flsby ment," said MLA Barry Elsby.

SAERI Director Dr Paul Brickle said the project would through review, analysis and consultation, provide the policy framework to plan and manage the sustainable development and conservation of the marine environment around the Falkland Islands.

Speeding fine

STANLEY man Peter Crowie was fined £230 after he pleaded guilty by post to speeding. Mr Crowie was recorded travelling at a speed of 35mph in a 25mph zone. He was also ordered to pay prosecution costs of £85.

Classic wedding day for Dan and Zoe

AS the bride stepped from the car at the wedding ceremony of Dan Fowler and Zoe Luxton on February 21, the clouds parted and the sun shone allowing Zoe, her father Mike and the bridesmaids to walk unscathed by rain showers, towards the marquee on the lawn at Malvina House Hotel.

The ceremony conducted by the couple's friend Roddy Cordeiro in the presence of the Registrar General, included well received moments of light humour and the wedding party and guests sang Sam Cooke's 'Wonderful World'.

Zoe wore a beautifully fitted Paloma Blanca dress in pearl purchased in Proposals of Chichester with a pearl bolero. Her bridesmaids, Anna Luxton (Zoe's sister) and Rebecca Harris were elegant in aubergine prom style dresses while bridesmaid Kelly Harris wore white satin with an aubergine sash waist and little Sophie McLean an aubergine dress with detailed bodice.

Dan and Zoe at Government House for photographs

The groom Dan, and the best man Robbie Burnett wore charcoal suits with aubergine ties and buttonholes.

Mother of the bride Nikki wore navy and pale blue, while the Groom's mother Veronica wore a dark coral and floral outfit. Handmade by Zoe the 'button' bouquets and button holes were delightfully echoed by Jo Summers' decorated wedding cakes. After champagne, a wedding dinner at Malvina House Hotel followed and then later a reception and dance at the Town Hall.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

LAST Friday the initial Budget Select Committee in which we confirmed elements of the budget strategy was a useful opportunity for Members to air their philosophies on budgetary matters. If anyone had any doubt about the enormity of the task ahead it will have been dispelled. One or two appear to have difficulty accepting that they have been outvoted on a given issue and keep returning to it but I learned long ago the old cliche, you win some, you lose some, best to move on to the next item Talking of cliches recently I was chided, quite properly, by a former pupil on using two in a row, it seems years of daily exposure to jargon. PR speak and management gobbledygook have had a damaging effect. While I've never uttered a word about thinking 'outside the box' or in 'blue sky'. I have caught myself using one or two unnecessarily convoluted phrases and the odd jargon word or phrase.

This week we've a number of important meetings, one looking at the proposed development plan which is the regular updating of the town plan which will include the required consultation, a first meeting of the Select Committee on the Children Bill, and a discussion session on FIDC The last aims to ensure that the organisation has an assured future and that when it is moved to operate under the new legislation passed some time ago but not vet implemented, it has the best possible start

All Members have the regular quarterly meeting with the Chamber of Commerce council which is an opportunity to discuss relevant subjects, especially development where the private sector may take leading roles. The Hon Michael Poole and I have more frequent meetings with them with our trade and industry portfolio

Members still wrestle with the huge list of capital projects, some committed and underway, some critical because services may start to fail if they are not undertaken. and others on the desirable or nice to have list. While capital plans may be funded, we have to consider what can be physically delivered in any year.

AG bows out after three years in post

"YOU get out of it what you put into it." Attorney General Mark Lewis said speaking of his three years in the Falkland Islands at Legislative Assembly last week.

Mr Lewis completes his contract on March 28 and in Legislative Assembly last week Mr Lewis said it had been, "a privilege to have been Attorney General of the Falkland Islands

Mr Lewis listed the Referendum, during which he said he was, "scared rigid," as a high point during his time in the Islands. He added that he had been delighted that the organisation of the Referendum had been given a. "clean bill of health." from international observers.

Mr Lewis was also in post during the prestigious Overseas Territories Attorneys General Conference held in the Falkland Islands at the end of March last year led by the Attorney General for England and Wales the Right Honourable Dominic Grieve QC

Mr Lewis described the Falklands and the Falkland Islands Government as, "punching well above its weight."

He said the Attorney General's role was one of the best legal jobs in the world and he very much hoped to continue working within the Overseas Territories. He also hopes to return to the Islands at a later date

Mr Lewis paid tribute to the people he had worked with and said in the future he would be an "advocate for the Falkland Islands.

Mr Lewis reintroduced the sport of archery to the Falklands; one which has flourished under his tutelage and also won the Islands a gold medal at the Guern-sey Games in June 2013 and was part of the team that achieved a bronze medal. He proudly pointed out that some of his Falklands students now, "bested the master.

Public planning views sought

THE public is to be consulted on possible amendments to the Planning Ordinance as well as the draft Guidelines on Public Speaking and Draft Appeals Guidance Notes

The Environmental Planning Department is carrying out the consultation which starts today and ends on April 7

A summary of the Planning Bill is available from the Environmental Planning Department

The Draft Planning (Amendment) Bill 2014 proposes a number of amendments to planning legislation, with the main outcomes being

• to allow for applicants and members of the public to have speaking rights in relation to applications and appeals;

 to make improved provision for delegation of certain decisions from the Planning and Building Committee to officials in the Environmental Planning Department;

• to update the powers of the Governor (who would normally have to act on the advice of Executive Council) to make regulations about the assessment of environmental effects; and to include an enabling power allowing for the possibility of regulations to be made requiring developer contributions to be Hard copies of the above documents are available for viewing during normal working hours at the Environmental Planning Offices, the Public Library or the Post Office and can also be viewed on-line at www.fig.gov. tk/policy/index.php/consultations

Strong military presence

THERE are currently 1,060 military personnel stationed in the Falkland Islands, confirmed The Minister of State for the Ministry of Defence Mark Francois on Wednesday.

He responded to a written question from Andrew Rosindell MP who asked what military personnel were stationed in each of the British Overseas Territories

Mr Francois said UK Military personnel were stationed in the Falkland Islands (1,060), Ascension Island (20), Gibraltar (400), the British Indian Ocean Territories (40), and the Sovereign base areas in Cyprus (2,825)

He added: "Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10. The exact numbers of personnel currently located in each overseas territory may vary from published statistics as personnel either change location or are deployed on operations.

The other UK overseas territories have no permanent UK military presence.

Princess to Monarch coins

SUBJECT to the approval of Her Majesty the Queen of the relevant design, Executive Council have approved the minting of two commemorative coins for the "Princess to Monarch Series"

The Royal Mint is proposing to issue a collection of 25 silver proof coins to celebrate the Queen's Reign and have invited the Falkland Islands to participate in the collection.

The collection will be made up of 12 pairs of overseas coins and one United Kingdom £5 coin.

A number of countries, including New Zealand, Australia, Canada, Alderney, Cayman Islands and Pitcairn, have already agreed to participate. If approved the commemorative coins representing the Falkland Islands will be the penultimate issues in December 2015 and January 2016 prior to the final, UK, coin issue in February 2016.

The designs that have been proposed for the Falkland Islands (above) feature a young Elizabeth and then the Queen posing for photos with stamps featuring her images shown behind.

Fuel provision under review

FIG is reviewing the performance of fuel supply under the current fuel licence and is seeking the views of the community.

Questionnaires have been distributed and are available online (https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/fidomesticfuelsurvey) to gain feedback regarding the provision of domestic and business fuel services.

Director of Central Services, Simon Fletcher said security of fuel provision was critical to the Islands. "It's up there amongst the most important issues we deal with as a Government. This review is about your experience of the fuel services we have here, and we really want to get local peoples' views on those services to help us understand what, if anything, needs to change."

CFL boost Badminton Club funds by £25k

CONSOLIDATED Fisheries Ltd. 20 years old on March 9, marked the occasion by forming a five year sponsorship agreement with the Stanley Badminton Club.

A cheque for £25,000 reflecting the total value of the sponsorship over the next five years was presented to the Badminton Club chairman, Doug Clark, by Hamish Wylie, Director and the next Chairman of CFL, at Government House on Friday.

The presentation took place at the reception for the Queen's Baton Relay, to help highlight the contribution to sport in the Falklands made by organisations from both overseas and the local community.

Last year CFL's Board of Directors proposed that, in light of the company's imminent 20th anniversary, a regular annual donation to directly support a local organisation that provides wideranging benefits to the local community, should be made.

A spokesperson for the company said the Board considered that the provision of financial assistance to a sports club that could demonstrate its broad appeal to the community, including commitment to youth sports development and a sustainable programme of skills progression, would reflect the aspirations that had been laid out.

Following a rigorous application process through the FIOGA Executive Committee and the Chairman of CFL, the Badminton Club successfully demonstrated that their programme to develop their sport and to widen its participation in international sporting events, such as the Island Games and the Commonwealth Games, merited the sponsorship package being offered.

Six other local sports clubs also applied for the sponsorship and Tom Blake, CFL's Chairman who sat on the selection panel, commented that the standard of applications was generally very high, reflecting the importance of sport in the community and the commitment of individuals from all sectors of the community.

A spokesperson for CFL said they wished the Badminton Club every success at the forthcoming Commonwealth Games in Glasgow.

Women's Day marked at MPA

EACH year since 1911, International Women's Day (IWD) is celebrated on March 8. Thousands of events occur to mark the economic, political and social achievements of women. Organisations, governments, charities, educational institutions, women's groups, corporations and the media celebrate the day. The United Nations (UN) have an annual theme with this year's being "Equality for women is progress for all."

Farewell to another quiet hero

I WAS very sorry to hear about the death of Finlay Ferguson. Finlay was one of those died-inthe-wool old Islanders whom we often describe generically, and rather lazily (because we know they stand out from the crowd but can't always say precisely why) as 'characters'.

I always thought that Fin was superficially noteworthy because of his appearance - he was wiry, tanned and wore his skipper's peaked cap at a rakish angle More importantly, though, he was outstanding because of his great experience as a seaman.

20 years or more ago, I was gathering information about local ships and boats, particularly the cutters and schooners that used to ply their business around the Islands in the days before roads, ferries and aircraft. I went to Fin with my notebook because I knew he would know about all the sail and motor craft boats of the preceding 50 years and all of the old salts that worked them. I was right; he did, and those conversations were fascinating

But it was while researching my book about the Falklands War as experienced by us, the Islanders, that my liking for Fin turned into real admiration. His namecheck is on page 72 of 'Falkland Islanders at War', where I wrote about the evacuation of Camp children from Stanley in the day or two following the Argentine invasion. Fin was skippering the FIC boat Penelope at the time. and he and his crew rendezvoused with a convoy of Land Rovers on the eastern side of Falkland Sound. They welcomed aboard a couple of dozen children who were bound for their homes on the West.

As Penelope pitched and rolled her way across the Sound, some Argentine aircraft approached, and Fin or one of the other adults aboard, borrowed a pillow case which had been packed with a schoolgirl's clothes, and hoisted it up the mast to indicate they were not a threat. The aircraft flew overhead and onwards

I believe that I'm right in saying that seven or eight weeks later, Fin Ferguson was again at sea, and this time he was involved in a less peaceful mission, as a crewman aboard MV Monsumen. The little coastal freighter was initially commandeered by the Argentine Navy but later taken back following the surrender at Goose Green. The advancing Paras and Guards sought a crew to put Monsunen into service carrying ammunition and supplies forward to Fitzroy in preparation for the advance on Stanley. Fin was among the volunteer crew.

By that time the gloves were well and truly off, and if the Argentines had spotted Monsunen at sea she might well have been attacked. I'm not sure if the crew were ever adequately recognised for that work. I hope they were, because they were, to a man, courageous.

We've lost one of the few remaining skippers of the little ships that made life in the Camp and on the remote Islands possible. I'm sure Finlay's family wouldn't mind him being called 'a character', but I would preface that with another word: he was a brave character.

Echoes of the Falklands in Ukraine

EVENTS in the Ukraine are moving very fast indeed, so by the time you read this, my assessment

Bound Ungagged

of the likely course of this crisis may well be proven wrong. But I will take a punt on it anyway and say that one week from now (It is Monday the 3rd as I write), Vladimir Putin will still be riding a wave of Russian popularity and bombast all the way to the gates of Kiev

He will not be able to justify this, of course, but that may not stop him. He has been able to construct an argument of sorts to justify the invasion of Crimea - protecting ethnic Russians; securing the Russian naval base etc, but he will not be able to disguise his aggression if he takes it any further and especially if a shooting war breaks our

I hope that before you read this, western diplomacy will have avoided this scenario by crafting a withdrawal process which Putin will accept as face-saving. If not, then we are going into the worse crisis since the Cold War.

I could not help but see resemblances between Putin's invasion and that of Galtieri. Both mobilised overwhelming force to suppress an almost defenceless neighbour. In both cases, more civilised governments failed to anticipate invasion then scrambled to talk the aggressor out of his plans (to no effect). Then they called emergency meetings in the United Nations (to no effect), and then they warned that if the aggression continued international pariah status would result (to no effect)

I even detected common language and justification among these aggressors. 32 years apart, both Argentina and Russia argued that the territories of their desire had historical, almost sacred significance, for their countries and their cultures; the territories were being brought home.
Perhaps I am taking the analogy a little too far. Let's face it; global stability and security did not revolve around the Falklands crisis, although it very much does around Ukraine.

And, of course, there is another difference between now and 32 years ago. No one (other than poor, outgunned Ukraine) is going to try to stop the Russians by force. No task force is on its way to save Kiev

As I said, it's a dangerous business making predictions, but my guess is that however the crisis evolves, the Russian bear now believes he is all-powerful. He hates Ukraine, he hates the European Union, he hates Nato, he hates the United States, and he will show his derision for them at every opportunity. Cold War Two here we

Friendly Islands

WE have just returned to Ireland after a three week holiday in your beautiful, friendly Islands to visit our friends Sue and Eugene

Nothing could have prepared us for the beauty of the Islands, the friendly people and the amazing wildlife

I think we can now list many of the people we met as our friends and hope to extend the same hospitality to them.

Our thanks to John Coutts and Martyn Smith who took us on a trip to see the penguins, Ben,

Mandy and John who made us so welcome at Elephant Beach Farm (Mandy my friends loved your jewellery and soaps), Verity and the staff at the Malvina House Hotel, the staff and patrons at the Stanley Arms, Theresa Lang for her hospitality and 'taxi' service (you are a lady) Jill and Gerard. Rob and Lorraine for lovely days at Carcass and Michael and Jeanette for the most wonderful

Sean is an avid plane spotter and photographer and met a kindred spirit in John Smith; Sean spent every spare minute reading his books, and would have loved to spend more time in his company I'm a crafter and I had a lovely time with the ladies at MPA

Thank you Eugene and Sue for the best holiday of our lives.

PEOPLE smoke for all sorts of reasons aside from the issue of nicotine addiction.

A psychological dependence, habit, boredom, taste, and sense of identity to name but a few.

There are NO health benefits to smoking and everyone knows this.

In fact smoking is related to a horrifying list of diseases including cancer, stroke, emphysema, impotence, bad breath and kidney failure - the list

UK No Smoking Day falls on March 12 this year.

Most smokers want to stop but aren't sure about how to increase their chances of success.

Stopping smoking is hard and we all know that. But the benefits are enormous.

SO, set yourself a stopping date (around 2-3 weeks is ample preparation time) and then come to see your GP or practice nurse to discuss how we can help you.

Busy Thursday at the Junior School

STUDENTS of the Infant and Junior School and Camp Education signed off for half term in style on Thursday.

They began with a Sports Day; the older groups raced on the Community School pitch and the younger ages indoors in the Leisure Centre Sports Hall. There was brilliant sunshine from the 9am start on the pitch and the children proved it was more about the taking part than winning by cheering on their friends with additional encouragement from the crowd

Later in the day the children put the fun into fund raising in their Assembly Hall with a raffle, cake sale, games, stalls, selling toys and books, and face painting courtesy of Mini Mi's nursery.

Deputy Head Teacher Rebecca Robinson said the event was very successful and though they had not finished counting all the change at the time of PN going to print she thought the total raised by the event would be around £1,000.

The School Council had chosen the Watch Group and UK cancer support charity CLIC Sergeant as their charities

The following day the Baton was relayed between local sports clubs all the way from the Lady Liz, including a trip in an Islander aircraft, and back to Stanley. Included in the relay were the Golf Club, the Community School, Port Louis, Volunteer Point and Kidney Island, the day ending with a reception at Government House. Another tour followed on Saturday culminating in a visit to the stone corral and touching base with Motocross riders on the way. It was checked in at Mount Pleasant Airport and left the Islands at 3pm.

Tim Bonner on Zafonic celebrates winning the Governor's Cup ahead of Arthur Turner on Dashing Dancer

Talia and Michelle Jones ready for the trotting race

Tim holds on to Champion Jockey position

KEEN to defend his Darwin Harbour Champion Jockey title Tim Bonner had another rip-roaring race meeting this year and finished the two days just where he wanted to be - at the top of the points table.

Apart from an armful of second and third places on Rock of Gibraltar and Spirit, with the help of Zafonic and Venus, Tim laid claim to first places in The Argos FIB. The Silver Cup. The Governor's Cup (a surprise win on Zafonic over the favoured Dashing Dancer) The Triangle Y Chase, The FIC Cup. The North Arm Plate and the prestigious Nick Taylor Memorial Prize

Unfortunately a nasty accident to right hand of his biggest rival, Arthur Turner, meant Tim had less competition than originally anticipated, however young jockeys Duane Evans and Holly Williams picked up the 'baton' and gave Tim a fair few exciting finishes, pushing him into second place on occasions

The diminutive but wholly determined Holly riding Arthur Turner's Monster Muncher laid claim to The Java Battery, Owners Up and the FIB 400 yards, adding to her red rosettes by winning the Fitzroy Cup on Dae Peck's Baringa.

Duane. apart from winning the Bowles Trophy on Arthur's Little Dude, produced some great jockeying on his own Destiny, monopolising the red rosettes in the Standard Chartered Chase, and Stanley Services Stakes before ending the two days happily by winning the Ronnie Morrison Champion Cup FIB, bringing Destiny enough points to be crowned Champion Horse.

Not all firsts were swept up by the golden three though; prior to his accident Arthur was delighted with first place in the Maiden Plate on Little Dude and Owen Summers steered the always solid Beagle to victory in the Sure FIB.

Tim handed Zafonic to Ste-fen Clarke for the Cantera Open Challenge Cup, who didn't let the owner down one tiny bit, claiming first place in the Cup ahead of his girlfriend Holly on Baringa.

Ron Binnic, who was deservedly honoured in his fiftieth year of racing by the DHSA, declined as always to leave the sports empty handed taking first in the Port San Carlos Prize on the imposing Southern Dancer.

This year's winner of the FIC Ladies Gallop was Hayley Bonner on Don Bonner's horse Spirit

Bobby and Lyndsay Short's super trotters once again ruled the two days, with Charisma claiming the Maiden

Trot (jockey Amy Gilding) and the Short Mile (jockey Bob Short) and Apache picking up the Ladies Trot (jockey Amy Gilding) and the Open Trot (jockey Bob Short). Proving she still knows one side of a horse from the other, Charisma's owner Lyndsay Short hopped aboard in the Ladies Trot to take second just behind Amy.

Sean Sackett, this year's Champion Junior Jockey at the Stanley Races also took the title at Goose Green. He, Holly Kirkham and Talia Jones were the stars of the show in the children's races.

North Arm riders Angeline Joshua and Oscar Valesquez.

Players enjoyment of the sport is top prority for new hockey season announced and following the Hockey Club's AGM on February 22. there have been some significant changes made to the rules that the committee hope will inject more fun and competition interest throughout the season.

Last season the rules were changed to stop players 'guesting' for other teams should they be short of enough players, and games that included guest players wouldn't count in competitions. This policy caused a number of disagreements, and was deemed unfair, so was one of the first to be scrapped by the new committee. who agreed rules should not restrict players enjoyment of the

Also outlined at the meeting was the role of goal judges as "strictly observational" to aid referce decisions

The club hope to encourage more players to come forward and referee games, and outlined the rules and penalty offences in easy to adhere to bullet points.

For simplicity all penalty restarts will now take place at the centre mark of the Sports Hall.

Another rule worthy of note is that dribbling the ball with the feet is out this year, as is Goal Tenders kicking the ball away from their goal.

The fixtures for the Energise Shield have been published and a suggestion was made to combine the fixtures for the Sure sponsored Russell Smith Memorial League and the Stanley Cup enabling the two competitions to run together. "Teams will play for one competition one week and the other the next instead of waiting months for the next competition to come around," said Chairman Marcus Morrison.

Mr Morrison updated the committee on the 2013 season and was happy to announce that Falklands Dek Hockey Club is now a part of the Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association and has secured funding to create a national team with an aim to play

Last practice session before the Shield - Sunday 9, 4pm-6pm

£5,000 donated by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been used to order equipment for international competition.

Involvement in international competitions and finding funds for professional coaching were discussed as possibilities to develop players skills.

Players interested establishing a national Dek Hockey team are invited to come forward to see what the Club can offer to support their training

 Copies of the full amended rules, the AGM minutes and fixtures for the Energise Shield are available on request from the Club Secretary at newsdesk@ penguinnews.co.fk

Energise Shield 2014

Golf SGC countback on News competition winners

Construction Limited competition was won in quite some style by James Tyrrell with a score of 41 points. This is an impressive victory for 13 year old James who is playing in only his first season of senior competition.

Four points back was Eugene Hurley and Sarah Bowles came in third with 36 points.

Ian Stewart Construction Ltd is one of our generous sponsors and the club would like to extend our thanks for the sponsorship of this competition each year.

Falkland Islands Overseas Games Association very kindly sponsor the Alex Smith Trophy which was recently competed for in tough conditions.

The result was an unusual one in that the top three players on the day all carded exactly the same score of 35 Stableford points, meaning they had to be separated by a count back. The final outcome was Carole Lee in third place, Sarah Bowles in second and Tim Bonner in first.

Stanley Golf Club are grateful to FIOGA not only for the sponsorship of this particular event but also for all the support provided to the club toward competing in the Island Games.

On Sunday the Decor Services monthly medal was played for in cool conditions and attracted a good field of 19 players despite some regular members being away on leave and enjoying Sports Week.

Wayne Clement, playing off a handicap of 10, claimed first prize after a count back against Ian Stewart who with a handicap of seven had to settle for second place. Both players shot a solid nett 68. Our thanks go out as always to Decor Services for their long-standing and continued sponsorship.

This Friday, March 7, is the much anticipated biennial Falklands Cup battle between the Kelpers XI (any player born in the Falklands) versus the Presidents XI (players born anywhere outside the Islands).

Players sign in at Stanley Golf Club by 8.30am Friday when the Captains Roy Smith and Ian Stewart will announce the pairings and order of play. The Falklands Cup always promises two days of great golf and spectators are very welcome to come along and support their side.

Pairings and results will be posted on the Stanley Golf Club Facebook page throughout the two day competition.

MPA road fatality

A FATALITY occurred as a result of a single vehicle accident on the Stanley to Mount Pleasant Road yesterday. One Argentine national died and three others were injured when the vehicle, travelling in convoy with two other vehicles, left the road and rolled. Civilian emergency services and a military Search and Rescue helicopter attended the scene with those involved helicoptered to the King Edward Memorial VII Hospital in Stanley. The accident occurred approximately two miles from Mount Pleasant just before 11am. At time of going to print the cause of the accident had not been confirmed.

Presidents swing to victory

JAMES Tyrrell (right) might not have been on the victorious team in the Falklands Cup on the weekend, but at age 14 he certainly did himself proud. Not only as a skilled player but as the youngest golfer to evertake part in the competition, whichtakes place between the Falklands born Kelpers XI and the Presidents XI (from the rest of the world) every two years.

Turn to page 11 for the full story of the Presidents' win over the Kelpers, with Martyn Clarke man of the match and a very dramatic finish.

ONE year on from the Falklands referendum and public diplomacy efforts are paying dividends according to Members of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers and Michael Poole

They drew particular attention to a statement made by Foreign Minister of Australia Julie Bishop MP on Tuesday, who said: "I note today that it's the first anniversary of the referendum by the Falkland Islanders who voted overwhelmingly to remain a British territory. Now Australia doesn't have a position on the competing claims on sovereignty but we do believe that wishes of the Islands' inhabitants should be taken into account in any peaceful resolution of this matter'

MLA Poole responded that this was not a dispute between two large countries where sides need to be taken, "but it is a much more basic issue of countries needing to recognise that people have the right to determine their own future and associations. We are delighted to see the Honourable Ms Bishop has done this.

Referring back to the referendum MLA Summers stated: "the properly governed and independently overseen refer-endum held last year is just part of our strong message to the world about our fundamental and inalienable human right to determine our own future.

There have been a range of trips overseas and visits into the Islands from politicians, journalists and other opinion formers

MLA Poole noted: "Whilst these efforts may not change the views of overseas governments overnight, we intend to keep up the hard work to ensure that as many people as possible know who we are and see us as the people that we are.

'Facts and law' not popularity and politics says abused judge

IN granting two applications for occasional licenses yesterday. Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley described how when a case came before him he dealt with the evidence, "facts and law," and not, popularity and politics

Prior to hearing evidence from the two individuals applying for licences, one for the Mini Sports on March 22 by Owen Summers and one for the Rural Business Association Agricultural Show at Goose Green on March 29, by Nyree Heathman, Mr Gumsley asked that in the light of the deeply vitriolic Facebook campaign against him following him not granting occasional licences to East and West sports associations applied for in February, was it proper that he hear the applica-tions, "or should I recuse myself."

Mr Gumsley said he had to consider whether he had been affected in any way and as such could he hear the applications fairly and, "without bias."

He went on to describe what he viewed as the "extraordinary reaction," to his February decisions after which abusive comments were made by members of the public on Facebook including, "the guy's just a p*," individuals hoping he would "f off," and suggestions he should be sacked. He also noted that one MLA was described in a comment as, "being on our side," but not holding out hope of, "the p* changing his mind.

Mr Gumsley indicated that a less liberal judge might have responded far more harshly to the 'scandalising" of the judiciary.

He also referred to MLA's decision, following his non granting of the licences, to give £1,000 to the sport associations (without imposing any conditions on how it should be used, "despite days to do so") and an MLA's comments made on Facebook, "there's more than one way to skin a cat," and others in LegCo including: "I think it was Charles Dickens who said 'the law is an ass'. I think the law here is fine." The latter Mr Gumsley felt could be perceived as an attempt by the legislature to ridicule a judge

He reiterated his reasons for not granting the February licences noting that the West applicant did not attend court despite being notified in time that she should, while the other applicant when asked whether drink driving was likely, acknowledged that it was, "but not very far."

He noted that nobody had challenged his decision officially.

After much consideration Mr

Gumsley concluded he was confident he could hear the applications properly and fairly; that abuse, "goes with the territory," and that the desire to seek popularity was not at the front of a judge's mind.

He added that nobody had directly attempted to put pressure on him and not one MLA had communicated with him or asked him to change his mind, which in any case would have been, "improper.

He asked if either of the applicants objected to him hearing their applications; neither objected.

Having heard the evidence, despite some concerns about the potential for drink driving on non designated roads at Goose Green, he was eventually satisfied by the applicant's evidence.

Defying the judge? Nothing could be further from the truth MLA Summers, told Penguin News this week on the matter of whether legislature had undermined the law.

He said the actions Assembly Members took, "at very short notice, to assist the two camp Sports Associations was entirely within the law, and intended only to facilitate to continuance of age old camp traditions in the Falkland Islands.

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

THE best intended actions can often turn round and bite you in the butt and I suspect our MLAs may be rubbing their collective derriere this week as their little act of defiance against the Senior Magistrate's refusal to grant occasional licences prompted some rather unsavoury public behaviour (see front page story).

The donation to the sports associations of £1,000 was thoughtful, generous and gratefully received, but the timing was terrible and despite retrospective denials on local radio by MLA Mike Summers that there was no intention to undermine the judiciary, it's not really carrying any weight.

But that's life, sometimes you do get a bite on the butt, but, from my experience it's just as well to hold your hands in the air, admit you made a mistake and move on.

Honesty earns more respect in a place this size than false justification (although £1.000 of booze can buy a fair bit too) but sometimes when you find yourself in a hole.... you just got to stop digging.

ON a more chirpy note, while we might mutter about fuel and electricity prices going up every now and then, it would seem we are getting pretty good deal at the moment compared to other remote Islands

The inhabitants of Ascension and St Helena are paying £1.10 and £1 respectively for a litre of diesel compared to our 64p. Now if that doesn't rustle up a wave of sympathy on top of that Ascension pay 44p per unit of electricity while on St Helena it is charged at 35p for the first 400 units and then jumps up to 45p, pretty steep compared with our 22p per unit. We'd better watch they don't try and head hunt Glenn Ross from the power station because if it wasn't for his enthusiasm and expertise with wind power we'd be paying an extra 9p per unit according to calculations. And perhaps Stanley Services deserve a bit of a pat on the back too - in fact I'll go so far as to promise not to curse when filling up my trusty Land Rover for at least a year.

A DEEP water port at Port San Carlos? Now there's a novel idea I thought had been put on the back burner until earlier this week when the Port Smyley website promoting the three phase concept was brought back into the limelight. It makes for some interesting reading, so if you haven't already had a look check out www.portsmyley.com

Protest from the Hart at cuts to UK legal aid

Joseph Hart voiced his own independent protest of the UK Government's legal aid cuts on

Due to his involvement in a local case he was unable to join the thousands of lawyers in England and Wales who staged a walkout last Friday in opposition of the cuts that remove £220 million from the £2bn legal aid budget; a move which Mr Hart said will mean the poorest in society will no longer have proper representation, and will significantly impact his profession and equality in the UK jus-

Joseph Hart

Mr Hart described the Falkland Islands legal system as very good and praised the Government for not mirroring the move. The Falklands legal aid system is modelled on the 1980s UK system.

The Criminal Bar Association (CBA) called the cuts "crippling", but the UK Government has defended the reform of what it describes as an "expensive" system, a move it considers vital in austere times.

Mr Hart said the Falkland Islands Government recognises that all people receive, "the best legal representation, not the worst.

MSC certificate for Toothfish fishery is first for Falklands

CONSOLIDATED Ltd (CFL) has announced that the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) certification has been granted to the Falkland Islands Toothfish longline fishery.

The fishery entered assessment in August 2012 and was evaluated by independent MSC certifier Intertek Fisheries Certification (formerly Intertek Moody Marine) against the MSC Standard for well-managed and sustainable fisheries in three principle areas. the sustainability of the fish stock. the environmental impacts of fishing activity and the administration system in place for managing the fishery

The fishery scored well against all the individual performance indicators within each principle achieving a minimum of 80 points on all, bar three performance indicators, giving rise to 3 conditions being placed on the client to be met within the certification period

A further condition was voluntarily agreed by CFL - to conduct further research into the identity of the stock in Falkland's waters - following objection to the certification by an Argentine NGO, the Fundación Vida Silvestre Ar-

"The fishery is the first in the Falkland Islands to be certified and reflects the high standards of fisheries management and environmental measures practised within the Islands on the Patagonian toothfish fishery," said a spokesperson for CFL

Planning and building

SIX applications were approved and one deferred by the Planning and Building Committee on

The application for a two storey house to be built to the rear of 5 Villiers Street was deferred for the second time as no further information has been received from the applicants Wayne McCormick and Alison Baker.

Retrospective permission was granted to Falkland Islands Company for the installation of Land Rover signs with LED lighting at Crozier Place. Construction of a reinforced concrete slab at Gordon Lines by the Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands was approved. Permission was also granted for Robin Smith to build a garage at 19 Watson Way and for Jimmy Moffatt to replace a poly tunnel with a greenhouse and to replace a temporary shed with a larger one at 20 Ross Road East.

Change of use of a PortaKabin adjacent to the Seamen's Mission Building from staff accommodation to be used as a hostel for fishermen and seafarers was approved.

Subject to conditions, five years of temporary permission to site a PortaKabin at 6 Fitzroy Road for use as a store was renewed for Mike Forrest. The committee agreed the PortaKabin was aesthetically in good condition but given the longevity of the siting. totalling 20 years after this approval, future renewals would be subject to upcoming requirements on what defines a temporary or permanent structure.

A grant application for off street parking for Frank Leyland at 10 Brandon Road was supported by the Committee. It was decided that the qualifying criteria for the scheme should be communicated to the public to ensure people apply before conducting work.

'No remorse' as McLaren Drink driver begins 10 year sentence

(38) was sentenced to 10 years in prison on Monday as the Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley dealt with all 16 convictions.

Dealing with the first trial where the claimant was 14 and 15 years old when the offences took place, Mr Gumsley sentenced McLaren to a total of eight years imprisonment for sexual activity with a child, grooming and inciting a child to have sex, to run concurrently.

Mr Gumsley said the offences called for a sentence which would make a clear statement of society's revulsion at such behaviour and the need to provide an adequate deterrent to others

Gumsley described McLaren's behaviour as "despicable" adding that he had not demonstrated a shred of remorse. He said it had been made clear by the child that she had concerns about her age which McLaren had dismissed in a "cavalier approach to the law and to her childhood," because he wanted sexual gratification from a child. Most disturbing of all was the fact that McLaren was aware of others including his own brother, sexually abusing the child and had encouraged the child to engage in sexual activity with other men.

For the offences relating to the taking, making and possession of indecent images a total consecutive sentence of 12 months was imposed.

For the two indecent assault convictions, McLaren was sentenced to a total of 12 months, again to be served consecutively.

Mr Gumsley said it was clear that the two adult victims had been deeply affected by the attacks and that while they would not be able to forget their ordeals, he hoped they would now be able to put the memories from the forefront of their minds.

Mr Gumsley said these offences showed that McLaren was prepared to engage in violence to try to gain sexual gratification and it was clear that as well as sex as a motive, McLaren had a desire to dominate these ladies.

After passing sentence Mr Gumsley said it was concerning, as was set out in the probation report, that there was limited treatment for sex offenders in the Islands He said that unless there was proper treatment offenders may well be released into the community in the future whilst still presenting as a risk.

"It is apparent and regrettable that despite the prevalence of sexual offending in this territory little progress has been made in that regard. It is clear to me that it has been something which society has chosen to ignore or minimise.

I say this from the considerable evidence I have received over the time I have been here in a number of serious cases. It is something that can no longer be ignored. There may be limited popularity in advancing these issues but sometimes the right thing has to take precedence over the popular thing.

In addition Mr Gumsley noted that the promised education programme had still not appeared and repeated, that an urgent and clear campaign of education for all was needed, particularly dealing with the way that men groom children for their own sexual needs.

Commenting on the evidence he had heard during the trial he said it was clear the victims of McLaren's sexual abuse had kept quiet because of the fear of, "not being believed or being ostracised by the rest of the community." He said it was notable that even when grown adults had tried to talk to others about the violent sexual attacks they had suffered they were passed off as merely a joke or a lark, or something that simply would not have happened.

The culture of silence and secrecy and minding one's own business may be an attitude that has improved lately but still, in my view, remains entrenched in the skewed morality of all too many in this society," he said.

sent to jail for six months

STANLEY woman Lynn Jane Summers was sentenced on Friday to six months in prison and banned from driving for four years for drink driving, causing an accident and failing to report an accident on December 8 Miss Summers was found guilty by trial on February 11, and remanded into custody.

When arrested on December 8 Ms Summers was four times over the legal limit to drive, which was one of the highest readings, Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley said he had ever seen.

In sentencing Miss Summers, he said he was satisfied that she had known she was too drunk to drive but had still chosen to get behind the wheel of a, "danger-ous weapon," and after crashing her vehicle into a parked car had taken sanctuary in a public house in an effort to hide her crime.

Mr Gumsley compared drink driving to, "taking a shotgun and firing it indiscriminately at the public," adding it was only by, 'sheer luck," no one was seriously harmed.

Addressing the law in regards to drink driving he clarified that Falkland Islanders had decided to set the sentencing limit for the offence at double the UK threshold for a first offence and six times for a repeat offence. "I am not able to ignore the law if it is inconvenient," said Mr Gumsley adding that he could not, "turn his back," or ignore the law to seek popularity, "I must deal with drink drivers severely.

Mr Gumsley explained the case was highly aggravated by her, "staggering drunkenness, and the fact she had decided to, "scurry away," and hide after causing an accident; she had also lied to the police, the court and even after being remanded into custody didn't appear to regret or realise the severity of what she had done, and could offer her no credit as a result of the case going to trial.

He described Miss Summers as a ,"considerable and continuing threat to road users," and imposed a four year ban on her obtaining a driving licence.

Commendation Mr Gumsley commended George Toolan who had immediately reported the incident to the police and the owner of the car that had been hit by Miss Summers. Mr Gumsley said he was, "touched by the decency," of Mr Toolan's actions and awarded £50 from public funds as a mark of appreciation from the community for, "having the guts, to do the right thing, "despite the risks of being vilified and ostracised," for acknowledging his moral responsibility.

New nursing home would provide an important service

THE proposed new nursing home will provide a different service from current sheltered accommodation, "but nevertheless a hugely important one," Director of Health and Social Services Hilary Rowland said this week.

Current plans for the nursing home have yet to be confirmed or funding agreed, but the initial design is for ten people, "but done in such a way that it can easily be extended," said Ms Rowland.

"It will be a facility to meet the needs of older and disabled people and provide a home for life for people who need 24 hour nursing care supported by a dedicated team of staff in a purpose built modern facility," she added.

The home will, "complement the sheltered accommodation facilities and be part of that continuum of care available for older people.'

The purpose of the nursing home will be to provide 24 hour care for people who need help with all their daily needs.

Currently seven people live in the elderly persons unit at the end of the ward in the hospital: "This is their home for the rest of their lives," said the Director.

The new unit will be purpose built, designed with the needs of older and disabled people in mind with walk in showers or wet rooms, but also specially designed baths, "for those that like a bath," Ms Rowland told Penguin News.

Each room will be designed to accommodate people in wheelchairs and the windows will be low so that residents can sit and enjoy the view. There will be a dining and sitting area so that residents will have a choice about where to spend their time. The design will also take account of the needs of people suffering from dementia, it will be light and colour coordinated.

Current accommodation

Asked what services were currently offered to elderly people living in sheltered accommodation, Ms Rowland said:

accommodation "Sheltered enables people to live in - independently with their own front door but in the knowledge that someone will be visiting them on at least a daily basis to check that they are safe which can be very reassuring '

She said the accommodation was also easily accessible to the hospital. Each unit has a care line to the hospital, so if someone needs help then they can call for assistance in an emergency.

Tenants, "will have a package of care to meet their individual needs, for example someone may receive health care support to help them have a bath, or may have meals on wheels or go to the day centre. A different service, for different needs and different peo-

Many people attend the day centre for a hot meal and companionship, there can be help with shopping and the support of the District Nurse and Social Work assistant.

The role of the warden is in essence to be a "good neighbour," said Ms Rowland; "They call in daily to ascertain whether the tenant requires any assistance. This may be alerting medical staff or reporting repairs to PWD, but the warden is by no means the only source of support.'

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

FIVE MLAs and most directors had a very useful day at MPA last week. Having been out for visits and briefings many times in the past I was a little hesitant before deciding to go. I'm pleased that I decided I would, as it was a very informative visit giving us all a comprehensive picture of the defence of our Islands. As always we met some very enthusiastic individuals happy to demonstrate the effectiveness of the bits of equipment for which they are responsible.

There is another select committee meeting on the Children Bill this Friday; this is a large piece of work that is an important part of our ongoing work on the welfare and safety of children. As has been pointed out, an easy option would be to adopt UK law in its entirety; however, some elements could be seen as excessively complex for a small community. Furthermore I believe there are some elements of the law in the UK that do not appear to work as they should, even with the massive resources available there. I hope that we can take something through Legislative Assembly that is effective, practical and appropriate.

It seems to be no coincidence that in the same week as the Argentine ambassador in London launched a verbal attack on our next Governor, an Argentine commentator suggested that the appointment of a new Governor with such a distinguished CV, combined with the recent ministerial visit, demonstrates the strong commitment of the UK to our country. He further suggested that it was about time his country's government conducted a more sensible policy toward us. Is Ms Castro's latest undip-Iomatic outburst another hint of desperation?

The last 12 months have been so busy that it is hard to believe that the Referendum was a year ago. Its significance is undiminished, and the fact that it received the full approval of the independent observers regarding the conditions under which it was conducted gives power to the arguments we present here and overseas. There could have been no clearer or more telling demonstration of our right to self-determination.

Port Smyley up for discussion

A PROPOSED deep water port at Port San Carlos initiated by Port Smyley Ltd and receiving media attention after the company's website was flagged up on a social media link this week, has not been factored into the Government's plans for future oil industry development.

MLA Jan Cheek told Penguin News that no discussion was taking place between the company and FIG and reiterated that Port William was the designated location for a new port as agreed by Executive Council in October 2012

MLA Cheek said the Port Smyley group approached the previous Assembly late last year just before the election which was the first correspondence with them regarding their proposals in over two years. "As far as I am aware the Assembly as a group has not had any direct contact from them since," said MLA Cheek, adding that it was her understanding that the oil and gas industry had informed the Port Smyley group last year that they had "no interest in a port located at Port San Carlos.

Port Smyley Ltd's equal shareholders are Byron Marine Ltd. Neil McKay Ltd and Phipps & Co Falklands Ltd and was set up to develop a deep water port facility to service the oil and gas industry.

Company Director Lewis Clifton explained that the group had laid out a well developed concept. four months after Rockhopper Exploration plc declared the Sea Lion discovery. "This was a large piece of work, the culmination of years of study, he said adding that conversations with a range of commercial and other entities had continued since that time including the Government and MLAs."

Following reconsideration of the concept and further detailed discussion with a wide range of oil and gas people a refined concept was published during 2013 which the website now carries.

The concept is not a definitive solution, and like any such project requires the appropriate "buy-in" from a range of parties," said Mr

The Port Smyley group recognise there are challenges in progressing any such like project; an instant solution is not proposed, but rather a concept which is very well thought through and considers a raft of future circumstances that FIG's port selection has not yet contemplated. Indeed one might say that in a future period it would deliver on many of the policy points of the Rural Development Strategy and the much wider encompassing Economic Development Strategy," Mr Clifton explained.

He said that Port Smyley may never come to fruition as an oil and gas specialised port, but it has basis for good discussion; "any other new port concept may face similar if not greater challenges given not least cost indicators and which the Port Smyley group understand are of concern to some MLAs.

"Proving the business model will remain challenging, wherever any future port or ports location are determined," said Mr Clifton addding that FIG had acknowledged in Executive Council that it considered Port Smyley, "as a private sector development," but also concluded it was of "a higher specification than FIG feels is appropriate at present.

MLA Cheek said she saw having a port so far from Stanley as a possible disadvantage with all the implications for road transport.

It is generally accepted that ports are an important gateway to countries, they provide key border and customs control mechanisms and promote a strong signal about a country being open to trade and for doing business. We do not have a permanent civilian port facility in the Islands, we need a replacement for FIPASS within economic reach of Stanley as the main population centre, and need a facility that is able to expand and adapt to future requirements," she explained.

Port William had been chosen as a location that fits with the economic development strategy, was close to Stanley without being in the Harbour, and so limits any impact on residents, said MLA

"It satisfies the location criteria for port selection and can be built, we believe, within reasonable industry cost standards. Its location is within easy reach of existing utility and transport links, as well as a potential workforce. An increased population, new industries and thriving traditional industries will all increase demands on port facilities. We believe Port William can accommodate fishing, tourism and containerisation as well as oil and gas and will act as a catalyst for other investment and development.

Mr Clifton concluded that whatever the outcomes of port development, the important matter, at this time, is that the Falklands, puts in place the right package of development enablers to ensure long-term political and economic growth, and sustainability, from the oil and gas sector.

To date I have not received answers to specific questions I asked and the one response I have received completely glosses over the fact that they made a hugely misguided and hasty decision.

I am told that both Sports Associations rely heavily on the proceeds from the bars in order to fund the continuation of the meetings. It is understandable, therefore, that they might need future help if the bars were unable to function on this occasion.

However, I still maintain that the timing of this aid strongly indicates that MLAs responded in an imprudent way.

To repeat my questions: 1. Was this really a unanimous decision?

Did none of you vote against it?

Students are enterprising young ambassadors for local tourism

INFANT and Junior School Camp Education students held an open day on Tuesday with the aim of offering the many visitors to Stanley from the cruise ship Crown Princess and the public, an insight into education in the Falkland Islands.

The year groups were tasked with different roles to help the day run smoothly explained teacher Alison Short, who greeted interested visitors at the school entrance and was busy distributing identification badges and arranging student tour guides.

"The children planned it all themselves and they had some grand ideas," said Mrs Short.

Despite only a few days planning the tours and products on offer, visitors were clearly impressed by the articulate explanations of the students, the confidence of the year groups and the excellent souvenirs they had produced

Year six was responsible for planning and conducting the tours which took small groups around the building explaining the different opportunities available at the school, the structure of Camp Education, and answering other questions

Year five students were in charge of publicising the event. They contacted the ship's agents in the Falkland Islands. Sulivan Shipping Ltd, to help promote the day on board and produced some wonderful posters which they placed around town to direct visitors to the event.

The makeshift gift shop in the Assembly Hall was a highlight with year four producing some magnificent original artwork on cards and book marks, and year three's tempting homemade penguin biscuits which they had carefully iced in lessons.

"The children had all the ideas and even thought to leave some without icing in case some people preferred them that way," said learning support assistant Kerri Ross who was supervising the stall.

A member of staff from the Falkland Islands Tourist Board said tourists had commented that they had been to the school and very much enjoyed the experience.

ICC qualified coach Conway brings cricket from Belize

THE Falkland Islands Cricket Association (FICA) has arranged for an International Cricket Council (ICC) accredited Cricket Coach. Conway Young (25) from Belize, to visit the Falklands between March 15 and 29.

Organiser Andy Brownlee told Penguin News: "Mr Young is the Cricketing Development Coach in Beltze and the idea of having him come to the Falklands was first hatched when the Falklands Cricket Team visited Belize as part of their Caribbean tour in 2012."

A particular emphasis for this visit is to get juniors from the age of 7 upwards interested in cricket, both male and female, said Mr Brownlee. Mr Young will be coaching students from both the Infant Junior School/Camp Education and the Community School

Conway Young (right) as well as the senior squad.

Mr Young has played for the Belize national team, has experience working under highly qualified coaches and in 2010 took up the position as coach for the Belize Junior and Senior Male National Cricket Team. He has both national and international cricketing awards, and was also appointed the Cricket Development Officer for Belize which involves working in schools in order to build a strong foundation for the future of cricket in his country.

Mr Brownlee said: "FICA would welcome all to come along to the coaching sessions that will be held during Conway's visit, even if you have never played cricket before, give it a go."

For further details contact Andy Brownlee on 55891, Martin Collins on 54327 or email andrew@lifestyles.co.fk or lan Betts on 52116 or Steve Fowmes on 55258. Details will also be on the FICA Facebook page and the community board.

Commonwealth celebrations and the Queen's message at FICS

A NUMBER of students at the Falkland Islands Community School earned their personal place in history via a five week competition to collect credits that would earn them the right to run with the 2014 Commonwealth Games Queen's Baton.

Photographs of the relay they took part in are available on the BBC website, however this was just one of the ways that the Community School took part in Commonwealth celebrations.

They held their own mini-Commonwealth games, quiz, and are also holding a post-card competition with the top five entries to be printed as gifts for Falklands athletes to share with other nations at the Glasgow 2014 Commonwealth Games.

Trophies crafted from local wood, reclaimed minefield posts and wrecks were created by FICS students Logan, Dwight and Rebecca and presented to the winning mini-Commonwealth Games teams.

Their efforts were honoured with a special assembly on Commonwealth Day, Monday 10, and visitor His Excellency the Acting Governor John Duncan delivered the Oueen's Commonwealth message to students reminding them of the importance of team work and working as a global commu-

The Queen's message

"In July this year, the opening of the 20th Commonwealth Games will be marked by the arrival in Glasgow of the baton that started its journey from Buckingham Palace five months ago.

Many of us are following closely the news of the baton relay as it passes through the 70 countries and territories whose teams will gather for the Games. The images bring vividly to life what we mean by the Commonwealth

HE the the Acting Governor John Duncan delivers the Queen's speech to the FICS and student Jake Buckett holds one of the beautiful trophies hand crafted by students family: it is wonderful to see the warmth, shared endeavour and goodwill as the baton is passed through the hands of many thousands of people.

'Affinities of history and inheritance from the past are strong, yet we are bound together by a sense that the Commonwealth is a powerful influence of good for the future. People of all ages from different cultures are weaving an ever-growing network of links which connect us in our diversity and our common purpose. It is this unity that is expressed in this year's theme: 'Team Commonwealth

While national teams will be concentrating on the competition in August, Team Commonwealth will have a longer focus, working together to achieve a more enduring success.

Experiences of life differ widely throughout the Commonwealth, and we each make contributions from sometimes very different viewpoints. But we are committed to the same goals. Together we offer each other encouragement and draw strength from this mutual support.

"The understanding that we belong together, and are able, through teamwork, to achieve far more than we could do alone, has always been at the heart of our approach. For all of us this is now captured in the Commonwealth Charter which sets out the values and principles which guide and motivate us.

"This year, more children and young people are participating in Commonwealth Day celebrations. Advances in technology enable us to reach a greater number of young people in schools, on-line using the 'Commonwealth Class' initiative, and through events in local communities where the Commonwealth flag is being raised.

"I am delighted that in this, the year of 'Team Commonwealth'. we will be working to build a brighter, united future in which every one of us can play a part and share in its rewards.

A Minister's support and thanks

DEAR Falkland Islanders

I would like to thank you all for the warm reception you gave me during my recent visit to the Falklands.

I felt extremely privileged to have had the opportunity to visit your beautiful Islands and can honestly say that my high expectations were more than met. There can be no substitute for coming to the Islands to appreciate their unique charm at first hand and to understand your strong sense of identity and community.

The British Government will continue to do all we can to protect this. My visit reaffirmed my long standing belief in the right of you, the Islanders, to self-determination, a principle to which the UK will be demonstrating its commitment again in Scotland later this year.

Though there are undoubtedly significant challenges ahead, you can take huge credit and pride in the substantial achievements the Falklands have made, in building a prosperous and sustainable community. I was very impressed by the efforts you have made to develop world class industries and exports. The British Government will continue to support your endeavours to further develop your economy, in tourism, fisheries and, of course, hydrocarbons exploration.

Thank you once again for such an excellent and memorable visit.

President's XI swing to victory

THE much anticipated Falklands Cup took place last weekend at Stanley Golf Club, competed for between the Falklands born Kelpers XI and the Presidents XI (pictured) from the rest of the world.

The Cup is a two day event and has been played for every two years since 2000 and before the weekend, the Kelpers led the series five wins to two. Teams are made up of 11 players and a reserve, and captains were Roy Smith for the Kelpers and lan Stewart for the Presidents. The top eight scorers, with points collected from competitions throughout the golf season, qualify automatically with the last three places and reserve picked by the captains.

After the draw the teams teed off at 9am on Friday, haunted by some heavy showers. The morning matches were alternate shot, with both players on each team teeing off then selecting the shot they wish to play. The players then alternate shots until the hole is completed.

The first match out had both captains in action. Roy Smith was partnered by Sarah Bowles and Ian Stewart partnered Wayne Clement. The Kelpers were fast out of the blocks and lead by four after only five holes played. However the Presidents never gave up and got the match back to all square with one to play and completed their incredible comeback to win the last hole and the match.

Second match out was also won by the Presidents as Martyn Gilson-Clarke and Gary Clement defeated Kevin Clapp and Mike Summers two and one. Rodney Lee and leuan Ford finally got the Kelpers on the score board in match three by defeating Drew Irvine and Steve Vincent four and three. Next match to finish saw the Presidents increase their lead to three to one, with a Rod Tuckwood and Darren Wade beating Tim Bonner and Richard Bonner four and three. In the last match to finish before lunch, Carole Lee and Troyd Bowles brought the score back to three to two, by defeating Eugene Hurley and Gordon Lennie four and two.

The draw for the afternoon fourball betterball matches saw both team captains keep their winning pairs together whilst shuffling the rest. Bob Gilbert came in for the Presidents and 13-year-old James Tyrrell made his Cup debut for the Kelpers.

The afternoon started well for the Presidents with Ian and Wayne beating Sarah and Tim three and two. However the Kelpers then dominated the afternoon score board but only after some incredibly close matches. Troyd and Carole won four and three against Rod and Darren in the only match not to go to the final green. Roy and Richard beat Eugene and Bob one up in a match that was close from start to finish. Rodney and leuan came back from three down to win their match against Gary and Martyn one up. The last match was the most dramatic as Kevin and James trailed by three with only five holes to play against Drew and Gordon. Kevin then proceeded to hole two big putts on 14 and 15 before young James took over by winning 16 and 17 to put the Kelpers ahead with only one to play. The final hole was halved, meaning another win for the Kelpers who finished day one leading by six points to four.

Day two was singles matchplay with everyone playing in eleven matches. The draw took place but furious weather delayed matchplay until Sunday giving players time to mull over the intriguing draw; the most eye-catching were Ian versus James (receiving 14 shots) and Kevin versus Wayne in the second match out.

Sunday morning was cool with the threat of a shower but gradually improved as the day went on.

The scoreline meant the Kelpers needed four and a half points to retain the cup, whereas the Presidents needed seven points to win. lan lead by example beating James nine and eight and was level par for the 10 holes completed. Darren and Eugene also won their matches meaning the Presidents then lead the overall by seven points to six. The match between Wayne and Kevin went to the last with Kevin grinding out the win to level things once more. Gordon and Rod were the next to win their matches, closely followed by Roy meaning the Presidents lead nine to eight with four matches still going. Sarah and Troyd won both their matches with a few holes in hand which meant the pendulum had now swung back to the Kelpers momentarily. Injuries to Gary and Tim had meant both sides had to call in their reserves and the draw pitted them against each other. Graeme Hay beat Ginny Forster which levelled the score at 10 each.

The tense final match

Carole and Martyn suddenly found themselves being followed by a large crowd with the match all square and three holes to play.

Martyn stepped up on the 16th tee and probably hit his best tee shot ever landing his ball two feet from the hole. The 16th is a blind par three meaning the players can't see the green from the tee, so Carole had no idea how close Martyn was. Carole caught her tee shot a little heavy and came up well short, meaning she had to hole her pitch to have any chance as Martyn received a shot on the hole. Carole hit a beauty to ten feet but lost the hole, conceding Martyn's birdie putt.

The 17th was equally dramatic with Carole rolling a lovely putt to a few inches from the green and levelling the match once more.

We then had a unique situation where two long days of golf came down to the final hole of the last match to decide the whole thing. Martyn has only been playing golf regularly for nine months or so and found himself in a cauldron of pressure, standing on the raised 18th tee box with the hopes of his team solely on his shoulders. Hitting the tee shot would have been tough for the most experienced golfer, so it was amazing and impressive in equal measure that he split the fairway with a big drive. Carole didn't catch her drive as well but was in a decent position on the fairway for her next shot. But then a moment of real bad luck as Carole's attempted lay-up shot got a massive forward bounce and ran into Felton's Stream. Martyn controlled his nerves well and hit two more solid shots to be on the green in three. Carole now needed a miracle, but when her putt for six failed to drop she shook Martyn's hand and conceded the hole.

After two days of golf it came down to the last hole of the last match and the Presidents XI won the Cup by 11 - 10.

Only two players managed to win all three points available, Ian Stewart and Troyd Bowles. James Tyrrell is the youngest player ever to play in the cup and will remember his win in the fourball for a long time. It was a tremendous Falklands Cup with the most dramatic finish which has left us looking forward to the next in 2016. Martyn's efforts in the final match meant he was also Player of the Tournament. Competition secretary Andrew Newman handed out engraved glasses (produced at short notice at The Pod) to the two teams before handing the Falklands Cup trophy to Presidents XI captain Ian Stewart. Prizegiving was followed by several hours of talking about the weekend's dramas whilst shar-ing a beer or two. The Kelpers XI were sponsored this year by Falklands Building Services and wish to thank them for their shirts and Troyd Bowles

Critta also secured fourth place in the Open with Duke's son, Ritzer. This year saw a certain Mr Neil Goodwin from North Arm put in an appearance, and he did extremely well winning first place in the Novice and the same run winning him third place in the Open too. Now Neil will be representing Falkland at the Champion Dog Trials to be held at Hill Cove later this year. I feel a good competition coming on between the North Arm manager, who will be one of East Falkland's representatives, and his shepherd

The children's foot events ran concurrently with the dog trials and there was much fun to be had. Carol and David Thorsen produced an excellent picnic with warm hot dogs devoured by lots of little hungry people.

Later that day came the bike agil-ity course and lots of people had a go at this. It's fair to say that there were varying degrees of skill in action, but the top prize went to Lee Molkenbuhr for the lads and Sian Nightingale for the ladies. The bike agility course was to set the tone for Molks' week ahead, that is, one of, as he put it, "seeing red." By the end of the week he was covered in rosettes of various sizes, mainly of the first placed red colour, or the golden "champion" colour, Although, I must make note of a certain green third place rosette that he chose to place down by his feet, but more about that later...

The shearing competition was on day two, and once again Molks came in top place winning Cham-

Shearer and Best Farmer Shearer and also winning the Speed Shear. Critta was "seeing blue" (to once again quote Molks), as he managed to come in second place to Mr Molkenbuhr in virtually every competition, even being beaten by just 0.5 seconds by the big man in the Speed Shear.

Credit must be given to two young entrants on the day. Niall Evans came a very creditable fourth place in the Novice Shearer section. This is a very impressive result for such a young man.

Also, Rhian Alazia did extremely well winning both the Ladies and Beginners shearing competitions. Rhian also entered a dog on trials day and won a prize for Novice Handler too. Well done to both Stanley House kids.

Day three brought foot events where much fun and silliness was had by all.

Again, Mr Molkenbuhr's competitive streak won through with him doing very well in most things he took part in. One of the newer, but very keenly challenged, events is the Tractor Pull.

This year's winners were the 'Big Roosters'. In second place was my own team, the 'Buff Babes' (an all girl team), and only managing a miserable third place were the 'Shearers', headed up by Lee Molkenbuhr. Yes, you heard it here first; a bunch of girls beat the Shearers!

Peat Cutting was held in the morning on the last day, and Lee once again did extremely well and came in first place and also won the Fastest, Roughest and Toughest bank cut. Leon Marsh won second place and the coveted Neatest Bank prize, and Alex Gould came in a very commendable third place.

The Treasure Hunt took place in the afternoon after everyone devoured the beautiful barbecue cooked by Tex Alazia and helpers. Scott Short ended up in the 'drink', literally, managing to reach the last clue on the hunt as it drifted out into Fox Bay harbour. After Scott's dip in the sea it somehow seemed unfair that he didn't actually win the treasure!

Well done to everyone who took part and had fun at the sports. The weather was excellent (big shout out to God for that), the barbecues were delicious and so I must offer a huge thank you to everyone who took the time to cook them on the various days.

It's a thankless task on a hot day and it also means that those doing the cooking often miss out on part of the day's fun.

Thanks to the people of Fox Bay for hosting an excellent sports, and also thank you to Susan Hirtle, the main organiser of the event. An unenviable task which takes lots of time and effort to pull together - so thank you Susan.

Beccy Lee

Stanley Running Club 10k competition

THERE was a very small (but enthusiastic) turnout to the 10k run. The rain at the start did not help to encourage anyone along, but that cleared to provide very reasonable running weather for most of the race.

Times were as follows: Rebecca Bazely – 54.48 Jonathon Hadley – 58.34 Tara Wilson – 60.02 Sandra Knoll – 60.27

Cherie is SCB's woman of the year

CHERIE Clifford was declared the Falkland Islands woman of the year, this week; a Standard Chartered Bank (SCB) award recognising an outstanding contribution to the community.

An overwhelmed Mrs Clifford was presented with a certificate of recognition, a gift voucher for dinner for two at the Waterfront Hotel (donated by The Waterfront) flowers and chocolates at her place of work, Gilbert House on Tuesday.

Barbara Keenleyside of SCB made the presentation at an intimate surprise ceremony attended by the winner's friends, family and nominators.

Mrs Keenleyside told Mrs Clifford she had received 18 nominations from friends and colleagues, who recognised her hard work and commitment to various youth groups in Stanley, especially the Guides and Sea Cadets.

Speaking to Penguin News Mrs Clifford said she was certainly not expecting the honour and thanked those who had nominated her. She has been involved in supporting youth groups and community projects since 2000 and said, "you get back what you put in.'

She said youth groups on the Islands were supported by teams of people who do great

Nicky Jonson of SCB said the bank was delighted to announce the winner: "We are very grateful to the community for submitting so many worthy nominations, and we hope they will participate again next year."

The award is made each year to mark International Women's Day, which was celebrated on March 8, and was an opportunity to celebrate the increasing empowerment of women and to recognise their contribution

Noble lady is 'inspirational' oil executive

THE highest paid woman on a list of 500 Houston oil executives (2009) will be in the Islands next week with Noble Energy.

Speaking to Penguin News, Noble Energy's Falklands representative Richard Winkleman reminded that the company is to hold a public meeting in the Narrows Bar on Monday evening (more info on page 8) which will be attended by visiting senior vice-president Susan Cunningham who flies in Mr Winkleman described Ms Cunningham as an, "inspirational role model and leader. adding that she had done some 'magnificent things for Noble's exploration.

Ms Cunningham has more than 30 years experience in the hydrocarbons industry and joined Noble Energy as a senior vice-president in April 2001 with responsibility for exploration worldwide and business innovation. Previously she was Texaco's vice-president of core worldwide exploration.

Ms Cunningham who studied geology and entered the oil industry in 1980 was heralded the highest paid woman on a list of 500 Houston executives ranking 112 overall in 2009 and was the first woman to head an overseas office for Amoco and to land a C-suite position at Noble Energy.

On the right road to prosperous future says Brazilian academic EMPHATICALLY support 111 of the Falklands' right of selfdetermination, visiting political advisor and environmentalist Eduardo Viola emphasised this week that the Islands enjoyed an exceptional level of amenities and prosperity and were on the right road to an even more prosperous future provided it was embraced by Islanders.

'You are too small." he said that immigration indicating needed to be opened up.

While meeting with Falklands media on Wednesday, it became apparent that between the group four Brazilian academics on a familiarisation visit to Islands' Falklands, the sovereignty dispute had been a strong topic of debate.

The delegation has a shared interest in international politics, history and relations and visit in order to better inform themselves on topical issues affecting the region to aid their research as opinion formers and teachers

Due to the nature of established Mercosur relationships it might not be possible to change official political views of countries in South America they indicated, but agreed in order to progress the issue the answer was in education, in particular via the media.
"There is a profound economic change happening (in the Falklands) and that is bringing unprecedented attention. But you are doing the right thing," said Oliver Stuenkel, who during the visit had learned of the economic blockade imposed by Argentina on the Islands. He said he had not been aware of this but hoped to raise it with his students when he Continued page 3 returned.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

OUR office manager has an endearing habit, when visitors to the Islands pop through our doors, of nervously apologising for the weather, almost as if she's personally responsible for the rain, hail, or howling wind that has bowled them along Ross Road.

Not of course that her obsession (Fran's mastermind subject would be weather apps and websites) with our meteorological misfortune is a unique characteristic. When it comes to using the weather as a conversational icebreaker we must be up there with residents of the British mainland where a study found that for more than 50 per cent, conversations turn to the climate at least once every six hours.

How often do Islanders use as a conversational opener, "we're in for a frost," or "expectin' an Easterly," or from the more optimistic, "turned out nice," (the latter more often stated by a weathered old boy standing by his garden gate in a howling gale but blinking optimistically at a miniscule dot of blue sky over Two Sisters).

But why our endless fascination with something over which we have no control whatsoever?

Well presumably part of it stems from many Islanders' natural shyness (although I think this traditional trait has reduced as more and more young people bounce back from colleges and universities brimful of bold self-assurance) there's nothing like a comment about such a neutral and safe subject to strike up a chat or even break down cultural barriers. But also of course, the variability of our climate means a never ending variation of potential observations. Not only that, but the unpredictable nature of the weather means it impacts on virtually every part of our lives.

Just in the past week I have heard it mentioned:

- in court: "Could the licensing hours extend to the next day in case the weather's bad (mini-sports):

- on the farm: "couldn't get the sheep into the right camp, the stream was too high;

- about the marathon; "if it blows hard enough it might give local runners an advantage."

Even an individual conducting a wedding recently caused a chuckle when having solemnly listed the schedule of events for the ceremony, then wise-cracked, "and then we'll pause for weather and flights from Myriam."

But sadly, to quote our gardening columnist this week: "I think the days that have been summer could be counted on the fingers," and as dark mornings creep in it seems unlikely there'll be many more. No doubt, like other predicaments though we will weather the weather and before you know it the padded boiler suits will be out and barbecues lit on calm snowy days.

And in any case, as 'stalwart' is an idiosyncrasy we have long cultivated in the face of assailing neighbours, perhaps we should offer wry credit to our weather conditions for giving us plenty of practice.

Gonz's gift to Training Centre

YOUNG Apprentice Marcos Leyton learns to use a brand new record wood-turning lathe under the watchful eye of tutor Willie Bowles. The lathe was donated to The Training Centre by Gonzalo Hobman

Training and Development Manager Eileen Davis said: "This will be a valuable asset to the Training Centre and we will ensure that it is put to good use when training carpentry students in the future," and thanked Mr Hobman for his, "very generous," gift.

Saladero flock attracts buyers

THE national stud flock (NSF) based at Saladero has progressed a long way since the first ram sale held in 1994, Department of Agriculture staff told Penguin News.

Polwarth sheep (500 ewes and 25 rams) were imported to the Falkland Islands from Tasmania in 1992 with the aim of providing farmers with a finer wool option than already present, to increase overall genetic diversity and improve profitability of farming as a result.

NSF rams for sale at this year's show on March 8, averaged 18.8 micron, with clean fleece weights of 2.6 kgs and live weights of 52.4kgs, and an enthusiastic crowd of farmers clearly felt the animals had plenty to offer.

135 lots were included and bidding between the prospective buyers was, reported the Department of Agriculture, "competitive resulting in a full clearance of all rams on offer."

Included in the sale offering were three categories of rams including half blood Centre Plus (CP) sired shearling rams, NSF sired Polwarth shearling rams and mature Polwarth NSF rams.

The top priced CP shearling sold for £440 with an average of £207.31. The top priced NSF sired shearling ram sold for £395 with an average of £150.81 and the top priced mature NSF ram sold for £480 with an average of £259

A spokesperson for the Department of Agriculture said those attending provided positive feedback on the preparation, quality and condition of animals on offer as well the standard of the new genetics.

Select committee hammer out the details of the Child Bill

THE second sitting of the Child Bill Select Committee met on Friday to continue work on strengthening the existing Ordinance and its additional legislation.

Principal Crown Counsel Ros Cheek opened up the discussion saying there was a need to remove a section which made provision to provide secure accommodation for children who have been detained for committing a crime, because the Crown did not have the provisions available; "To commit ourselves to it would be unrealistic" she said.

It was acknowledged that because a secure facility to detain child under 18 was not available it was, "far more likely," they would be remanded on bail except in, "extreme circumstances," said Miss Cheek.

Many points were picked up by the Committee and changes and more research ordered to make the Ordinance practically compatible with the Falkland Islands.

Another point of discussion was the requirement of the Crown to pay for a child in their care to pursue higher education.

It was considered by the committee that because of the unusual set up of the Falklands education system, in that they already have policy to fund higher level education, there was a need to clarify that a child in the care of the Crown wouldn't be entitled to greater benefits and assistance than those available to every child of the Falkland Islands.

There was a strong negative opinion shared by the Committee when it came to considering the new legislation on fostering. Head of Social Services Nicky Murphy explained that Crown involvement in private fostering arrangements, like Camp children staying with relatives in town, would be minimal but there was a, "duty to know who is where for safe guarding purposes."

"I have real problems with this whole section," said MLA Hansen who described it as, "quite an imposition."

Mrs Murphy said it was not intended to be intrusive but was instead aimed at supporting the situation and in practice would involve gathering information such as, who is in a household, whether they have relevant criminal convictions, and whether the room and supervision are appropriate to the child's needs.

This process she described as a "light touch," but essential to ensure the safety of a child and that their needs are being addressed.

MLA Summers said he could foresee, "a lot of people being angry about this," adding it was easy to say the balance should be, "weighted to the child," but it could be intrusive for families.

MLA Elsby agreed that some checks were necessary but the key would be balancing those: "It's not just Falkland Islands children but other families coming in," he added.

The Committee agreed with Director of Health and Social Services Hilary Rowland's suggestion that they assess the practicality of the section and clarify the Crown's role in another discussion.

The role of the Safeguarding Children Board and their authority to request information as defined in the bill was criticised by MLA Summers as being, "too broad." He said he disliked the thought they could request, "anything from anybody," when police matters were for the police. Ms Cheek said it related to statistical information and agreed a clarification to reflect this could be added.

New cruise ships for the 2015/16 season

CRUISE Shipping Miami, an annual conference bringing together everyone involved in the Cruise Industry was attended this year by Sulivan Shipping Cruise Co-ordinator Sammy Marsh and Tourist Board manager Tony Mason.

After a year of focusing on partnerships and establishing stronger links with the cruise industry at a board level, the meetings were highly productive and successful, said Mr Mason. "We are in the final stages of closing a deal with a new cruise that will be based here in Stanley and provide a seven day Falkland Islands itinerary. I am very excited about this as this is our first step to providing passenger exchanges that will further support air links, deep water port development and deliver the goals set out in the Tourism Development Strategy," said Mr Mason who added that this would also allow the Tourist Board to provide stronger support to Camp, which is high on my agenda for 2014/15

Miss Marsh also had good news to bring home with the announcement of Norwegian Cruise Line operating in South America once again after a four year absence.

Cruise ship Norwegian Sun has a maximum capacity of 2,150 passengers and has scheduled ten calls in 2015/16. Windstar Cruises is also including the Falkland Islands in their itineraries in 2015-2016, she said

"It was a very busy week, but it is brilliant to hear positive feedback about our excursions and hospitality as a whole. The new deployments in 2015/16 was very much the icing on the cake to a successful week," concluded Miss Marsh.

On the right road to future

International Law professor Leila Bijos agreed with the importance of raising a moral consciousness in the population to spark debate, particularly with elections due in Brazil. "The students are the new leaders," she said, adding that the Falklands economic boom gave her and her students a rare opportunity to study rapid economic growth of a country in their own region.

Visits like this are intended to build up a knowledge base and Carlos Vidigal, who is a political advisor and supporter of the Argentine claim, said he found the trip informative and was, "surprised" by the people and governance. Brazilian foreign policy which aligns with its neighbour will not change he said but he was keen to see better dialogue between the Falklands and Argentina.

Community service for 'drunken yobbery'

STANLEY woman Lauren Mc-Kay (18) was ordered to carry out 50 hours of community service in the Magistrates Court on Wednesday after she pleaded guilty to using threatening behaviour, damaging police property and two counts of resisting a police officer in their duties.

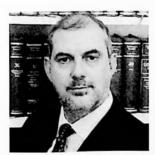

The offences related to an incident which took place in the early hours of February 8, outside Deanos Bar.

Crown Prosecutor Simon Rowe described how two police officers had seen Miss McKay approach a group of men outside of Deanos and strike one in the face. She had resisted the Police officers attempts to calm her and remove her from the situation, becoming what one officer described as, "extremely agitated," to the point where they had to force her to the ground and handcuff her in what was described as a personal safety

Miss McKay had continued to struggle and be verbally abusive and once placed in a holding cell maintained disruptive behaviour for some one and half hours. During that time she had managed to smash an HM Prison issue toughened plastic beaker.

When interviewed on February 10, Miss McKay said she had been out since 7pm that night and had consumed various types of alcohol including beer, vodka, Sambucca and rum before leaving the Globe Tavern but had no recollection of interaction with the police outside Deanos.

Senior Magistrate warns licensees it is an offence to serve alcohol to a drunk person

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley expressed his dismay that he was once again dealing with, "drunken yobbery," in the vicinity of Deanos after the defendant had spent time in the Globe, and stressed that it was a criminal offence for licensees to serve alcohol to a person who is drunk.

He said he had been mulling over what was available in Stanley for those who turn 18 and want to do something other than drink adding, "there's not much is there?"

Defence lawyer Alison Inglis said that apart from sports clubs or possibly the FIDF there was little by way of entertainment on offer after 9pm. She said it was an environment where young people did socialise in the pubs, adding however that many people go to the pubs and drink lightly or even not at all. She stressed that her client who lives with her parents was ordinarily quiet living and was deeply remorseful, shocked and horrified at her behaviour.

Mr Gumsley said it was a sad day when he had to sit with an 18 year old before him, particularly one who was bright, intelligent and talented with a family who cared.

"When you go out and are on your fourth Sambucca I don't suppose you ever think it might affect your future prospects," he said to Miss McKay as he reminded her that this conviction could prevent her from entering the USA, not to mention her career prospects which were reliant on the outcome of the court case.

The latter were not penalties imposed by the court but, "are consequences of your own actions," he said.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

ON Wednesday we have the presentations by the various groups applying for Falkland Islands Government subventions. This involves their making justification for the amount they are requesting for Budget Select Committee to consider along with all the other calls on the budget. At the end of the week we head off to Goose Green for a public meeting before crossing to Port Howard that evening. On Saturday we travel to Fox Bay for another public meeting. As someone who usually feels the need to lie down when on a ship half way down Port William I'm not looking forward to the ferry crossings. We return on Sunday afternoon. It will be interesting to hear how concerns differ, if they do, from those most frequently raised in Stanley

I HAVE scheduled constituent meetings two Thursdays in a row because I found that I had been double booked and had to swap These meetings have not yet had significant take up but are an opportunity for individuals to raise anything they wish for discussion with one or two MLAs. Last week The Hon, Michael Poole and I had the pleasant surprise of someone coming along to our meeting with a good idea instead of a complaint. I will not steal its thunder by disclosing it here, but I'm convinced it is a good practical idea and we are working on it as it fits with our portfolios.

DISCUSSIONS with the Brazilian visitors this week have been very useful. They are able to build up a broad picture of the Islands and learn the truth first hand. As distinguished academics in the field of foreign affairs and history they are too well informed to have accepted Argentine propaganda at face value but I'm sure they will have made some interesting discoveries during their visit. I have found it fascinating to get a South American, and in particular Brazilian, perspective on the Falklands. Clearly, apart from in Argentina, we are not high on anyone's agenda but the Argentine Government uses seemingly irrational and aggressive methods to place their distortion of fact on everyone's agenda.

in South Frodingham, UK has made its most distant sale to date with bottled beers on the way to the Falklands to go on sale at the Seafish Chandlery

Chandlery manager Neville Hayward said that if the beer proves popular Newsome Brewery have offered the chance to have some beers bottled under a chosen label and not surprisingly, Neville is now on the hunt for an amusing name.

Poocha Man, Lafonia Lights and Hoolie Blower were among the offerings from the Penguin News staff, but if you have any bright ideas drop Neville a line on neville@chandlery.co.fk Neville's favourite names have already been taken by other breweries (think Dogs Bollocks, Sheep Shagger and Randy Otter) but, he says there are no boundaries involved with the possible new name and looks forward to hearing from you.

Among the beers currently making their way to the Islands is the Gold Beer award winning Sleck Dust which has a position on the pumps in the Strangers Bar in the Houses of Parliament.

Concordia Baby saga continues

SPEEDWELL, George and Sealion Islands are the only occupied islands affected by the fact the sea truck Concordia Baby which arrived in August last year is unable to carry cargo to the required specification.

Workboat Services Manager Adam Cockwell told a meeting of the Transport Advisory Committee (TAC) that it was not until the sea truck arrived in the Islands it was discovered it was not capable of carrying four tons and it was not wide enough to load the JCB 805 digger which UK manufacturers Alnmaritee had been instructed to use as an example.

Mr Cockwell said there had been a long series of discussions to find a solution adding that if the vessel had been received in the UK it would have been sent back and the money refunded, however the cost of the freight from the Falklands did not make that option viable

The vessel had been inspected several times during manufacture and there was "no inkling" that the fundamental design was not up to spec, he said.

Modifications including bigger skegs to provide more buoyancy and sponsons to create more stability were to be carried out at the expense of the manufacturers, said Mr Cockwell, adding that there had been some additional costs which had been split between FIG and Workboat Services who had been contracted to ensure the sea truck was fit for purpose. A person from Alnmaritee would travel to the Islands to oversee the modifications however when this was likely to happen was unknown, he told the committee.

MLA Gavin Short said he was, "not happy," with the current situation, adding that it was strange the company which had made the mistakes was not more willing to rectify them:

Inquest opened and adjourned

THE inquest into the death of Argentine national Gustavo Carlos Antelo (53) as a result of a road traffic accident on the morning of March 13 was opened and adjourned on Tuesday morning.

Police Sergeant Paul McDade told her Majesty's Coroner Carl Gumsley that Mr Antelo was unresponsive and pronounced dead at the scene of the accident four miles from Mount Pleasant and certified dead at 1.20pm after being transported to Stanley hospital by helicopter.

A pathologist was due to arrive in the Islands on Thursday.

Mr Gumsley extended his sympathy and condolences to Mr Antelo's family who despite the best efforts of the Police and Government House staff contact had not been made with yet.

A shop shell and a traditional kitchen - fascinating museum collections at Britannia House

Britannia House museum doors close

BRITANNIA House, the home of the Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust will close its doors to the public for the final time on Friday, prior to the opening of the new museum in the Old Dockyard

Originally a Brazilian prefabricated building, Britannia House was constructed in 1981 for the Argentine airline LADE which operated an air service to Stanley at the time. The kit was flown in by the Argentines and landed at Stanley Airport

For the past 24 years it has housed a plethora of collections reflecting the history of Islands life, and received its name after the liberation of the Falklands from Argentine occupation in 1982. It was used by Commanders of British Forces in the Falklands until Mount Pleasant Airport was completed in 1985 and the garrison moved out of Stanley.

The house was then made available for development as a museum and a great deal of work ensued with volunteers rallying to gather and clean items and put together displays until on February 13, 1989, the museum was officially opened by former Governor, Sir Rex Hunt.

The museum's Andrea Barlow explained to Penguin News that going a little farther back, in the early 1900s Mrs Allardyce, wife of the serving Governor, began calling for the colony's history to be collected and protected. The lady achieved her goal on the King's Birthday, November 9, 1909, when the Falklands' first museum was formally opened.

After moving to the ground floor of the Town Hall, the museum continued to develop and amassed an impressive natural history collection. Tragically most was lost when the building burned to the ground on April 16,1944. The museum had a variety of homes after that including the back room of the gymnasium and at the FIC's Crozier Place. The collection was stored for safekeeping during 1982 and the organisation was set up again in 1987 with Britannia House earmarked for use but with an eye to the Government Dockyard for the future Museum Curator Leona Roberts confirmed they were hoping for a winter opening of the new museum.

Mrs Roberts said: "Britannia House has provided a charming museum space but we have long outgrown it and are very excited at the prospect of being able to really celebrate Falklands heritage and traditions in the Dockyard."

The Falkland Islands Museum & National Trust would like to advise the general public that they will be closing their doors to Britannia House for the last time at 4pm on Friday 4th April 2014.

We will be open as normal until then to give everyone the opportunity to view Britannia House for the last time.

The Staff and Trustees would like to thank everyone for their support over the past 25 years and look forward to welcoming you at the Historic Dockyard Museum later in the year.

We invite you to mark this event by joining us for a drink at Britannia House between 5pm and 7pm on Friday 4th April 2014.

The Marathon and 3K Fun Run Is this Weekend!

Standard Chartered Bank would like to advise the following information in connection with the Stanley Marathon & 3K Fun Run on Sunday 23rd March 2014.

Registration

Marathon: 8.30am – 9.40am in the Banking Hall Fun Run: 8.30am – 9.40am in the Town Hall

Race Briefing 9.45am in the Town Hall

Both the Marathon and the Fun Run will begin and end at the Town Hall car park. The start for the Marathon is scheduled for 10am and 10.30am for the Fun Run with the finish line due to close at 4pm.

Closure of Town Hall car park

The Royal Falkland Islands Police will close the Town Hall car park to general use from Saturday evening until Sunday evening once the race has completed and the finish line cleared away. There will also be minor disruption to drivers on Ross Road between the Junctions from Villiers Street to Barracks Street during the start of both races.

Notice to drivers in and around Stanley

The Marathon is to be run along Ross Road between the Beaver Hanger and Rowlands Rise, Jeremy Moore Avenue and nearby back roads, the Airport Road and By-Pass between the airport and the Sapper Hill.

All roads will remain open to traffic.

Along Ross Road (including East and West and Crozier Place) runners should remain on the harbour (north) side of the road. On the By-Pass and Airport Road runners will run facing on-coming traffic.

The Fun Run runners will run along Ross Road West and will turn just before John Biscoe Road back along Ross Road to the finish line in the Town Hall car park. Runners should remain on the harbour (north) side of the road.

Drivers are therefore asked to be vigilant and watch out for the LEAD RUNNER VEHICLE and runners especially when approaching the junctions with Ross Road (East and West), the By-Pass and the Airport. Please give extra consideration to the Fun Run runners who are age 8 years and above. Please be patient and give runners a wide berth.

We hope this will be a great event for the Falkland Islands and your co-operation in making it a success is hugely appreciated.

If you have any questions concerning the above please contact us on 22220. Thank You.

Your questions answered

QFollowing the recent disconcerting reports in the Argentine press, radio and TV, could MLAs please clarify the comments of Minister of State Hugo Swire who is reported to have said in a press conference that Britain would be prepared to discuss the Falklands sovereignty issue with the current opposition members of the Argentine Congress who he felt were much more qualified politicians that the present President and her party members? Also did he reveal to MLAs, while visiting the Falklands, what he had in mind when he spoke of establishing 'better relationships with Argentina'?

A MLA Mike Summers as Legislative Assembly Chair provided the following response

We understand that whilst visiting Montevideo last week, following his attendance at President Bachelet's inauguration in Santiago, Mr Swire expressed his desire to work constructively with the government of Argentina across the many areas of interest shared by the UK and Argentina, but repeated that this could only happen as long as it does not affect the rights and wishes of the Falkland Islands people. At no point did he offer to discuss sovereignty with either the Government or opposition leaders

As regards to the next election, he did not differentiate between candidates, nor did he express a preference for any individual. It appears that the journalist conducting the interview (from Telam) mentioned Massa and Macri by name, but we are advised that Mr Swire did not name them himself.

During his recent visit to the Falklands Mr Swire said he did not expect much change in the rhetoric when a new Argentine president had been elected, but hoped that any incoming president would realise that the policies carried out by the present government in Argentina towards the Falkland Islands had been counterproductive, had not achieved anything, and what was required was a totally new approach which would bring prosperity not only to the Islands, but also to Argentina. We understand that his comments in Uruguay were of a similar na-

MLA's have always been aware of HMG's wish to have better relations with Argentina on a range of bi-lateral issues that are not to do with the Falklands. This should not be a matter of concern given their robust stance on sovereignty."

MLAs decision unanimous

MLA Mike Summers' response to Annie Gisby's letter in last week's Penguin News

THE interpretation you have chosen to put on the Members decision to assist the Camp sports organisations to continue with their meetings this year, in a time honoured fashion, is not the position Members had in mind when making their decisions.

No Member has scorn for the law, as you put it, and the actions that were taken were purely to ensure that our Camp culture and traditions could proceed without interruption. And those actions were in themselves entirely within the law.

Camp sports have taken place on East and West Falklands for several decades, and remain an important part of the end of season activities in Camp. Members wish to see the Camp continue as an attractive place to live and work, and the Rural Development Strategy includes as part of its work ensuring that there is adequate social provision, as well as normal Government services.

The decisions that were made had to be made at short notice because the Court had delayed hearing the applications until shortly before the events themselves. The fact that they had been heard by the Senior Magistrate (rather than by the Summary Court - the JP's) meant that any appeal could only be to the Chief Justice, and that was not practicable in the time left. It is for this sort of reason that the recent review of the Falklands Courts by the UK Ministry of Justice strongly recommended that more use should be made of the Summary Court to deal with routine Court business and licensing issues. Any appeal can then be heard locally.

Your letters

The money provided to the Associations was without condition. They were not told in either instance how to apply it, though Members did anticipate they would use some of it to obtain legal advice on how best to proceed in the future, and whether in fact they do have any responsibility for traffic management under the Licensing Ordinance.

To address your specific questions, the decision to assist the Associations was unanimous and nobody voted against it.

MLA Mike Summers It should be noted that in fact from the Magistrate's Court there is no provision for appeal within the current Licensing Ordinance 1994, regarding any application heard. However, if an application is heard by the Licensing Justices' (The Summary Court) sections 17 - 19 set out appeal procedure to the Magistrate's Court. It is also worth noting that under the current Licensing Ordinance although the court may attach any condition it feels fit to do so to any Occasional Licence there is no provision to deal with any subsequent breach which may arise. Open invitation to liaise

I HAVE read with satisfaction your editorial and I wish to inform Islanders of the following.

For 13 years we have been dialoguing with them in a friendly manner and with mutual respect. We have shared many things in everyday life, things that are not learned in any university, and we have grown, and today we are interested in the opinions of the highest authorities, obviously from both positions.

It is good that all support dialogue, but if we do not create an environment for it, it will fail. With our only aim being to help governments, last year we created The Sub-committee Liaison. It is presented with an absolutely neutral position and we want this to be built by Argentines, British and Islanders. The first two we have already achieved. Please receive this general invitation. We want to also include two Islanders.

Remembering Derek Osborne

IT is with great sadness we announce the death of Derek Osborne, aged 82, after a year long battle with a rare form of skin cancer.

Derek was born in Stanley in 1931, only child of Mary Short and John Osborne.

He gained a scholarship in 1945 to go to the British School in Montevideo where he achieved the School Certificate. On returning to Stanley he continued to be very active in the Boys Brigade becoming a Lieutenant in 1949. He also at this time did DJ work on Stanley radio entertaining his peers. He worked at the Met Office in Stanley for four years, two years as locally employed then two years employed by the Air Ministry as an overseas posting at the end of which he was obliged to go 'home' to UK.

Later he joined the RAF, serving as an Air Met Observer in Northern Ireland and in that capacity went twice to Christmas Island in the Pacific and once to Australia for the A bomb testing in 1957/8

After leaving the RAF, back in the Met Office, he to went to work for the Australian Government at Australia House in London in the Immigration Department where he assisted people travelling on the £10 scheme and then later in the visa department where he was a much valued employee until his retirement in 1992.

He was instrumental in organising and running the Falkland Island Reunion party in London and later at Ham Hall in Richmond.

After retiring he and Patricia travelled extensively visiting America, Canada, New Zealand and Australia and many parts of Europe and were delighted to return home to Stanley for three weeks in 1992.

He never forgot his Falkland roots and was an avid reader of the Penguin News until he became too ill in the last few weeks of his life. Derek was a committed Christian did extensive work for the church. He will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

Johnsons goes technicolour for motocross

ARRIVING at Johnsons Harbour on a calm sunny Sunday morning, I was met on the green by a cut of fluorescent coloured party revellers, and snaking through the settlement I found further evidence of radiantly tinted humans. Apparently, an atomic air-burst food colour bomb had been detonated at the previous evenings Bachelor and Spinster Ball.

I met the pink and red chairman of FIMA busily setting up the motocross track by the airstrip, an area of natural rolling greens overlooking Berkeley Sound.

Opening the day as always was the PeeWee class, consisting of Regan Newman, Rebecca Clarke, Travis Jaffray, Elisha Joshua and Lane McKay.

Adam Dixon raced with them as no other junior riders had materialized. Regan Newman, riding her new Honda, proved to be unbeatable on the day. Travis Jaffrey tried to wring every ounce of power out of his bike, but he was still unable to match the top speed of Regan's Honda. Lane McKay becoming ever more confident, obtained two creditable third place finishes.

Next on was the Clubman, comprising the up-and-coming and the doddery. Racing with them was Angeline Joshua and Sian Nightingale. Once again it was Jimmy Moffatt and Paul Joshua who battled for supremacy. It was Jimmy Moffatt who took the honours this week, despite washing out towards the end of the last race. A deep rolling belly laugh provided by Gary Tyrrell resonated in his ears, as Gary jockeyed around the flailing form.

The Expert class, always good for an entertaining spectacle, was made more so by the arrival of Arthur Turner who nobody expected to be racing due to his sports week injury: "It's fine chay. I moved my brake lever to get better purchase power," was all Arthur had to say on the subject.

Nathan Lowe and Jay Moffatt

Jay Moffatt once again riding his 150 KTM, stamped his authority over the class with two fine wins and Arthur taking second. Stefen Clarke suffered the humiliation of watching his 47-year-old father's rear wheel spray roost in his eyes for the full two races. Will he ever get a bike that can beat his Dad's?

As always the day finished with the beer leg; fun to watch as riders swap mounts, new comers get a taster, and it's open to all classes.

Jay, Arthur and Stefen had a battle royale, but the demolition of the track, mainly by Arthur, and the dodgy cornering technique of all three got them disqualified and the case of beer went to Paul Joshua.

A big thanks to Molks and Martha Molkenbuhr for allowing us a great day's racing. As always, thanks to the irrepressible lady lap counters and officials, the marshals, John Carlin for the expert medical cover and Rincon Grande for sponsoring the event.

JOHNSONS Harbour farmer Lee Molkenbuhr and wife Martha hosted a lively Bachelor and Spinster's Ball in the farm shearing shed on Saturday night raising £497.30 towards sending the Islands' top shearers and wool handlers to the championships in Southern Ireland this year. At a fiver a head it was cheap at the price for a fantastic event agreed party-goers. The weekend included a peat cutting competition, a treasure hunt, barbecue and a dance. As a final surprise, Joleen Morrison provided guests with a whole pile of squeezy bottles containing a treasure hunt, barbecue and a dance. As a final surprise, Joleen Morrison provided guests with a whole pile of squeezy bottles containing diluted food colouring. "They weren't expecting that." Martha told Penguin News.

diluted food colouring, "they weren't expecting that," Martha told Penguin News.

Around 50 people turned up, most dutifully clad in formal dress (primarily purchased at the charity shop) to enjoy the entertainment.

If you missed out never fear:" We've decided to make it an annual event," said Martha.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VHF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters.

Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

WHF 2 Metre Band: Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and easant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

OH the shame of it. I had to buy some potatoes. Those left from last season had to be thrown away. How I wish we could still get 'Fusarex', a powder which kept potatoes nice and firm for a very long time simply by inhibiting the growth of new sprouts. However, that is no longer an option and our earlies, inside, have all been used. Those outside including the main-crop potatoes, are still struggling a little to recover from the frost which hit them a couple of months ago.

I could dig some out but I fear it would mean digging quite a few roots at a time just for one meal. Of all the vegetables grown, potatoes are definitely a must in this household, and so they are being left alone to hopefully grow larger for the time being.

I was glad that the Camp Sports went off so well. Had they been a week later it would have made for miserable days for everyone. The winds have been rather more like we get in Spring. At that time it is quite invigorating and full of the promise of better times ahead. That has not been so this year; I think the days that have been 'summer' could be counted on the fingers. The plants have struggled but given their best under the circumstances. That is not to say that they are not also mightily confused though. The winter flowering hellebores which would normally struggle to flower before June are beginning to flower as are a lot of primroses. The very fragile looking hardy cyclamen are forming quite a large clump full of dainty little pink and white flowers also. Those flowering at normal times are the rather battered lilies and red-hot-pokers and of course the wonderfully faithful pinks and carnations with their lovely scent (as long as you can get close enough in the breeze).

The roses are also doing quite well. The established ones are flowering well, though some seem to have decided to give this year a miss. Never mind; we now have about forty different roses out there and many more which are repeated. I'm hoping, assuming we don't have a summer like this one, and no other disasters either, that we will have a lovely show of rose shrubs and climbers next year.

We have taken all the red, white and black current berries off now. Some have been cooked, many more just popped into the freezer. all the rhubarb has finished also. The grapes, (inside) have had a thinning. The plum outside has also had another thinning and still it flowers and produces yet more fruit. Those will never ripen so I continue to remove them. Who needs bees in this wind? The raspberries are doing well but, I fear there are two-legged little mice getting there before me. At least they are being enjoyed.

I'm running late with everything once again so cut down to about two inches the swede tops and put out the last of the spring cabbages and other brassicas last week. There are more lettuce seeds to be planted under cover too, the last lot got totally demolished by slugs. I think the slimy creatures are probably feeling a bit sick now as I went a little mad on the blue pellets!

I've complained (at length) about weather and health reasons affecting our vegetable garden so badly this year. But nowhere near as badly as the 'garden' at the Training Centre. This is a totally derelict area with the 'camp' encroaching. What a sad sight and a dreadful waste of time and re-

In complete contrast is Tony Carey's garden. I was privileged last week to be shown through it. The whole garden is colour-ful and incredibly tidy. The fruit and vegetable garden is astonishingly beautiful and neat, the tidy hedges providing wonderful shelter and the paths clean and crisp and, not a weed to be seen anywhere. The vegetables were in superb condition and his rows of healthy and ripe strawberries had me almost, speechless with envy. He very kindly offered me some gooseberries. I jumped at the chance and within half an hour had picked fifteen pounds of them and you could barely see where I had taken them from. I have always had a sneaky preference for the ornamental garden for its flowers and colour but grow vegetables, if only out of necessity. Seeing a garden such as that one does tempt me to try a lot harder. There's a lot of beauty to be had from seeing row upon row of well grown vegetables.

I think I mentioned that I was going to try growing bush tomatoes as cordons hoping to make their growth a little more tidy and keep the fruit away from creepy crawlies. Well, that was not very successful, and I now have miniuntidy cordons instead. They are still a lovely tomato so I will just have to grow them as bushes but in large pots next year. Tomorrow I expect to get amongst the rest of them and cut off their growing tips. This year is not going to provide good ripening conditions so all the goodness will be needed and used up by the existing fruit, which is plentiful but not all ripe.

Hockey club energises

THE 2014 Dek Hockey season started with the first two matches of the Energise Shield on Sunday.

This was the first time that most would see how the new teams gelled and just how much muscle memory was left in the individuals.

Blackhawks faced the Penguins with a rare result of a goal-less draw with shut-outs for goalies Ben Hoyles and Stuey Duncan.

Both teams were short of players and Marco Leyton stood in to strengthen the Penguins giving both sides one substitute outfielder. The teams were eager to keep the match at a good pace to push their fitness, but after 50 minutes of intense defending and a good number of on-target shots there was no reward for either team.

The second match between Panthers and Coyotes was also short of players but it was a skilful display and a promising start for the new teams.

Kindly Panthers' Dan Fowler played for Coyotes until their third outfield player arrived but despite being short of substitute outfielders, Antoine Daille, Ville Peltovuori and Arturo Tellez attacked strongly to secure six goals against Panthers three.

Both sides seemed on good form despite the time off. Panthers' Karl Nightingale was first to score this season 12 minutes into the first half but was closed down soon after by Antoine who soon added another to take the lead for Coyotes.

Antoine secured the first hattrick of the season two minutes into the second half after a shot rebounded into Panthers goal and new player this season, Ville, pushed them further ahead.

Rafa Sotomayor and Karl closed the gap with another two for Panthers in the second half but Antoine and Arturo stretched Coyotes victory.

FIXTURES

Due to double booking of the Sports Hall, Tuesday's matches were postponed and unfortunately there will be some more cancellations until the issue is resolved.

Sunday matches are scheduled to continue as normal (23rd March: 1600 Coyotes v Penguins & 1700 Flyers v Panthers).

The teams need club support to help referee and keep score so if you are playing in a later match and can come early to help it would be greatly appreciated.

Sarah wins White Rock

Sarah Bowles collects her prize from Carole and Rodney Lee

THE White Rock golf competition was held on Sunday and attracted a healthy field of 21 golfers. The weather provided easily the best golfing conditions I can remember this season. Although cold, there was only a slight southerly breeze, which meant good scoring was to be expected.

Scores returned were indeed generally very good and the main prize winners were all comfortably under their handicaps. With a superb return of 39 stableford points, it was Sarah Bowles who took the honours.

Martyn Gilson-Clarke finished second, also on 39 points, losing out on a countback to Sarah. Kevin Clapp continued his recent good form to take third place with 38 points.

The minor prizes were well shared out with Troyd Bowles winning best front nine with 19 points and Richard Bonner took best back nine with 18 points. There were three nearest the pin prizes won by Gary Clement, Drew Irvine and Joe Duncan respectively. Longest drive went to Wayne Clement.

Stanley Golf Club is very grateful to Rodney and Carole Lee for their generous sponsorship of the White Rock event.

Special thanks also to Rodney, lan Stewart and Gary Clement for all the recent work done on the course.

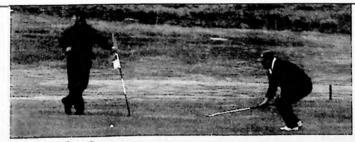

Next Sunday Stanley Golf Club will hold the Caribbean Alliance competition.

Local businesses to benefit from Noble dock facility

NOBLE Energy expects to inject $4 million into Falklands businesses with the construction of the temporary dock facility which arrived in the Falklands yesterday, Senior Vice President Susan Cunningham told those attending a presentation on Monday evening.

The installation to the east of FIPASS which the Government has stated will have to be removed in three years is due to be completed by July.

Ms Cunningham arrived in the Islands by company jet earlier that day and in a packed out Narrows Bar outlined the oil company's programme leading into 2015 when further exploration will take place.

She said Noble Energy as a whole was predicted to more than double production by 2018, but was quick to point out that the mission statement was to energise the world and better people's lives.

Noble Energy was, "a bunch of people, not a corporate entity," Ms Cunningham told her interested audience, adding, "everyone around us, those we touch," should also enjoy success.

Talking to Penguin News on Tuesday she said "possibilities," had been identified in the preliminary findings from the recent Ramform Titan seismic survey, but that it was too early to make predictions.

"But that is why we are going to go out and contract a rig to start exploration from what we have seen in the first two areas to the south," she said.

The company expects to start this phase in 2015 and Ms Cunningham said the expectation was that if some encouraging wells were discovered, sourcing of a rig to continue the operation would begin immediately.

In terms of operations the Falklands is more challenging than some, "but not out of the realm of what we have dealt with elsewhere in the world," said Ms Cunningham, adding, "our expectations are that we will be able to make it work."

challenges which made the job more exciting, she replied, "absolutely," adding that at risk of sounding like Star Trek. Noble Energy likes, "to go where no one has gone before.

"We see the greatest

"We see the greatest possibilities and are confident we can work through the challenges and have experience doing that. We really believe that it's just a case of us deciding we're going to figure out a way."

While the Argentine Government has threatened and even mitiated legal action against some of the companies carrying out exploration in Falklands waters, Noble Energy appear to have escaped unscathed to date

Ms Cunningham could offer no obvious explanation for this preferential treatment: "Who knows it could be because of where we come from and the range of places we work in around the world. I really don't know and hopefully it'll stay that way," she told Penguin News.

The company was committed to the Falklands. Miss Cunningham had stressed at Monday's meeting, adding that it was not the only place where different pressures and perceptions had to be dealt with.

Business Unit Manager Mike Radabugh had added that there had not been any problem getting service companies to sign up to the operation either.

Ms Cunningham who plans to return to the Islands at a lter date and enjoy some of the outdoor attractions on offer, said her first visit had been planned to coincide with the arrival of the Noble Frontier temporary dock and to begin building relationships and meeting the people involved. Unfortunately due to the bad weather hampering progress of the dock the former had not happened.

She acknowledged the good work Noble's FI rep Richard Winkleman was doing in the Falklands: "He represents the best of Noble," said Ms Cunningham, concluding, "We're now really looking forward to having some success and building on it."

Penguin News

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

ONE has been feeling a little inadequate this week surrounded as we have been with the awesomeness of all who took part in the Marathon on the weekend in weather conditions that can only be described as horrendous. While the sheer determination it takes to complete the gruelling 26 mile course is of course admirable, because of the success of Penguin News journalist Teslyn Barkman as first lady (yes the relevance of this title has been brought to our attention once or twice) we at Penguin News are especially aware of the sheer dedication it takes to prepare for such an event.

The fact I managed to develop a cold in the final week leading up to the race left us all living in fear that she would catch it and the months of training and abstinence would have all been in vain. Thankfully, all went well and Teslyn bounded over the finish line looking no less drained than her less-fit work colleagues after a Friday morning paper delivery round.

The theme of strong women continued throughout the week with a visit from oil company Noble Energy vice president Susan Cunningham who also highlighted some of the mental strengths it requires to aim high in what is predominantly a man's world.

While some would argue (usually those who have no intention of embracing the concept) that equality is being practiced, it is fact that women tend to earn less than their male colleagues in the corporate world. The middle of five children Susan was brought up sharing the chores with no expectation of anything separate as a gender within the family, "we all had to pull our weight," she told me this week.

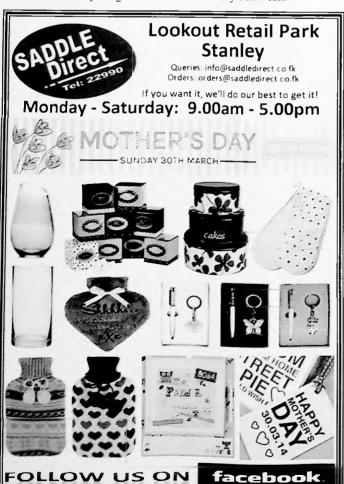

And later in her career this obviously stood her in good stead, "If ever I would start to feel victimised for being a woman, and it does happen. I would just say no, you're not going to go there. If you do there's no other place but down. I just very purposefully try to be the best I can be: the rest doesn't matter."

After considerable mulling I decided there was really no point in feeling inadequate. There's certainly no chance of me claiming honour in a marathon (genetics and a wonky set of hips took care of that long ago) or becoming an oil baroness at this late stage in life, but I can contribute in my own tin pot way.

After all I can change a Land Rover wheel as fast as any man, ride through a six hour gather in the pouring rain, be there for my friends when they need me, wind people up to distraction with my observations in this column and when all else fails grab a guitar and bash out a three chord country song; and I do it all the very best I can.

Assembly adopt the Islands Plan 2014 -18

ASSEMBLY Members approved the draft Islands Plan 2014 -2018 at yesterday's Legislative Assem-

Proposing the adoption of the document MLA Michael Poole described it as an important document that articulates the collective vision priorities for the Falkland Islands over the next four years and beyond.

"It describes the key actions that Government will take during the life of this Assembly, and lays the foundations for the future by setting out our plans to address the major issues that the Islands will face in the longer term," he said The Plan focuses on improving the quality of life of present and future generations by stimulating economic and social development, within the constraints of limited resources and the need to protect the environment

Our vision is, said MLA Poole, "To progress the sustainable, economic, social and political development of the Falkland Islands for the benefit of all residents.'

potentially changes that a hydrocarbons industry may bring - but we must work hard to ensure that the desire for such an industry becomes a reality, and to ensure that the Islands are prepared to manage ment

Economic develorment had historically been constrained by both physical and political isolation and the size of the resident population, he said, adding that the plan seeks to address these constraints.

The plan had been discussed in depth twice by MLAs and there had been no public consultation, said MLA Poole adding that it was fundamentally an Assembly document, "We were elected to lead and this document is a culmination of that

No more tipping at Mary Hill

SPOIL tipping on Cape Pembroke in the vicinity of Mary Hill Quarry will stop on Monday with the publication in the Gazette of the Stanley Common (Megabid Spoil Tip) Regulations 2014 in accordance with Section 10 of the Stanley Common Ordinance.

Legislative Assembly passed the motion that spoil tipping should now take place at a new site near Megabid following a proposal put forward by MLA Michael Poole and seconded by

MLA Jan Check

MLA Poole said spoil from a variety of work sites had overloaded the area behind Mary Hill Quarry which was also a national reserve. Tipping at the new site would take place at the discretion of the Director of Public Works, said MLA Poole.

MLA Cheek said real problems had been experienced with past spoil disposal and the less sensitive Megabid area had been identified some time ago. She added that she hoped the new regulations would not impinge on anyone's enjoyment of the Common as a whole

Supporting the proposal MLA Phyl Rendell said considering that the request for tipping to stop at Cape Pembroke had been made in August last year it had taken an inordinate amount of time to reach the house

She said as the joint author of a report last August which dealt with oil being disposed of in Mary Hill, she looked forward to seeing some of the recommendations made within that report being implemented.

MLA Elsby assured the new site would not be a massive "slag heap", but would be treated sensitively, while MLA Gavin Short defended PWD's decision to spread spoil in Cape Pembroke, saying it had been an area which burned out many years ago and when greened over would look good

Scholar will continue to 'extract' the Falklands future thanks to scholarship

DOCTORAL Candidate in Anthroplogy from the City Universityy of New York James Blair has been awarded a prestigious Fulbright Scholarship to continue his studies in the Falklands.

Mr Blair whose project is entitled "Extracting the Future: Oil, Environment and Self-Determination in the Falklands," said he was truly honoured to be a Fulbright Scholar.

"Out of all the Fulbright competitions, the UK is the most competitive country in the world, so I am especially thrilled and I think it is significant that the US-UK Fulbright Commission is sponsoring research in the Falklands."

His project will examine how Falklands residents are trying to control their own future through new forms of governance over resources, particularly energy. Mr Blair first visited the Islands last March for the referendum and become interested in both how Islanders see themselves as a people, and how they are "presenting their self-determination vote as evidence of stability for trade partners, oil firms and investors."

Mr Blair said he was closely following some of the infrastructure projects, such as the Temporary Dock Facility and the planned deep water port

"With office space at SAERI, I am learning about the data gap analyses to account for ecological risks. And through analysis of colonial reports and other documents at the Jane Cameron National Archives, my project considers how the present moment of potential oil development is an outcome of historical relations of resource management." he told Penguin News.

Mr Blair encourages anyone who might be interested in an interview to please contact him on mobile 65179 or email jblair@gc.cuny.edu as he is eager to gather a wide variety of stories and opinions.

Although his research schedule is subject to change, he expects to be here until the end of April and return in September through to January, with intermittent phases of research in South America and the UK. "Thanks to the Fulbright, I will be able to write up much of my PhD dissertation in the UK next year," said Mr Blair.

Sex crime allegations

THE Falkland Islands Government has stated that an investigation is on-going regarding allegations of sexual activity with a child against a former teacher at the Falkland Islands Community School. The former teacher left the Falkland Islands several years ago and is now resident in the United Kingdom.

A statement on Monday from the Royal Falkland Islands Police confirmed that information regarding the allegations had been received and forwarded to a police force in the United Kingdom, who subsequently arrested, then bailed the person in question.

All members of Education Department staff employed by Falkland Islands Government undergo background checks with the Disclosure and Barring Service.

Loligo and Illex record catches

RECORD catches of Illex and Loligo squid have been achieved this season. First this week came news that on Sunday occurred the highest daily catch and highest catch rate of Loligo squid since at least 2000. The total catch by the 16 mainly Falklands registered trawlers in the fishery was 1,102.3 tonnes for the day or an average catch per vessel of 68.9 tonnes said Director of Fisheries John Barton

On March 26 the total daily Illex catch by jiggers was a record for the last 20 years at 4,898 tonnes. Mr Barton said: "However one good day does not make a season and there is still a long way to go in the current season."

The combined catch of Illex, Loligo and finfish on March 26, could fill about 220 forty foot reefer containers.

Land disposal paper debated

A PAPER to consider land disposal policy caused considerable debate in Executive Council this week said MLA Mike Summers in his summary of the meeting.

He said, "in order to avoid further confusion whilst the development of a coherent and consistent land disposal policy for commercial land use is under way, Members agreed that the existing policy of no conversion to freehold for oil development purposes inside Stanley Harbour should remain in place."

This is only until the new policy is agreed in June 2014 he said: "and recognises that the new policy may have very different principles underlying it.

"Members are conscious of the need to support economic and business development by Falklands companies, and this will be fully taken into account in the forthcoming discussions."

Team kit covered by Noble contribution

NOBLE Energy Senior Vice President Susan Cunningham and the company's representative in the Falklands Richard Winkleman present a cheque for £10,940 from Noble Energy to Falkland Islands Overseas Games representatives this week. The amount is the equivalent of the budget for the official kit the Falklands' team will be wearing to the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow. The Commonwealth Games team from the Falklands will include both shooters and badminton players.

Earlier Airbridge departure times criticised

THE decision by the Ministry of Defence to implement earlier departure times for northbound Airbridge flights has been criticised by the Chamber of Commerce for the, "lack of consideration for users of the service."

It was announced this week that check-in timings for the twice weekly departure of the Airbridge flight will be one hour earlier than they are currently. Civilian passengers will now have to check in between 5.30 and 6.30am with the Airbridge departure times also being made earlier.

The effect of the time change will mean that drivers and vehicles will be on the MPA Road earlier for the Airbridge flight in winter. Passengers travelling to MPA in the early hours, particularly if there are snowy or icy conditions, will be exposed to greater risk than they already are, said a spokesperson for the Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber members feel that the decision will further compound the change to permanent summer time during winter which has already taken travel an hour into the coldest and darkest part of winter, placing greater emphasis on the current level of safety measures on the MPA Road.

They also feel that on top of the increased risk to all road users, the change will also lead to greater inconvenience for users of the Airbridge service and to drivers for transport companies who will have to work in the middle of the night in order to ensure passengers reach the air terminal safely.

Consideration will also have to be given to the Public Works Department gritting gang who will have to start work earlier, potentially resulting in cost implications for the Falkland Islands Government. The lack of consultation and consideration for the passengers and businesses that use the service has been identified as particularly concerning, said the spokesperson.

WE managed to get to and from the west in spite of the weekend weather and the ferry trip proved much smoother than I expected with the bonus of whale sightings en route. Similar questions were raised both sides of the Sound including roads, FIMCO and telecoms including mobile phone coverage and internet costs. I know there are some real problem areas on West roads but I have to say some of us on the East are envious of the general standard of others. Returning by FIGAS through a few squalls was fun as always, as was the crabwise landing in Stanley.

A recurring theme at both meetings was the cost of almost everything we do, in particular the fact that there are no economies of scale in much of it. I have always supported a subsidy to FIMCO on the basis that in doing so we are supporting diversification for farmers and bringing in money which would not otherwise come into the Islands. While the circulation of money around businesses that service the requirements of other businesses and individuals is an economic fact, the Islands also need new money to cover all that is spent over season materials. fuels and consumer goods. It is also fact that significant percentages of the money earned here by those on short and longer contracts is remitted overseas. Substantial sums are brought in by fishing licence fees and taxation of companies and individuals involved in the industry with lesser amounts from wool and tourism, meat sales are a useful addition to this.

This week we had a useful meeting with representatives of Noble Energy who also did a public presentation the same day. They updated us on the progress of their temporary port and exploration plans. It's encouraging to see how much money and effort is being expended in further exploration by several oil companies. Some of that money is spent on support services and goods in the Islands which spreads the benefits to more individuals and companies. FIG spending of some tax receipts on capital projects may further benefit the community.

Hostile attitude towards tourism says Summers

THERE had been an ambivalent and hostile attitude towards the Tourist Board and its administration from the country as a whole over the years, said MLA Mike Summers in Legislative Assembly on Thursday.

He said the reason for this was unclear to him. As an industry, tourism was as big as agriculture and would have an enduring life as a sustainable industry long after oil was gone, he added.

Investment over the years was approximately half of that invested in agriculture and less than quarter if subsidies to the Meat Company and the like were included, he said adding: "As a Government, as a country and as a nation we haven't really given the focus to tourism that we ought to have done in my view."

The comments followed a question from MLA Phyl Rendell asking for assurance that the long awaited transition from privately registered company to that of statutory corporation would be in place by July. MLA Michael Poole assured the move was very much on track.

He had earlier voiced his opinion that the Tourist Board needed a higher profile within Government and the move to statutory corporation would help achieve that by ensuring it was factored into the budget. infrastructure planning and policy making in general.

It was sensible they merge together and have, "one coherent body that is responsible for national tourism development," he said.

A subvention request of £80,000 for tourism had been approved with the majority of it allocated to overseas marketing and promoting the Islands generally and also annual operating budget, he told the Assembly.

MLA Summers asked MLA Poole if he had any views on the role tourism plays in public diplomacy? "I think it is partly a result of the ambivalence to the industry that we haven't really grasped the opportunity it provides to enhance the public diplomacy programme," he added.

MLA Poole agreed there was a link. He said every visiting tourist was someone the public diplomacy message could be delivered to, adding he would talk to the Tourist Board to see how best the two initiatives could be combined.

Medical questions examined at Legislative Assembly

THERE is no written policy in place for the repatriation of a person who has died overseas, confirmed Member of Legislative Assembly Mike Summers at Thursday's meeting of the Legislative Assembly. Responding to a question from MLA Gavin Short he said: "The Falkland Island Government Office in London makes all the arrangements between the hospital, the funeral home and Brize Norton and covers all the costs. Generally the arrangements take between two to three weeks to sort.

He was also asked to confirm whether it was true that the time the opticians will spend in the Falklands has been reduced and if so why was this visit shortened?

He replied that there was a visit by the optician for five weeks starting on May 8 and finishing on June 10: "The last visit was shorter and was curtailed even further because of a delay on the airbridge."

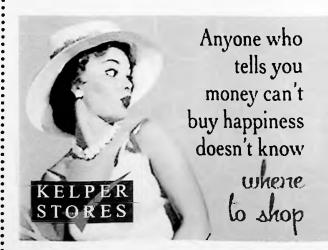

He added that generally there were three visits a year depending on the optician's availability and the needs of the service: "The next visit will be closely monitored to check it is meeting the needs of all those who need to see the optician."

MLA Short went on to ask if MLA Summers would indicate whether there was a policy for patients to be accompanied overseas at FIG expense when they are sent for medical treatment or diagnosis. "If there is policy please explain what it is and if it differs between those sent to South America and the United Kingdom," he enquired.

MLA provided the following background information provided by Director of Health Services: "There is a policy in place regarding relatives accompanying patients overseas. It is set out in the Medical Treatment Overseas Policy which was approved at EXCO in December 2013."

Further amendment has since been made to this policy to clarify the arrangements for both parents of severely disabled children to accompany their child in specific circumstances: "There is no difference to the arrangements between South America and the United Kingdom."

KEMH staff eager for consultant advice on care of sick children

THAT visiting consultant paediatrician Dr Janet Craze has been attracting a 'packed out' seminar room at her lectures this week at the King Edward VII Hospital is testament to the staff's eagerness to be as educated as possible when it comes to the care of children.

Dr Craze has had a long relationship with the hospital in Stanley providing expert advice for many years all the way from Oxford, however with the recent increased emphasis in the Falklands on protection of children, it was decided that staff, across the board, would benefit from face to face training

Dr Craze's programme of lectures comprises: paediatric life support, management of sick children and acute paediatric problems, however while here she will also be treating a number of young patients.

Give us two minutes...

Tim Drew

1. What is your most prized possession? My hard drive. It has my life on it.

2. What is the or worst piece of advice you have ever been given? 'Move to Edinburgh, the surfing on the East Coast is great', wasn't the best advice I have been given.

3. Who would you most like to have a cup of tea/tot with? Chrissie Wellington; four time women's fronman world champion or Dean Karnazes (ultramarathon legend or lunatic, depending on your view on running).

4. What is your most embarrassing moment? My 18th birthday: stripped naked on a bus full of college students on the way home from a club, then thrown off on the side of the road about seven miles from home, with literally nothing but 10p for a phone

5. If you could set up a business in the Falklands what would it be? Pasty shop - I am from Comwall!

6. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? I would quite like to go to the US, as I haven't been to that part of the world and there are so many different places to go there.

7. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I spent two summers on an island off the north of Wales, digging up 1000 year old Viking-age skeletons.

8. What's the best book you have read recently? Born To Run – amazing read whether you are into running or not.

9. What is the one, single food that you would never give up? Peanut butter

10. What is your happiest childhood memory? Spending days on Gwenver Beach in Cornwall.

11. Where did you meet your partner? Penzance Rugby Club 12. What did you want to be when you were a child? A lighthouse keeper. Serious.

13. If you could change something about yourself what would it be? To run quicker for longer.

Auspicious start for citizens advice bureau but volunteers still needed

OF 28 cases raised with the Citizens Advice Bureau (CAB) 26 are now closed, "from the CAB's point of view," Chair Dick Sawle reported this week...

Of these only two cases are still ongoing, "but full resolution of these two outstanding cases is expected shortly," he added.

The CAB was formed in July 2012 with the aim to, "give advice to people who seek it and offer advice, based on our findings back to policy makers."

back to policy makers."

Mr Sawle said: "There are many in our small community who may have problems that they wish to discuss with someone in complete confidence. Those problems range from legal disputes, employment issues, social welfare issues, debt problems and many other problems. Some are small and easily resolved and some are more complicated and can take a lot longer to resolve."

Speaking of the 28 cases, he said many were simply referred to a specialist to deal with. For example, in the case of many of the legal issues, the CAB was able to arrange for a free preliminary consultation with a lawyer from either of the two local legal practitioners participating voluntarily in the scheme. The client would then decide whether or not to proceed further on a professional basis.

Resolving the cases does not necessarily mean, "entirely to the satisfaction of the CAB's effent," but the client's problem was resolved; sometimes fully and sometimes a compromise was reached, said Mr Sawle.

The current committee is formed by Dick Sawle, Mark Neves, Karen Lee and Sharon Middleton and they have a list of volunteers they call upon to assist and to whom they may refer clients for more specialist advice.

Mr Sawle gave examples of issues faced by clients, one being social welfare payments. He said the problems they have encountered with some social welfare clients relate to the clients inability to live on what they receive. When a person, often for good reason, becomes unable to continue to work, they can then fall into the safety net of social welfare payments. This usually happens only when the situation has become desperate and by then financial commitments (such as hire purchase payments and arrears of rent with FIG) have often failed to be met.

There appears to be no clear policy as to how much a person is required to pay back in rent arrears, for example, to FIG he said. The CAB has had cases, "where it appears that this is simply negotiated with the individual, and social welfare payments are made, rent arrears are deducted from the payment and the result is the person is left with insufficient money on a weekly basis to feed themselves or stay warm in winter.

"There is no suggestion that there is any bad intent on the part of the people that administer such schemes, but the individuals concerned are often not able to negotiate on their own behalf. It would assist all parties if there was a clear policy that could be followed which treated any individual holistically and looked at all aspects of each case simply to ensure that the trap of poverty is avoided."

He said if anyone felt they might be able to assist the CAB in any way, "then please do get in touch. We always need people who are willing to help. Contact cab@horizon.co.fk or tel 55355.

The CAB is a completely voluntary organisation, without the assistance given by their sponsors (Stanley Services, Sure and The Print Shop) and without volunteers they would be unable to function.

This is the 'Kelper'

Journalist and author Natasha Niebieskikwiat's book 'Kelpers' describes to Argentine readers 'the nation' next door and history of its residents

THE reaction of the Argentine public to Clarin journalist's recently launched book 'Kelpers' has been, "less aggressive," than she expected Natasha Niebieskikwiat told Penguin News.

Sub-titled 'Neither English nor Argentine' and 'A view of the nation that is growing off our coast' (Kelpers. Ni ingleses ni argentinos: Cómo es la nación que crece frente a nuestras costas) the author spent time interviewing Islanders about their family histories and in telling those stories illustrates a society that she observes has moved and developed from early days of hardship, through to a economically healthy community.

By daring to represent Islanders as something other than the normal Argentine government interpretation of a 'non-people'. Miss Niebieskikwiat's book is controversial, even if the stories are not. However she feels that possibly as a result of the economic crisis in Argentina and the current government's diminishing popularity. If think it is a new moment... I found more people that think like me."

She says the Argentine Government and nationalist sectors have not reacted strongly to her book and this she optimistically believes is because there may be a new strategy coming; that while continuing to claim the Falklands it will no longer involve harassment of Islanders.

The book she describes as: "Nothing more than Islanders' family stories, because I do recognise you in your wishes, interests and way of life. So this book starts with a context in which I disagree completely with the Kirchnerism treatment of the Islands."

She believes that the Argentine Government has, "been very aggressive and creators of a blindness," with regard to the topic of the Falklands, "so the book is a collection of stories which I use to narrate part of the history of the Islands and the Islands in global history since 1833."

She adds: "The Biggs are there with the foundation of Stanley, the military pensioners, the Pitalugas, the Goss', the Rylanders, Hansens, Andreasens and Berntsens."

She also examines the stories of Islanders that fought in the World Wars and others that studied in Argentina, UK and Uruguay.

Natasha describes the aim of the book as, "bringing the Islands to the continent as a journey," or as the Buenos Aires Herald's Andrew Graham-Yooll put it, "Natasha walked the Islands. She went for the historical detail, visiting the tourist destinations the old homes, or what's left of them, of the early settlers, the museum, archive and library, among other points and went tracing families on the more remote farms."

Natasha Niebieskikwiat

He also notes that in terms of Argentines 'understanding' Falk-land Islanders, Miss Niebieskikwiat's book may, for the time being, be "the main contribution."

She can certainly claim a greater knowledge of the Islands than most visitors. She first arrived in the mid nineties (on her Polish passport) and has since visited many times and written about countless Falklands issues for Argentine national newspaper Clarin.

Those who know her locally likely view the petite reporter as feisty and even a little eccentric but also one who has gained a reputation for, "writing what I see," (to quote from a FIRS interview with her at the time of the referendum) and as a result, not what the more politically extremist Argentine readers might like to see.

She says: "The book is part of all the trips I have made to the Islands since 1996," but she was pressured to finish it in five month (having spoken with her publisher) last year shortly after the Falklands referendum. "I wanted this to appear in the year of the referendum and not around April 2, because it has nothing to do with that."

At the same time, Miss Niebieskikwiat's personal politics are in line with that of most other Argentines. She believes Argentina's historical claim is valid, but adds, "200 years have since passed and we need a different approach..."

Politicians, she believes, "make selfish and populist politics about the topic," and their approach changes with every government. She says the Argentine people do not care about their government's erratic approach because whether it is "hard or soft," the issue is not part of their everyday life.

Unlike the Kirchner government she believes, "dialogue with the Islanders is very important." Kelpers is available on

Lack of housing for vulnerable

A LACK of suitable housing for some vulnerable members of the community was discussed at the March 20 meeting of the Housing Committee.

In a report to the members it was noted that in fact the options for such people had decreased over the years: "The Young Persons Unit previously run by the Social Services is long closed and the loss of Lookout Lodge has also had a negative impact," it was noted in a report from the Housing Officer Bonnie Curtis, supported by a report from Senior Community Psychiatic Nurse Karen Rimicans.

Miss Curtis noted: "Currently the Housing Department and the Health and Social Services are working closely together to try to respond to crisis situations as they arise, but the resources we have at our disposal just do not meet the complex needs of the local community."

A purpose-built vulnerable adults unit was needed she said.

In the meeting it was minuted that a long term plan comprises a Vulnerable Persons Strategy and that this recognised the need for accommodation for vulnerable people.

Lookout Lodge was discussed, and it was felt individuals might stay over night there but rent rebate was not possible. Lookout Lodge will not accept individuals with long term problems such as alcoholism it was noted. The Housing Officer was told she should contact Housing Committee Chair MLA Barry Elsby if she was not able to secure accommodation for vulnerable people at the Lodge.

Ch Insp McGill said he could not comment on what the contingencies were, but assured they were in place.

"As you are aware urgent attention is being paid to addressing the future needs of the Falklands for prison places and to providing further accommodation as soon as possible," he told Penguin News this week.

He added: "This process will be dealt with during the forthcoming budget round on capital projects."

Nowhere as pretty as Pebble

FOR the last six months, Brad and I have been lucky enough to be the tour guides and jack-of-all trades at Pebble Island Lodge. It has been a season we will never

It has taken me 31 years to return to live in the Falklands and after so much anticipation, all my high expectations have been exceeded. We have loved every moment of watching the seasons change around us. We have been spellbound by the penguins, the flora, fauna, landscape and even the weather. We may still be in a rosy bubble of discovery, but it truly seems like two days are never the same on Pebble.

We would like to thank everyone who has made this season so wonderful. First and foremost Jacqui and Allan, your kindness and warmth means so much to us and your generosity of stories and knowledge has been invaluable.

Thank you to all the Islanders and MPA personnel we have met and who have helped us in so many ways, we have encountered nothing but kindness. Thank you to the visitors to Pebble, to meet such diverse and interesting people from all over the world and to see our own love of the Island reflected back in their enthusiasm, has been wonderful.

To meet veterans and hear their personal stories has been very emotional for us. We have had the privilege of sharing the story of those who were on Pebble for the SAS raid and take visitors to the HMS Coventry Memorial. Thank you to all the veterans for the time you have spent with us and for everything you did in 1982

Until we return on another adventure, cheers chey.

Shocking road

I AM not criticising the road workers they do a good job, but the material they are laying on the section from Mt Kent turn off to baby mountain is shocking. We did have a bumpy good surface now we have sticky treacle pudding on top of our once good sur-

This has made it difficult for farmers carting stock and fuel and similar. Are we going to have to put up with this rubbish throughout winter and why lay this trash on what was a good surface why not do the stretches of road that are a problem in the winter?

Welsh Guards veterans thanks

I WOULD wish to take this opportunity on behalf of all the Welsh Guards Officers and Warrant Officers who have visited over the last ten days to thank all the Islanders for continuing your support and welcome to the many visiting veterans over the years since 1982, of which we are the latest group

We have had an excellent visit with a busy timetable covering a multitude of areas of interest from the military aspect to the social and sporting and with the assistance of yourself an excellent insight into the Islands success since 1982 and its hopes for the future. We have been superbly looked after by everyone we have been in contact with, there are so many who have supported us from Ellen Davis and Gary Clement at Liberty Lodge, CSgt Trev Law of the FIDF, Kevin Kilmartin from Bluff Cove, guides and drivers on the battlefield tours to Nick Bonner who has taken us fishing, those who have organised visits and presentations those who have welcomed us into their homes including Tim and Jan Miller, Ian and Sheila Stewart and Frank and Vera Leyland with hospitality that has been second to none. I wish I had the space to mention many

I would finally like to thank Mike Summers and his colleagues for their presentation.

Stanley woman fined for using mobile phone while driving

STANLEY woman Chloe Ford (21) was fined £150 plus £85 prosecution costs after she admitted driving while using a mobile phone.

Miss Ford pleaded guilty by post to the charge.

Crown Prosecutor Rowe told the court that Miss Ford had been witnessed driving westerly along Ross Road East and holding a phone to her ear on February 4, by an off-duty police

Senior Magistrate Carl Gums-ley said Miss Ford's licence was to be endorsed in addition to the

THE Falkland Islands is in cruise company Holland America's top destinations confirmed the Tourist Board's (FITB) Managing Director Tony Mason, having recently returned from the United States where he met with, "key industry players in the cruise industry.

Mr Mason said the meetings were excellent and when speaking with Holland America's Board of Directors, they disclosed the Falkland Islands was in their top destinations as verified by onboard surveys which rate visitor experience overall.

The Falkland Islands received an 8.53 on a 1 to 9 scale which is in Mr Mason's view an excellent achievement for the Islands. This is something we should all be proud of as a rating on this scale is clearly due to everyone in the industry's committed efforts and hard work," he said. He added that one of Holland America's VPs informed him, "the Falkland Islands delivers and sells and will continue to be part of the itineraries moving forward."

Discussions also took place with Holland America and other cruise lines and port authorities surrounding the proposed deep water port.

Accommodation Accreditation 2014

The Accommodation Accreditation Programme planned for 2014/15 season, "will kick off in the coming months," said Mr Mason.

Accommodation providers are encouraged to participate in the programme and to contact the Tourist Board to get on the schedule Star-ratings are determined by the services and facilities provided for guests, but also by the quality of the welcome, service and hospitality of the staff, the food and the cleanliness. Having an official star-rating system helps potential guests know what to expect before they arrive. Those participating in the scheme are eligible to apply for a tourism grant which as previously explained is a matched funding for providers wishing to improve the offering of their accommodation. More information about this programme is available at the FITB. The 2014-15 ratings will take place later this year and will be overseen by Accorn Tourism from the UK

2014 Tourism Awards

The Board is gearing up for this year's Tourism Awards which will be held on Thursday April, 10 2014 at Government House

Mr Mason said nominations have been coming in since October and the hundreds of forms make this the most competitive year to date. The deadline for entries is Tuesday April 1, with the top two in each category invited on the night with the winners announced during the event.

Managing Director Tony Mason said, "this year's event will be the best ever and I am grateful to everyone at Government House for hosting the event. We have achieved a lot in tourism this year and have great plans for the next season as well. The future for tourism in the Falklands is exciting and definitely sustainable. We are moving forward quickly to ensure we continue to grow and reach new markets which will secure the future of the tourism sector in the coming years."
He added, "We are doing things a bit different with the awards ceremony this year with top nominces and a guest being invited, as well as a draw for the remaining tickets.

The remaining invitations to the event will be randomly selected and winners will be notified by phone on or before April 4. The Board encourages everyone to apply for the tickets, as there will be plenty to give away.

Mr Mason said: "The event is aimed at those involved in the tourism industry to say thanks for a fantastic season.

Ironman Tim wins Stanley Marathon

volved in obtaining the maximum fitness to tackle the gruelling challenge of the most southern AIMS credited marathon, it seemed a cruel blow for the runners to have to take on the elements on Sunday.

For Year 6 teacher Timothy Drew who pounded his way to victory in the Standard Chartered Bank sponsored race with a time of 2:54:39, the more the weather deteriorated the stronger he seemed to run. The speed he took on the final miles running into the wind to the west of Stanley before making the final turn seemed just as quick as when he had set off and left spectators in awe of his stamina.

But then as an athlete who has completed two Ironman Triathlons which finish with a marathon after a 2.5 mile swim and a 112 mile bike. ride (PB 10:3) and claimed fourth place in a 50km Ultramarathon (3:28) in Jordan it would seem he is more than man enough for any weather the Falklands can throw at the hilly Cornish course, which he said he could possibly have beaten had Sunday been less windy. He said he enjoys the solitude and peace of long distance running as well as testing the limitations of his body. "I also believe it's something we are all more than capable of and even something that as a species, we are designed to do, it's just many of us have got out of the habit," said

The main opposition in the early part of the race had been the RAF runner Jain Bailey who looked ready to settle hot on his heels in the early stage of the 26.2 mile race. However the uphill slog from Stanley Airport back into town with a fiercely cold wind bringing occasional hail squalls had resulted in the gap widening from just seconds to several minutes by the time the pair descended onto Ross Road

South Georgia Government CEO Martin Collins who is no stranger to the rigours of a Falklands marathon had established his third place in the race in the fairly early stages also and solidly set his pace to hold on

Talented teenage Tyrrell wins Caribbean Alliance

I AM often asked if I get bored playing the same golf course all the time. My stock answer is no, as the weather is never the same two rounds in a row and therefore the course always plays differently. However, last Sunday's weather took this to a new level. At one stage a well struck drive which would generally travel about 240 yards barely made it 140 as the wind just beat it down.

The Caribbean Alliance tournament teed off with a slightly reduced field, possibly because of the Marathon for some and work commitments for others, but most likely because some had been put off by the weather forecast. The hardy bunch that turned up to play were in no doubt to head out as the wind was only 25 knots from the west and the sky was blue at the start time. However, things soon changed. After a decent start the first shower hit as we played our sixth hole. The sky cleared again, but only for a few minutes as soon Mt Tumbledown began to disappear behind a white wall of approaching hail. Within moments the green was white and we were reduced to hiding behind our golf bags. At this point our thoughts wandered to the brave runners doing the marathon and we soon realised that we weren't so badly off, at least we could shelter Conditions did continue to get tougher; the wind kept increasing relentlessly until it was near 40 knots by the time we finished.

Given the tough conditions, scores were understandably lower than usual. However one player stood out from the pack by a clear margin with an incredible 35 points. That player was 14 year old James Tyrrell who had handled the conditions amazingly well It was the sort of day that many would say "you can't play golf in that" but apparently you can, although the rest of us may be asking James for some tips on how it's done! This was James' second win in recent weeks and he looks like finishing his first season in the top six placings in the league.

place was Second Bowles with a very good return of 32 points with 19 of them coming in the worst of the wind on the back wind. Tim Bonner made up the top placings with his 27 points being good enough for third place, emphasising how difficult it was. Best front nine went to Tony Ballantyne and best back to Rod Tuckwood. Troyd won both nearest the pin prizes as he was the only one to hit the green on each occasion and longest drive went to Tim Bonner.

The golf club wishes to thank Caribbean Alliance for their kind sponsorship of the tournament. This weekend the club will host a fun competition (format to be confirmed). Non members are welcome to play in this event, so if you haven't been up yet, come and have a go. Likewise anyone thinking about joining is welcome to come and sign in at the usual time of 9:00, tee off at 9:15

FORTY-THREE valiant children and adults also braved the weather on Sunday for the Standard Chartered three kilometre fun run.

Speedy Adam Dickson took first place followed by Shaun East and Ioan Roberts. Regan Newman was not far behind to be the first girl to cross the line and a few seconds later Marvis Chipunza and Priya Suppiah ran in second and third. The six junior winners and first three adults all received prizes at the Town Hall marathon prize-giving.

Risk to economic growth as lands policies sought

LOCAL fishing company Fortuna Limited's efforts to provide layup provision for vessels at the Camber has again been delayed while the Government seek to make Lands policy decisions and view the business case for the new deep water port.

Lands Committee chair MLA Michael Poole said it was a "most frustrating meeting," and recognised that in refusing the application there was a risk of, "foregoing some economic growth." He added that the same argument for deferring the application had been made to Fortuna, "some three years ago."

Director of Natural Resources

Director of Natural Resources John Barton pointed out at Wednesday's Lands Committee meeting that even in the event that port development happened quickly, it was unlikely that any industry other than oil would, "get a look in," for some considerable time

"The option of having another dock available for the fishing industry was extremely valuable," Mr Barton said, adding, "at the moment as the main industry it is left hanging."

Fortuna Limited currently have a 35 year lease on the actual dock at the Camber, but not on the adjoining land/landing stage which belongs to the Government and the company has applied on several occasions to either buy or lease the FIG land adjacent and slightly to the west of the dock.

MLA Jan Cheek pointed out that laid up fishing vessels made a sizeable contribution to the economy.

Fortuna also indicated an increasingly urgent requirement for berths to lay up vessels with pressure growing on availability not only for themselves but for other prospective customers proving to be a hindrance, as was the lack of any storage or other facilities in the area.

"We are prepared to invest in upgrading the old rail track to the Camber to take light vehicles, but without the security of some of the land as indicated, which would enable us to invest to provide services to the dock, the financial viability of the project is undermined," said Fortuna's Stuart Wallace.

Mr Barton said at the meeting that fishing ships regularly went elsewhere to lay up as there was simply not enough space at FIPASS to accommodate non working vessels.

Mr Wallace said he believed the application was in line with the results of last year's public consultation 'Your Future, Your Say' in which 57 per cent agreed further development on the south side of the Camber should be permitted.

He said it was understood that the Permanent Port Project was being researched with the outcome uncertain and even if a decision was made quickly it would be many years before any of the facilities would be available to non-oil sectors.

"This proposal is for appropriate use and development of the Camber which would in any event complement a permanent port in Port William, if that does go ahead in time," said Mr Wallace.

The proposal would, he said, "quickly provide some needed additional options and immediately make a useful contribution to the economy."

Mr Barton stressed that there were a lot of issues stacking up for the fishing industry.

"We're telling the industry we want them to do things, but on the other hand it would seem we are an impediment," he said.

Sulivan Shipping also had an application for freehold purchase of plot 3 Gordon Lines deferred pending the implementation of a new Lands Policy in June and Byron Holdings their application for realignment of boundary and extension to plot 1-3 Boxer Bridge Road deferred.

Spoil dumping continues on Cape Pembroke

SMALLER scale spoil dumping is to continue at Cape Pembroke within the Mary Hill Quarry and a selected surrounding area at the discretion of the Director of Public Works (DPW) Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Michael Poole has clarified that the Executive Council policy decision allowed for the continued disposal of a limited amount of top soil in the area.

Discussing the issue of ongoing construction site clearances while enabling works are carried out at the new spoil tipping site near Megabid, DPW Manfred Keenleyside said at Wednesday's Planning and Building Committee, that there was still quite a lot of space on the land near Mary Hill where access tracks had been created. He said tracks could be formed to accommodate the small-scale spoil tipping from current projects.

Work to make the site near Megabid operable, as approved by Executive Council and discussed at the last Legislative Assembly, could take a further six to eight weeks, said Mr Keenleyside, adding, "we want to get it right."

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

SOME years back while working as an events organiser I had what I can only describe as an interesting encounter with a Dohne merino ram. The event in question was the Rural Business Association Sheep Show (now the agricultural show - see centre pages) and the task at hand involved attaching red rosettes to an assortment of impressive looking fleeces. Unfortunately for me the fleeces were still firmly attached to some of the largest and most sexually confident individuals I have ever encountered in a shearing shed (no offence shearers). To cut a long story short I'll be forever grateful to the kind farmer who heard my squeals of dismay and hauled me over the pen gate before I felt obligated to demand a marriage proposal from my wrinkly-nosed Romeo.

As such I probably wouldn't put the Agricultural Show quite at number one in the top ten of favoured annual events, but after a few years of involvement in the laudable affair my admiration for it, and its hard working organisers remains. Believe me when I say that the logistics involved in avoiding sending farmers back to their homesteads with the wrong sheep is work of organisational ingenuity

But perhaps more importantly (putting aside the wool growing aspect) as a consumer who stands in retail foodhalls and glares at the ever rising price of locally grown lamb and beef, at the very least, an event like the agricultural show serves to reminds me of the sheer effort that farmers put in to improving their product.

WE were reminded by a visitor this week that there are now 305 people over the age of 70 in the Islands. The good news is a nursing home is under development and one that can, we are told, be extended. However bearing in mind there are already enough old folk to fill those ten rooms is it not worth biting the bullet now, and just get on with creating a home that is actually big enough for current and obviously growing needs; one that will not need an extension virtually the moment it's built? After all lessons must have been learned from the headaches caused by the ongoing requirements for extensions to the Infant Junior School and the Police Station right?

And as to the facilities inside the home; we hope those developing the project will remember that while the partial independence of sheltered accommodation might no longer be appropriate for the home's residents. they should still be able to the enjoy traditional and comforting activities that access to a garden, a kitchen and sitting rooms would offer.

It's about quality of life; and as a gentleman commented to us on Wednesday this week: "If we don't give the current old people good care then we don't deserve to grumble if it still doesn't exist when we get old."

Mobile homes and more - fourteen planning applications approved

FOURTEEN planning applica-tions were approved at Wednesday's meeting of the Planning and Building meeting.

First up was the erection of a warehouse at 16 Boxer Bridge for Tom Blake of RBC Ltd on the part of the site currently used to store containers.

Planning Advisor Steve Butler said the applicant had indicated the primary purpose of the building was for fishing related activity but if an opportunity arose for other small scale/short term uses the company would want the flexibility to allow this and wording of the conditions attached to the approval had reflected this.

The committee noted that the take up by individuals for the extension of Murray Heights mobile home park had been encouraging as approval was granted for the siting of homes at 9 Mountain Berry Road and 3 Diddle Dee Drive for Stacey McKay and Tiphanie May respectively.

Approval was also given to Susan Whitney for the construction of a lean to greenhouse on the front of the peat shed to the rear of her home at 1 Police Cottages as was Lee Clement's application to build a conservatory on the front of his house at 25 Hansen Hill.

The removal of the old front porch and the construction of a new one at 55 Davis Street was approved for Ian and Eileen Jaffray and Ken Halliday's application to extend his house at 5 Fieldhouse Close was agreed.

New constructions in the form of a dwelling at 27 Sapper Hill for Martin and Naomi Peirega and a garage/store for Keith Dickson at 12 Dairy Paddock Road were met with approval.

Permission was granted following some discussion on safety issues for the pupils of the Infant and Junior School for the construction of two single storey dwelling with parking spaces at Marmont Row for the FIC Ltd. Interested parties are to liaise to ensure suitable and aesthetically pleasing fencing is put in place between the school and the development site.

FIC was also given permission to continue the development of land to the South of Stanley Growers Market Garden land. A 1,300 sgm warehouse is to be constructed with 6,400 sqm of yard/hardstanding including temporary access from the Airport Road.

Pending final approval from Executive Council, permission for the extraction of 200 sqm of calcified seaweed from Creek Point at Shallow Bay on West Falkland for pasture improvement was granted.

A memorial wall is to be built at the bottom of the 1914-18 Memorial Hill on Ross Road West to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the war. Although it was recognised as being outside the remit of the P&B Committee it was suggested that a footpath might be reinstated on the south side of the road which would be at the discretion of the Public Works Department and would not require planning permission.

May or early June for pool

DIRECTOR of Central Services Simon Fletcher has assured this week that work on the swimming pool is progressing and it is still hoped that the pool will reopen in late May or early June.

The new pipes and filtration jets for the swimming pool were laid last week, pressure-tested and water-tested and all seem fine, Mr Fletcher told Penguin News.

Over the weekend the concrete cover over the pipe work was completed.

The fibreglass contractor arrived in the Islands on Monday and has begun work on the balance tank and pool walls.

"As soon as the concrete cover for the new filtration system is properly dried, then the fibreglass contractor will complete his work. "Providing everything goes to plan we will start to re-fill the pool with water in mid April and then re-heat it, which will take approximately four weeks.

"We are hopeful that the pool should be ready to open by late May or early June and will let the public know more as the work progresses," Mr Fletcher said on Tuesday.

Housing layout map could prevent another Mink Park

A MAP of the housing layout to date at Sapper Hill is to be drawn up to consider whether future plots should be sold with outline planning permission to prevent what was referred to as, "another Mink Park."

Planning and Building Committee member Gary Clement said there was a lot of concern in the community about houses being built out of line. "We're going to end up with another MLA Jan Cheek said if people wanted to align houses to maximise the view it was their choice and a large part of the quality of life.

Planning Officer Steve Butler said however that it would be prudent before taking on the next stage to see if anything can be learned. "If the decision is not to have any further level of co-ordination or control, then at least we have done the exercise," he said.

MLA Michael Poole said he tended to agree with Mr Clement's comments and asked Mr Butler and Director of Public Works Manfred Keenleyside to create a map showing the current situation with phase 1 and 2 so a discussion on how to best move forward with phases 3 and 4 could be had.

A shop for Sapper Hill

A PLOT on Diamond Jubilee Road, Sapper Hill has been allocated for commercial/retail outlets and will soon be offered for expressions of interest and tenders.

Planning Officer Steve Butler said at Wednesday's meeting that the concept was similar to the Kelper Store to the east of Stanley and could include a mix of amenities such as shop, restaurant, pub or even hairdresser.

"It's a big housing estate and it's good to have some kind of facility within it" he said, adding that the plot was no closer to housing than other pubs, in response to concern that it was bounded by

Judge gives second chance

STANLEY man Macauley Davis (18) was warned on Monday that if he did not complete 15 hours of his Community Service order by Friday he would face imprisonment.

Mr Davis had failed to keep appointments with the Probation Officer after he was fined a total of £460, disqualified from driving for two years and ordered to carry out 200 hours community service in early February for driving without insurance or vehicle licence and failure to provide a specimen of breath.

Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley told Mr Davis he was being offered what was from him a very rare thing, in the form of a second chance. Mr Davis was released on bail to reappear in court today (Friday).

Probation officer is a necessity

UNDER his powers as Senior Magistrate, Mr Gumsley said he would be appointing a Probation Officer to cover the period between Jason Rice's departure on Tuesday (April 1) and the expected arrival of the new officer on April 22. He said it was his decision and did not depend on the Government.

The Governor of the Falk-lands and the Senior Magistrate have the authority to appoint a Probation Officer. He said it was entirely unsatisfactory to not have one, adding, "you can't have a society without a probation officer."

Graham and Mary-Anne's vows are blessed with sun and colour

2 Para 1982 Falklands War veteran Graham Cordwell and his wife Mary-Anne exchanged vows in a rededication of their marriage at Christchurch Cathedral on April 1, their wedding anniversary.

Mr Cordwell said this was the fourth time he had visited the Falklands since 2007 however his wife had never been before. The couple who were originally married in a registry office, without official photographs or even a honeymoon afterwards, were rewarded with a beautiful sunny day on Tuesday, resulting in delightfully colourful photographs taken by Norman Clark.

After their Falklands ceremony conducted by the Reverend Richard Hines they enjoyed lunch at the waterfront and later a 'get-together' with around 20 people at Liberty Lodge including many of those originally imprisoned in the club at Goose Green in 1982.

The couple fly out of the Islands tomorrow to Chile and will have a 'honeymoon' in Valparaiso.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

LIKE a great many other people in Stanley I had a grandstand view of the arrival of the Noble barge last week. Several passersby parked on the seafront to watch the manoeuvre, an example of our fascination with all things nautical. As well as being the object of great local interest its arrival is symbolic of another step in the development of oil exploration. I have to confess I've made a couple of trips around the bottom end of the harbour to see what is going on.

This week my meetings include several relating to Stanley Services including the six monthly meeting of the board, one on localisation, another on major projects and regular meetings of the Planning and Building and Lands committees. On Monday we met a visiting senior RAF officer who had previously served in the Islands on Chinooks. His previous knowledge gives him a head start in understanding issues in the Falklands. We also met with representatives from Sure Batelco, an interesting introduction to the newish providers of our all-important telecoms.

Irony seems to be a concept not understood in Argentina given the fact that it appears not only are they re-enacting in the Beagle Channel their disastrous and illegal invasion of our Islands but, even more bizarrely, they are celebrating the similarly illegal and eventually farcical hijacking in September 1966. Even the Argentine government in 1966 distanced itself from that action which today's president seeks to glorify by making one of the flags carried by the 'activists' on 'Operation Condor' the centre of some of the ceremonial. All this presumably with no mention of the all-important UN Resolution 502 passed on 3 April 1982 which demanded, among other things, the immediate withdrawal of all Argentine forces from the Falkland Islands. Given the Argentine Government propensity for quoting UN resolutions ad nauseum, their blind spot on that one is another delightful irony. Everyone who hears them quote other resolutions suggesting dialogue should understand that the only outcome that interests Argentina is one that would allow them to colonise the Falklands against the wishes of the rightful inhabitants.

Help FIDC shape business

THE importance of the Business Climate survey to the Falkland Islands Development Corporation (FIDC) cannot be understated, Business Relations Manager Michael Betts told Penguin News this week.

With the deadline for completed surveys rushing closer. (April-21) he was keen to emphasise that the survey is a platform for businesses to provide key feedback to the corporation regarding the health, confidence, intentions and issues of local businesses

The results of this survey will shape the FIDC Business Plan in the short and medium-term. "making the corporation more relevant and effective in encouraging the development of the Falklands economy through assisting businesses.

The results of the previous survey, "have enabled and encouraged FIDC to create and sustain new projects and create new schemes to assist businesses, said Mr Betts

They offered evidence to continue the Credit Union project as a response to businesses identifying 'access to finance' as a significant barrier to business growth, he

The need for FIDC to develop the Oil and Gas Certification Grant Scheme, established in

Michael Betts

February 2014, also came out of the survey, as did the Youth Entrepreneurship Scheme.

The results also indicated that legal services were no longer a barrier to business growth and the establishment of Falkland Islands Legal Services, assisted by FIDC, "is proving to be a success," he

The previous survey had for the first time a section devoted to the Chamber of Commerce. The purpose of that section was to enable the Chamber Council to engage with their membership and obtain their views on a range of topics. Following analyses and consideration, "the full results and comments were compiled along with proposed actions to address the issues identified," said Mr Betts.

One major outcome was the ment on the future role and structure of the Chamber. Following feedback and discussion at the Chamber AGM, solutions to the issues raised by members were pinpointed Mr Betts said: "This resulted in a change in focus of resources in order to better meet members' expectations, whilst averting the need to increase subscription fees during 2014.

The 2014 survey aims to be shorter and less time-consuming

he said

The number of questions, pages and sections have been reduced and the majority of businesses will receive the survey in electronic form

The 2014 survey should take you no longer than 10 minutes to complete and return to FIDC, said Mr Betts.

He made it clear that, "all of the information in returned surveys will be treated with the strictest of confidence. If any businesses have concerns regarding confidentiality they can print their completed survey and return it to FIDC anonymously.

If you have any questions or comments regarding this year's survey, or wish to receive a copy as a business, please contact Michael Betts on email mbetts@fide co.fk or telephone 27211

South Georgia shipping news

CATCHES in South Georgia of mackerel icefish were poor in the early part of the year. Two vessels fishing had already departed by mid February

The same month was quiet in terms of tourist visits with just six cruise ship visiting Grytviken. Three large charter yachts also called in. The Hans Hansson was on charter to a BBC film crew and Hans Explorer and Asteria were both on a charter to a film-maker and photographer and his paying guests.

Four other smaller private yachts were also around the island, including the 20.5m yacht Elinca built specifically for the BT global challenge. The boat had a crew of 14, in contrast to the smaller singlehanded yacht Saltash.

No cat TB worries

DESPITE news of cat TB in Britain, Falklands owners need not worry.

It was revealed recently that two people in England have developed tuberculosis after contact with a domestic cat but Senior Veterinary Officer Steve Pointing told Penguin News: "We don't have bovine TB (M.bovis) in the Falkland Islands.

He said cats do, however, carry other potentially serious zoonotic diseases and, in particular, toxoplasmosis (T.gondii) which can be spread via their faeces.

This disease can be particularly serious for pregnant women and they should take care when handling cat litter trays or when gardening in areas where cats may have defecated.

New AG is ready for the challenges ahead

Peter Judge

THE Falkland's new Attorney General took up post on March 24 and says he is looking forward to the challenge of the job

Peter Judge from Newcastle Upon Tyne was named 'UK In House Lawyer of the Year' in 2010 by Lawyer magazine for work he did, "setting up a fairly significant venture capital fund for economic development," and says he hopes his previous experiences will help with his work for the Falklands

Mr Judge has worked as a commercial lawyer, and for ten years ran the legal affairs for the North East Development Agency. Most recently he became the first independent Secretary of Durham University and run a wide ranging review of its governance within Looking to what was ahead of him in his new role Mr Judge said what was so exciting was how, "ambitious, open minded and exploratory everyone is.

"There's a real feeling of opportunity and excitement combined with trepidation too among the people I have spoken to and I think this is a really exciting time to be part of things.

Even the recent publicity given to the poor state of the law in the Falklands has not daunted Mr Judge's enthusiasm for his new

"I like a challenge," he said, "My predecessor, Mark Lewis and the team have laid out the challenge fairly and squarely and Assembly Members are fully behind me in terms of at least three major pieces of work to revise laws - the Child Bill and also the Criminal Procedure and Criminal Law review

"We're staffed and on the case," he said, adding, "I think its good we know about it and are dealing with it - it's a challenge we'll sort.

An exciting opportunity to lead the direction of Television Media at Falkland Islands Television (FITV).

The Role: Television Station Manager

The successful candidate will be responsible for the day to day running of the television production company and have the opportunity to develop the direction of the content and coverage. You will need to be hands on as you will get involved in presenting, news gathering, script writing, camera work, and editing the twice weekly television programme. The position is for 12–24 months (to be negotiated). For candidates willing to commit to 24 months then there is the likelihood of spending three months with BBC South.

The Candidate: Interested parties must have had at least 2/3 years of previous experience working in television production and hold a full driving licence. Candidates must be proficient in using video editing software Final Cut Pro and/or Adobe Premier-Pro. They will have had managerial experience and be used to ensuring tight deadlines are met.

Remuneration: Will be commensurate with the level of experience of the successful candidate.

In the first instance please contact Stephen Fowmes via email at sfowmes@stanley-services.co.fk submitting your CV and a covering letter by Friday 25th April 2014. Interviews will be held for shortlisted candidates,week commencing Monday 28th April 2014.

Are you are interested in working for a national TV station with the opportunity to cover stories ranging from live military exercises to wildlife, historical and political features? Then Falkland Islands Television (FITV) are offering adventurous candidates the unique chance to work for this small but fast developing TV station in the South Atlantic.

There are up to three Internships available.

FITV is a small community station which runs a twice weekly news magazine programme Falklands In Focus, and is the sole local television station on the Islands. FITV now also broadcasts a 60 second news update online at fitv.co.fk, which attracts a wider international audience.

The Role: Successful candidates will have the opportunity to be involved in all aspects of producing a TV programme twice a week. Ideally, interested candidates will want to improve their skills and obtain experience in news and features reporting, editing, directing, presenting, producing, and script writing. The position is for 12 months starting in May/June/July 2014.

The Candidate:

Essential:

- A degree or equivalent level of training in Journalism or TV production.
- Excellent communication skills, computer literate and fluent in English.
- A knowledge of camera work and previous experience with editing software, particularly Final Cut Pro is essential.
 - · Hold a full driving licence.

Desirable:

- Ideal candidates should be outgoing and armed with curiosity to seek out interesting stories, keeping a small community audience in mind.
- Be proactive and use their initiative to work on their own and as part of a dynamic team.
- Be adaptable to a new environment and be enthusiastic to embrace the opportunity to explore the islands history, culture and community.

In the first instance please email your CV and a covering letter to Stephen Fowmes: sfowmes@stanley-services.co.fk by 25th April 2014.

Interviews will be held for all applicants week commencing 28th April 2014

Heartfelt thank you Rev Hines

AMONGST all the thanks which we have sent to the many people of the Falkland Islands for their support, kindness and assistance during our visits I would wish to take this opportunity to publicly acknowledge and thank the Reverend Richard Hines of Christ Church Cathedral for administering the very special support which has been such an important part of the programmes of our many visiting veterans over the years since 1982, of which we are the latest group.

During his 'tour of duty' Richard has always been at the heart of organising and leading our veterans in what have been very emotional services at the Welsh Guards Celtic Cross Memorial which is positioned overlooking the site of the bombing of the Sir Galahad on June 8, 1982

His support has been unstinting, at times when the inclement weather has been less than ideal for outdoor service and the voice becomes hoarse trying to compete with the unrelenting gale force winds which seems to be a permanent partner to the Celtic Cross. His support and kindness has been massively appreciated and second to none.

I am aware that Richard is soon to move to pastures new and I have no doubt will be sadly missed by all, he will also be greatly missed by the Falklands Veterans Community in which he has played a significant part and made many friends.

Finally I would on behalf of all of us wish him and his family all the very best of success and good fortune in whatever the future holds.

The logo is the first step in a much bigger campaign to raise public awareness and promote the safety of children.

Laura's winning design will adorn literature and promotional material used in the upcoming FISCB publicising campaign, and will be the symbol of the board for years to come said MLA Elsby.

As part of his role as Children's Champion MLA Elsby will be meeting with the students' school council to find what questions they would like to have answered, "It's my job to ask awkward questions on your behalf," he told the students.

Falkland Islands Community School Head teacher Martin Winward explained later that the role of parents was also vital in raising awareness and said he would be inviting parents to the school to discuss ways of contributing to raising awareness.

Improving knowledge of the risks of the internet was identified as one way to do this. "Understanding terminology will help to strengthen the safety message of the campaign," said Mr Winward.

Promoting internet and general ICT safety and awareness was highlighted by Information Technology teacher Steve Gill who, alongside Art teacher Jenni Sol. ran the logo competition.

Earl unveils Steve's Emperor

TWO Antarctic penguins, prepared by Falkland Islands Museum and National Trust taxidermist Steve Massam were unveiled at a museum in Selborne, Gilbert White's House, by the Earl and Countess of Portsmouth in March.

Carried to the UK by former Governor Nigel Haywood (who attended the unveiling) the museum, which tells the stories of three great explorers, acquired the penguins courtesy of the British Antarctic Survey and with the financial assistance of the Earl and Countess.

The explorers celebrated by the Selbourne museum include the pioneering 18th century naturalist Gilbert White himself; Captain Lawrence Oates of the final Scott Antarctic expedition of 1911-1912, and Victorian explorer of Central America and Africa, Frank Oates.

The unveiling of the Emperor and chick took place on March 17, chosen because it marks the birthday of Captain Lawrence Oates and was the day, 102 years prior, that he walked heroically to his death with the immortal words: "I am just going outside and I may be some time."

When was there last a glacier in the Black Tarn on Mt Usborne?

RESEARCHERS from the United States interested in the history of glaciation and climate in the Southern Hemisphere hope to discover when there was last a glacier in the Black Tarn on Mt Usborne.

Last month, a small group, consisting of Dr Brenda Hall from the University of Maine, Dr Thomas Lowell of the University of Cincinnati, and Tony Smith of Discovery Falklands conducted a coring expedition to the Black Tarn to retrieve bottom sediments that record a history of climate and ice on the mountain.

After setting up camp a short distance from the tarn, the team deployed a small boat and did a depth survey.

The deepest part of the tarn, located below the southern cliff, was found to be approximately

(t) 22041 (e) se.itt@horizon.co.fk (w) www.falklandislands.travel

10 metres, Dr Hall told Penguin News.

The main objective of the project was to obtain sediments from the bottom of the tarn, and this was accomplished despite the soggy weather.

Although the area around the tarn is quite rocky, the bottom, at least in the southern end, is soft, and the researchers retrieved more than a metre of mud.

Dr Hall explained that these sediments provide at least two pieces of information. First, the age of the oldest lake sediments gives a minimum age for the last glacier in the basin.

That is, lake sediments could not have begun to form until after the glacier was gone. Second, variations in the kind of sediment present (mud, sand, etc) can help reconstruct climate and environmental changes, such as wet-dry cycles.

These reconstructions are important for making future climate predictions.

Altogether, the group were quite pleased with the results of the coring expedition. It will take several months of lab work to determine the age of the sediments retrieved and to begin to make interpretations about the glacial and climate history.

The researchers plan to use information gathered from the Black Tarn to aid answering questions concerning ice-age cycles and abrupt climate change. In particular, they are interested in knowing when and how the earth comes out of an ice age.

Dr Hall said the Falkland Islands is in a key geographic location for addressing this

"Many of the current hypotheses point to the important role of the Southern Ocean and its vast holdings of dissolved CO2 in ending ice-ages.

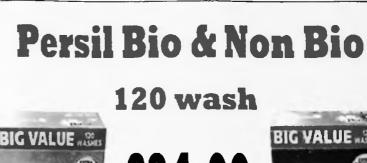

There are also suggestions that rapid north-south shifts in the position of oceanic fronts and wind belts, such as the Westerlies, at about the latitude of the Falkland Islands are critical to setting the end of the ice age in motion," she said.

This expedition was a follow-up on an earlier visit by University of Maine researchers to the South Atlantic Envoronmental Research Institute (SAERI) last spring and is part of what is hoped to be a long-term collaboration between the two institutions.

Champ Hew picks up the points at busy rural show

BLUE Beach farmer Hew Grierson proved a formidable competitor at this year's Rural Business Association Agricultural Show dehvering not only champion ram and ewe but most points in the wool classes as well as wins in dual purpose sheep and the beef classes.

Tyrone Whitney of Home Farm and Paul Phillips of Hope Cottage also enjoyed a great show heading home with their successful stock and armfuls of cheques and trophies. RBA Chair and Goose Green Manager Keith Alazia wasn't short of things to smile about - apart from a great show (the highest number of sheep ever believes organiser Nyree Heathman) he too claimed plenty of places and first place with his dual purpose shearling ram. North Arm Manager Steven Dickson was also a difficult man to beat and proved a worthy adversary in all classes.

Regarding the cattle entries he told Penguin News it was, "fantastic to have high quality cattle being brought along for people to see." He was also impressed with the show generally describing it as a real, 'social event," with a broader range of activities.

Tireless organiser Miss Heathman told Penguin News there were 7 sheep and 22 cattle entered, "including six with calves in tow.

She added: "The RBA would like to thank everyone who came along to our 2014 Agricultural Show at Goose Green. Particular thanks must go to His Excellency the Governor, all of the stall holders, those who entered animals, competitions, or bought raffle tickets, and to the small army of helpers who assisted in one way or another, especially Goose Green Farm for hosting the show. It was great to see so many of you there enjoying a day out."

Tyrone Whitney and Rainee Ambrose

AS a result of incredibly generous gestures from East Falklands farmer Tryone Whitney, and Camp Teacher Rainee Ambrose the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund has been considerably boosted by £1,400. Mr Whitney donated a pregnant cow along with its calf for auction for the fund at the RBA Show on Saturday, and with the primary intention of boosting the bidding up to the reserve price Ms Ambrose ended up purchasing the animals for £700. "You don't bid without knowing that might be a possibility," she told Penguin News happily; clearly pleased to give the money to such a good cause.

Following this she gave her purchase back to the farmer and Mr Whitney then asked if he could re-auction. She agreed and two more farmers Jan Clarke and Keith Alazia (whose original bidding budgets hadn't quite run to the reserve price) paid £350 each. Mr Whitney said, "Jan will feed them and Keith will get the calf.

Business Climate Survey 2014

FIDC has electronically distributed the 2014 edition of the Business Climate Survey to all businesses. FIDC urges all businesses take the short time required to complete and return the Survey to FIDC. This initiative provides critical feedback regarding the current business environment in the Falklands and barriers to growth. This feedback enables FIDC improve its ability to help local businesses.

The deadline for completed Surveys is Monday the 21st April 2014. FIDC is happy to accept electronic or hard copies of completed Surveys. Please follow the instructions provided within the Survey to electronically return it to FIDC.

FALKLAND ISLANDS DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

If you have any questions or wish to discussthe Survey please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk

Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays 1800hrs at FIDF HO.

All welcome but you must be medically fit. Bring water and a towel.

Four weeks to one mile

RUNNING is a good way to improve your health but the thought of running a mile can be daunting.

This four week programme is a general guide you can modify to suit your ability. It can be used as a training schedule to run a mile for the first time since the school made you run up Mount Tumbledown, or to train to run a faster mile by increasing the speed of the runs and jogging instead of walking

Starting off slowly is the best way to avoid injury. If your body is not conditioned to the exercise the extra impact on your joints can cause pain particularly in the knees and shins (shin splints). To avoid straining your muscles training should start off slow and very gradually increase in intensity and distance over the weeks.

Take it one week at a time and if you feel energetic use days in between to cross-train, either on a cross trainer or static bicycle at the gym, or cycling or walking

Roughly measure the distance, for example use street junctions or the distance between bollards on the Bypass Road. Being able to see where you are running to will give you a good idea of how best to pace yourself.

If you are running on a treadmill you can use the distance measurements (the ones at Stanley Leisure Centre Gym and Hillside Gym both measure in kilometres) but start off at a slow jog pace, you can always increase it if you feel comfortable.

Recording your training will help keep you inspired. By using a notepad or logging training on your phone you can keep an eye on what you have achieved and your progress - Note time, distance and other achievements (e.g. running up a steep hill, or in strong wind).

A comfortable pair of trainers is essential - Asics are worldrenowned for their cushioning if you have joint concerns. Women will need a decent sports bra too.

The importance of stretching is debated but it has the most benefit once muscles are warmer. Stretching after a workout is a good way to reduce stiffness, and dynamic/ swinging stretches are best before a run

So you trained up and took part in the Marathon. What now?

Come along to the Stanley Running Club run every Sat. Meet in the Leisure Centre Car Park at 2.00pm.

All levels of running ability welcome. Varied distances/ terrain.

Contact Rex Eagle 21906 for more information

Total ran: 4800 metres (3 miles)

Health benefits of running are well researched, the most markable being that it improves fitness and stamina.

It's one of the most vigorous exercises and is an efficient way to burn calories and boost metabolism and if combined with a healthy diet can change the way you look and feel.

As a weight-bearing exercise, running also increases bone density, which can fend off osteoporosis and is one of the best aerobic exercises for physical conditioning of the heart and lungs.

Cadets test their stamina on 1982 yomp

THE stepson of Falklands War land commander Major General (Retired) Julian Thompson, this week lead a cadet force of eight along the testing San Carlos to Stanley 1982 'yomp'

The combined force from Reeds School, Kingston-on-Thames. completed the walk on April 8, under the watchful eye of science teacher Angus Harper

Mr Harper's stepfather commanded 3 Commando Brigade Royal Marines during the 1982 War and co-ordinated the first landing phase of British troops

The Army and RAF Cadets completed the route wearing full military kit and camped in shearing sheds en-route to Stanley.

Your chance to help with child safety

THE Falkland Islands Child Safeguarding Board is to carry out research on what the Falklands community thinks about child safety.

From Monday April 14. questionnaires will be distributed to various locations such as the Post Office and the hospital, and there will be street polls, said Krysteen Ormond, who is part of the campaign working group.

She said: "This is a chance for the community to have a say about child safety. If you find a questionnaire, or see us on the street, please do take the time to give us your thoughts. Your opinion matters, and it's really important that we get the campaign right for our Islands.

Tempting tax breaks for wannabe Campers

WHAT would it take for you to move to Camp?

A consultation on tax reliefs to support rural development is currently underway with the Policy Unit seeking input from across the Islands.

The possible introduction of tax reliefs is designed to facilitate growth in the rural economy as envisaged in the Island's Rural Development Strategy (RDS).

The proposals within the consultation are designed to encourage investment in Campbased businesses, particularly within the recently designated Rural Enterprise Zone (REZ) of Fox Bay Village on West Falkland.

MLA Barry Elsby said he would encourage as many people as possible, both Campers and non to respond.

"We really need to hear from people as to what would make them likely to move to Camp to work and/or set up a business.

MLA Elsby said he supported a REZ at Fox Bay, but that one should also be considered at Goose Green or possibly Fitzroy.

"This would offer increased potential for work at Mount Pleasant, especially as we are working with the military to promote localisation.

"I think we would be more likely to encourage people to move to Camp settlements on the East and we might learn lessons there that could better inform on how to encourage development on the West," said MLA Elsby.

The consultation which is available in hard copy and electronically sets the out proposals for a series of tax reliefs for businesses based in Camp and for individuals and businesses who might seek to invest in business based in Camp.

It aims to gather views on the best design of the reliefs, "with the objective of making them well targeted and effective, without creating opportunities for tax avoidance."

of the Rural The aim Development Strategy is to increase the value of economic activity in Camp, and to increase the number of people living and working there. Part of that strategy also includes broadening the range of services available in Camp as well as access to both public and private services.

As part of the strategy Executive Council has approved the concept of Rural Enterprise Zones and has designated Fox Bay Village as the Islands' first such zone with the aim to encourage and reward the creation of new economic activities and new businesses in specific geographical areas in order to build critical mass as well as encouraging growth and diversification within existing businesses.

The proposals within consultation document include a mix of incentives that have eligibility different criteria and application depending on the location of the business – whether in the REZ, or elsewhere in Camp and there are also specific incentives to encourage the creation of community infrastructure in Camp.

Pick up next week's Penguin News on Thursday April 17

Penguin₃ News

Comment by Deputy Editor Sharon Jaffray

A MUST read and fill in this week has to be the consultation on tax relief to support rural development, especially if like many after a good weekend out in the Camp you ponder how you could combine the enviable outdoor lifestyle with your work.

Perhaps this will become possible one day as communications improve and opportunities open up as settlements grow and become more populated

Of course it immediately sprang to my mind that the main incentives at this time would be offered on the East, but a few pages into the consultation document it become obvious that the most lucrative proposals were heavily weighted to encourage or even herd prospective Camp dwellers to Fox Bay Village on West Falkland.

The concept of creating Rural Enterprise Zones as such is a good one, but while the REZ title (and another acronym - oh joy) has recently been created, we're actually retracing some pretty well trodden paths in promoting Fox Bay as the Camp nucleus.

Government has been doing exactly this since the mid 1980s and while we enjoyed a little population boom into the 1990s it's not been sustained despite the best efforts of many and numerous cash injections over the years

While Fox Bay should continue to provide an option with government services in place for those who want to set up business or live in Camp as it has done for the last 30 years, I really do think it is time to concentrate efforts on pastures new and see if there is a more enthusiastic uptake of the concept on this side of the Sound

Goose Green and Fitzroy are already attracting a rare breed who have struck out on their own to follow a dream and I'm sure many would like to follow:

More people than ever make good use of the self catering options and spare houses in settlements to appreciate Camp life, contribute to the communities and most importantly teach children about our heritage: the latter can only produce positive results for another generation

It's safe to say that Campers don't flock to Stanley to avail themselves of the cultural delights on offer, however, Stanley folk do get out of town at the earliest opportunity to enjoy the Camp lifestyle; you've got to book early to secure an outside house in the Goose Green and North Arm area during the summer that's for sure

We've got a natural evolution taking place on our very doorstep, let's work with it rather than force it in a different direction

A PHOTO competition to capture the best shot of Noble Energy's temporary dock facility Nobel Frontier arriving in Stanley harbour was won by Mark Stroud.

Mr Stroud was awarded £100 for his efforts while Robin Goodwin claimed second place and £50.

Mark Spicer was given an excellent achievement award receiving £75 and an honourable mention and £20 was also awarded also to Paul Faria, Jimmy Moffatt and Susan Williams.

Mr Harper told Penguin News the experience had reinforced the cadet's interest in joining the regular and volunteer forces

We had a couple of injuries but the cadets were keen to push on through," he said.

"It's not only a story to them anymore. They challenged themselves mentally physically and it's something they can tell people back home about.

The trip was viewed as so enriching that he is already planning another, "we hope to be back in 18 months time with cadets who couldn't make it this time around and some guys from 45 Commando.

Funding for the expedition came from personal contributions, the Airbus and two cadet support organisations, the Ulysses Trust and Conort Drill Hall, "which meant we could get some great kit," he said, but said it was the amazing hospitality of the people of the Falklands that made it a really worthwhile trip

The brilliant weather and the people met on the way and particularly the Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF) were essential to the success of the challenge, he said.

The FIDF supplied support vehicles for the yomp and Colour Sergeant Trevor Law walked the distance with the youths; the fifth time he has yomped the route.

Tempting tax breaks

MLA Phyl Rendell said she welcomed the work the Policy Unit had done on the introduction of possible tax incentives for Camp businesses.

"It is really important that we get people's views, particularly on whether incentives should be greater for businesses in Economic Development Zones and if so, what places in addition to Fox Bay Village, could be designated an EDZ? "As much feedback as possible is welcome on all the matters raised to see if it is sensible to follow up changes to tax legislation in order to incentivise investment in the Camp," said MLA Rendell.

Shane Mitchell at work in the slaughter hall

FI Meat Company beat top processing tally

THE Falkland Islands Meat Company had a record day in the slaughter hall on Monday when the workers processed 1,039 new season and yearling lambs. Manager John Ferguson said this was the first time that over 1,000 head had been processed in a day at Sand Bay, "and all the more credit to the team considering we are short of some skilled workers this season, due to some previous seasonal workers finding full time employment elsewhere. I'm expecting the cutting room team to respond to this soon as part of the healthy competitive spirit we try to encourage in each end of the plant, and there have been a number of days over 900 of late,"

He added: "It's vital that their productivity is running at levels of 900 to 1,000 plus per day now, so as to achieve the volume of livestock offered for sale in the limited length of season we have at present. Of course increased productivity lowers the per head cost and all helps in the aim to make

Revelatory book from former Royal Marine

PEN and Sword Books will next week launch a new title. Exocet Falklands from Lieutenant Colonel (Retired) Ewen Southby-Tailyour OBE, a former Royal Marine who played a leading role in the Falklands war

Subtitled 'The Untold Story of Special Forces Operations' it is a revelatory account of three special forces operations Plum Duff, Mikado and Kettledrum - tasked to destroy Argentina's Exocet missiles during the 1982 War.

Speaking to Penguin News Pen and Sword's Lisa Goose said: "In that context alone, this book is of international military importance.

"Using previously unknown material, and through interviewing key players from both sides who have remained silent for 30 years, Ewen Southby-Tailyour has finally established the truth.

She said: "That it has taken so long to do so reflects the sensitivities, both military and personal, involved.

With stirring stories of personal courage and endurance, unexpected over-confidence and planning failure, 'Exocet Falklands' is described as a ground-breaking work of investigative military history from which many salutary lessons can be learned.

Many Islanders will remember Ewen Southby-Tailyour as an officer commanding Naval Party 8901, the small Royal Marine detachment posted to the Falkland Islands. He first came to the Islands in 1978.

He lives in Devon and was commissioned into the Royal Marines in 1960. Since retiring in 1992 he has concentrated on his sailing and writing careers.

Prestigious nomination for FIG'S Financial Secretary Nicola

FINANCIAL secretary for the Falkland Islands Government, Nicola Granger has been shortlisted for the Young Financial Director of the Year, 2014 FDs Excellence Award.

The Awards were created by Real Business, in association with the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales (ICAEW), and celebrates the UK's best performing finance directors and the most promising young financial talent.

Michael Izza, CE of ICAEW. said: "Regardless of whether they take home an award on the night, everyone on the shortlist should be congratulated for setting the standard and inspiring the next generation of finance directors." Winners will be announced on May 1, 2014 at the London Marriott Hotel, Grosvenor Square. The Excellence Awards shortlist features a number of prominent UK organisations, including Deloitte and Grant Thornton, which are in the running for the Accountancy firm of the year, and Scottish Widows and Standard Life which are nominated in the Pensions Adviser of the Year category.

Nine months for burglary on probation

STANLEY man Dominic Watson (21) was sentenced to a total of nine months in prison for an offence of burglary committed while he was serving a 12 month probation

In the Senior Magistrates Court it was described how Mr Watson stole an Ipad, portable DVD player and a packet of crisps from the Malvina House Hotel on the evening of March 12/13

Mr Watson said he was, 'extremely drunk," when he had taken the items and full credit was given to him for having returned the electronic items and promptly admitting the crime.

The case was seriously aggravated by his previous offences, the fact that he was drunk, the loss of personal data from the Ipad and that the crime was burglary in a society that survives on trust, said Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley.

Mr Watson had completed seven months of his probation order and had behaved admirably to complete his prohibition order said Mr Guinsley, adding that he was "sad" to see him in court again when he was doing well to turn his life around in securing two

TWO days of Budget Select Committee at the end of the week will test our ability to balance the competing demands on the operating and capital budgets. Whatever we do has to be sustainable in the long term. so I believe that a tight rein is needed to keep recurring budgets affordable. Equally there will be difficult choices to make when it is time to look at multiple capital. projects, some of which will be unavoidable if we are to maintain some essential services to an acceptable standard.

I hope everyone interested will participate in the forthcoming consultation on the Development Plan. It is some years since the last consultation on the Stanley Town Plan and this will be a broader piece of work. There are many issues to consider if we want to see the Islands develop while still preserving all that is good. There are some interesting discussions currently underway between those who would like to see a grid system continued in new developments and those of us who believe new developments do not need to rigidly follow older designs. I can see clearly the desirability of preserving some of the character of old Stanley (to the extent that it is defined in the future), which is why I oppose the kind of infill that crowds properties together with a negative effect on the quality of life for those whose properties were already there. A free for all which allowed building in every back yard would detract from the attractive appearance of central Stanley.

With newer developments I have a great deal of sympathy with those who wish to make best use of their plot by placing their house to gain the best possible view and optimum use of their garden space once essential requirements, like distance from the boundary with their neighbours and parking, are met. There was a time when the Planning Committee was dictating colour schemes to people building houses resulting in a lot of dull brown houses, instead of the vibrant (please note appropriate use of the word!) and attractive characteristic variations of colour.

MPC photographer raises £1,116 for Falklands charity

A CHARITY Photographic Auction was held recently at the Joint Officers' Mess at Mount Pleasant Complex, in aid of the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund raising a total of £1,116. The event was organised by Mark Roberts, a manager at Supreme Food Services within Mount Pleasant Complex.

Mr Roberts is an accomplished photographer, having won a number of regional photographic awards within the UK. Over his three years stationed in the Falkland Islands, he has shot a variety of high quality images of local wildlife and historic Falkland Island sites. For the event, thirty unique high quality images were selected and then auctioned off to members of the Joint Officers' Mess. The images included those of penguins, seals and a number of military photographs reflecting the contribution made by British Forces stationed on the island

The event was opened by the Chief of Staff, Group Captain Steve Ward OBE RAF, and attended by a number of senior officers and their families. The VIPs of the evening were the immediate family members of Stephen Jaffray who were hosted by the officers of the Mess and the President of the Mess Committee, Lieutenant Colonel Steve Yafai RLC, who said: "It was a great honour to welcome the Jaffray family to Mount Pleasant and contribute to the tremendous work of their charity in supporting the relatives of very seriously ill Falkland Island citizens."

In his opening speech Mark reflected on the friends he had made in the Islands and the high esteem he holds for the work of the char-

Wine and cheese was provided by local company sponsorship from Sodexho and Supreme (contractors to the British Forces). The images were framed by Jane Cotter, owner of Pink Shop, Stanley. This generous corporate sponsorship meant that all proceeds from the auction were donated in full to the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Fund

The highest bid was for a lone bagpiper at sunrise on Onion Range raising £120. Other images were sold at their highest price and each one of the thirty prints personally signed and dated by Mark Roberts.

The Trustees and the family of Stephen would like to express their gratitude to Mark and his helpers for the great photographic event and the funds that were raised and donated to the Stephen Jaffray Memorial Trust.

Making the case for the Falklands

DURING a question and answer session in the House of Commons last week Philip Hollobone MP asked Foreign and Commonwealth Minister Hugo Swire (above) how successful efforts were to persuade the Brazilians of the merits of the Falkland Islanders' case that their sovereignty should be decided by the Islanders and not by Argentina.

Mr Swire said: "Whenever we go around Latin America and, indeed, central America, we are always absolutely certain to make the case that the Falkland Islanders had a referendum in which they expressed an overwhelming desire to maintain their current status. That should be recognised by countries right across the world, not just in Latin America, if they believe in self-determination and human rights. Unfortunately, one particular country in Latin America continues to bully and intimidate the Falklands."

Your questions answered

What is the personal insurance requirement for visitors to the Falkland Islands?

Collector of Customs Robert King provided the following information

A Current immigration policy pertaining to visitors seeking entry to the Falkland Islands is that it is very strongly recommended for visitors to be in possession of personal travel medical insurance that includes minimum cover values of:

• US $ 80,000 in respect of local medical treatment and/or medical treatment overseas, and:

• US $120,000 in respect of emergency aero-medical evacuation to a third country, e.g. Chile, and post treatment repatriation.

While it is strongly recommended it is NOT currently a condition of entry in respect of vicitors

In the declaration section of our landing visitor form it invites the person seeking entry to tick a box in regard to the following:

"I have medical insurance which includes aero-medical evacuation to the value of at least USD$ 200,000."

Where a private visitor does not tick the box then my officers will strongly recommend to them that they seek to obtain insurance by reason of our particular circumstances. This is because if they cannot be treated locally (which if they do not have or have only inadequate insurance, would be at their expense unless entitled to local medical treatment under the reciprocal health care agreement between the FI and the UK) and have to be evacuated to a third country for emergency treatment this would be at their expense (if they do not have or only have inadequate

Good year for FIH

FALKLAND Islands Holdings plc (FKL.L) in its pre-close trading update, announced it expects the trading performance for the year to show an encouraging increase in underlying pre-tax profits, and expects the total dividend payment not to be less than 11.5 pence per share.

Commenting on the overall performance, Chairman of FIH, David Hudd, said: "Momart has had an outstanding year with record levels of activity, while PHFC continues to perform well. In the Falkland Islands, significant growth awaits oil activity.

IJS/CE Council Member Connor and Chair of the Council Katalina present funds raised to Falklands Conservation's Farrah Peck

IJS Fun Day funds benefit Conservation Watch Group

THE Infant and Junior School Fun Day on February 27 raised an astonishing £1,367 90 for charity by selling raffle tickets, donated cakes, books and toys, and by playing games and painting faces.

Chair of the School Council Katalina and School Council member Connor told Penguin News that the money raised was to be split between CLIC Sargeant, a UK cancer support charity for children, and the Falklands Conservation Watch Group.

Connor and Katalina explained they had discussed who should benefit from the fund raising and decided to focus on these two charities as they benefited children: "We also chose the Watch Group because we wanted to support a local charity and the environment," said Katalina.

Despite the hard work involved in setting up the event the school council are already excited about the possibility of another event and have installed a suggestion box so all the students at IJS can get involved. Planning has already begun and there could be an Easter egg hunt or talent show on the horizon at the school to help them boost funds for playground equipment.

Students brought in jars which were filled with sweets to become prizes for the raffle. There was a collection of very generous donations from local businesses which ensured the raffle was the biggest money maker on the day: "The prizes were really good because of the businesses who helped," said Connor who is a member of the Falklands Conservation Watch Group.

Watch Group.

"We really wanted to say thank you to the parents, businesses, children and adults who helped," he said. The council wanted to make a special mention to the year 10 girls from Falkland Islands Community School, Kayleigh, Paige, Georgia, Ffion, Leela and Missy, who dedicated their time to set up the afternoon's events, sold a large amount of raffle tickets and nominated themselves to be soaked on the sponge stall.

Rapier live firing exercise

BRITISH Forces will be undertaking a routine Rapier live firing exercise from April 14 to 27 on Port Harriet range.

The exercise is part of the normal training cycle for the Resident Rapier Battery and has been conducted in the Falklands for many years.

An MoD spokesperson described it as an example of the, "excellent training benefits offered by the Falkland Islands to those serving as part of BFSAL"

Rapier missiles provide shortrange surface-to-air defensive capability out to a maximum range of 8.2 kilometres.

The firings will take place from the Port Harriet range out to sea, and will remain well within Falkland Islands territorial waters and airspace.

The UK has an exemplary safety record with these exercises, and takes its responsibilities in these matters very seriously.

Members of the public are requested to avoid the Port Harriet range until notified. Any questions regarding safety and access to the range should be directed to the Range Safety Officer on 76012 or mobile 53433.

FALKLAND ISLANDS GOVERNMENT PUBLIC NOTICE

Queen's Birthday Parade MONDAY 21 APRIL 2014

The parade to celebrate the birthday of Her Majesty the Queen will be held at Victory Green on Monday 21st April 2014. The parade will form up at Victory Green at 10.15 hours and His Honour the Acting Governor will arrive at 10.30 hours.

The Parade will proceed along the usual lines, and will be followed by a march past at which His Honour the Acting Governor will take the Royal Salute.

A joint detachment representing British Forces South Atlantic Islands and the Falkland Islands Defence Force will be on parade, supported by the combined Bands of the Lancashire Artillery, Duke of Lancaster's and Royal Signals North. Also in attendance will be representatives of the Legislative Assembly, Falkland Islands Government and Youth Organisations. There will be a fly-past at approximately 10.45 hours.

This is an important occasion and gives members of the public the opportunity to demonstrate their loyalty to the Crown and pay their respects to Her Majesty, whose presence is symbolised by the flying of the Royal Standard during part of the ceremony.

Members of the public attending the parade are invited to observe it from points on Victory Green and should be in position by 10.15 hours. The particular areas will be indicated by the Police Officers on duty.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to be worn on this occasion.

Gilbert House Stanley 2nd APRIL 2014

Farewell to Timmy and Tommy Tristar

DID you, like me, have to wipe away a small tear when you heard that the RAF's fleet of Lockheed Tristars had flown for the last time? The 40-plus year old airframes are, presumably now being cut up in some unsentimental breaker's yard. But they live on in the memories of Falkland Islanders and - rather strangely - on Falkland postage stamps, where they have featured in several issues over the years.

Timmy the Tristar and, later. Tommy the tanker (as military types liked to call them) were procured second hand by the RAF specifically to handle the long-haul military and civilian passenger and freight needs of the Falklands in the wake of 1982. The planes and their crews performed a fabulous service for decades.

Since 2003, though, the Falklands saw less of Timmy and Tommy, as they were pressed into service sustaining operations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

They were replaced on the Falklands route by more modern charter aircraft. These smaller and younger—whippersnapper-planes did well enough, but whenever I travelled to or from home, I missed the generous legroom and greater capacity of the Tristars, which meant one could often travel 8,000 miles stretched out across three or four seats.

From what I was able to tell, the Timmies and Tommies were very rugged. Once when delayed on Ascension Island because a jet engine fan blade was jammed. I saw an engineer fix the problem by smacking it with a 2x4 timber. They wouldn't stop a bullet, though. When working for Soldier Magazine back in 2004, I flew into Basra aboard a Tristar, and as we descended we were all told to sit on our flak jackets. That made me reminisce longingly about the many times that Tristars had taken me to Montevideo for an unplanned but pleasant diversion.

So farewell to the trusty Tristars. You did a sterling job and we shall not forget you.

Putin proves that the UK military have suffered a cut too far

The last time I wrote for Penguin News, I predicted that things were going to get a lot worse for Ukraine at the hands of Russia, and the west could look forward to the outbreak of Cold War Two. Things have indeed got worse, although this is not yet the Cuban Missile Crisis. As I write, though, we do seem to be entering another period of frigid and potentially dangerous east-west relations.

Right now, Russia is eschewing diplomacy while maintaining forces on the northern border of Ukraine that are poised to invade. Nato meanwhile is belatedly sending out a strong(ish) signal that the alliance is not to be messed with, by doing what it should have done from day one:

reinforcing former Russian territories in the Baltic.

No less a defence expert than the former Chief of the Defence Staff Lord Dannatt, is saying that the constant salami-slicing of the British Army, Navy and Air Force that has gone on over the last decade or so has left us with forces that would not be able to contribute adequately to the Nato alliance in a crisis.

I must admit this disarmament process didn't bother me for a long time, probably because I was thinking with shameful parochialism that the patch of ground I most cared about - the Falklands appeared to immune to the impact of cuts. Post Crimea, however, I am a disciple of General Dannatt. As far as I can see, the only glimmer of hope for the Forces comes from the navigation lights of the two super-carriers, which are now nearing completion (never mind that they won't have their own combat aircraft until nearly 2020).

Not only are we much weaker than we were, but after failure in Iraq and Afghanistan, Britain has no appetite for conflict, not even police actions like intervention in Syria which was justified on humanitarian grounds.

The Americans feel pretty much the same. Putin knows this, so he will push his luck a long way without much fear of being pushed back.

I have been fascinated by the parallels that some have drawn between the imbroglios of Ukraine-Crimea-Russia and Britain-Falklands-Argentina.

Both Moscow and Buenos Aires seized on supposed commonality for propaganda advantage. First Mr Putin said, "Crimea is far more important to us than the Falkland Islands are to Britain," which clearly meant: "If the Brits went to war over the Falklands, we can certainly do the same over Ukraine."

Then Mrs Kirchner sniped that Britain was being hypocritical by condemning the deeply flawed Crimean vote for union with Russia, while saying the Falklands vote for union with Britain was perfectly legal. The two polls were, of course entirely different, but an ill-informed person might well have heard her remarks and muttered, "Hmmm, she may have a point."

And then Mr Putin phoned Mrs Kirchner to thank her for her support and to lay the foundations for a warm relationship (he is newly divorced and she is a widow, so why not?) Talk soon followed of a possible Russian military base in Latin America, although it was also said that Putin would favour Nicaragua rather than Argentina because of the latter country's instability. That must have hurt Mrs Kirchner.

And just one final observation about this crisis: what's with all the flags? I always thought that carrying one's colours into battle ended in the early 19th Century, but in Ukraine people have been pulling down, hoisting, pulling down again and stomping all over national colours as if it were the Battle of Waterloo. E-Bay, which does a roaring trade in cheap flags of all nations, must have loved this.

It lead me to ponder about the incredible power of flags, and how tinderbox situations might be saved from full-blown conflagoration if the UN closed down E-Bay's flag department at the first sign of trouble anywhere. If no one could fly a national banner over the post office in Sevastopol, no one would bother beating down the doors and climbing to the roof to fly their banner. I just thought I'd flag that up. graham.bound@btinternet.com Twitter: Bound ungagged

Des Ponsonby

IT is with regret I report the death in New Zealand on March 29, 2014 of Des Ponsonby.

He was buried on April 3, 25 days before his 50th birthday.

Des arrived at North Arm on November 30, 1984 being part of a recruitment of shepherds by David Britton the Managing Director of FIC.

Des was a first class shepherd, a good horseman and shearer. Among his achievements he won the Novice Dog Trial with a New Zealand huntaway, no mean feat in a heading dog competition and played in the winning poloteam at North Arm in 1987.

Des was a willing and likeable man with many friends in the Falklands, he was a victim of melanoma cancer and will be sadly missed by all who knew him. With my wife Shirley we extend our deepest sympathy to his family and friends.

Outstanding Chichester

CHICHESTER College, a place of learning attended by a number of Falklands students, has been named as one of the most outstanding in the country by OFSTED. 'Outstanding' is currently achieved by only six other further education institutions in the country, placing Chichester College in the UK's top 7.

The Falklands has been sending students to Chichester College since approximately 2000 and there are today nine students enrolled, studying diploma courses that include, horticulture, sport and hairdressing as well as A levels.

In addition to overall effectiveness, Chichester College was graded Outstanding across the board for all of the key inspection criteria including Outcomes for Learners, the Quality of Teaching, Learning and Assessment and the Effectiveness of Leadership and Management.

FICS meets Two Boats in island school link

HEADTEACHER at the Falkland Islands Community School (FICS) recently spent time working in the Two Boats School in Ascension Island, "sharing expertise," and developing links with the school.

Mr Winward visited the Islands on his return from time spent in the UK at the Falkland Islands Government Office with Headteacher of IJS/Camp Ed Karen Steen, as part of the annual recruitment process.

The idea to form links with the school came about when Consultant Derryn Harvey, working with Director of Education Annie Tempest and the Directorate in updating the Education Ordinance, had visited Ascension Island on her way to the Falklands and recommended that any future links would prove beneficial should the opportunity arise.

To that end, Mr Winward contacted Headteacher, David Blunt and worked in the Two Boats School with senior leadership team. "to share expertise and develop sustainable links for staff development and training for the future," said Mr Winward.

He said a, "delivery of a whole school assembly with the presentation of a Falkland Islands plaque as a pledge of commitment between the two departments was well received."

Links with the Conservation Centre were also set up between Dr Nicola Weber and Dr Paul Brickle of the South Atlantic Research Institute.

Mr Winward said: "I was made to feel most welcome. Colleagues at the local Conservation Centre embraced my visit immediately with visits and excursions booked to take full advantage of what the Islands have to offer. Discussions around future school visits were exciting.

"Two Boats School were welcoming of school to school projects. ICT and the new UK curriculum in computing was an obvious starting point with both KS2 and KS3/4 students able to benefit from this."

He added: "Letter writing from Year 6 to three students who have just arrived in the Falklands from Ascension was heartening," and these have been forwarded to IJS and the staff.

"Continuous and professional teacher developments were identified as an immediate way of offering support and training with links to UK provision such as the highly acclaimed LEAD Academy in Nottingham and the training coming from The National College," he said.

The stopover trip was both beneficial from the point of view of research as well as making links with business, commerce and education.

FICS is now actively looking into taking the lead on a school to school exchange with students from the Falkland Islands visiting Ascension Island next year with a return visit to follow.

Messy Church

MESSY Church is celebrating not only Easter in April but two birthdays as well reports the Reverend Kathy Biles.

Messy Church started in the UK 10 years ago this month and has just reached its second birthday in Stanley.

Since starting in the Town Hall in April 2012, Messy Church has popped up at a flea market, exhibited art work in the Seamen's Mission and the community library, held a Messy Sheep Advent Trail, made a patchwork banner and produced mugs with a Falklands Messy Sheep logo, designed by Helen Davis.

Reverend Bilies said, "people of all ages are welcome to try their hand at crafts and activities, explore the Bible through story, song and prayer, and share a simple meal. Nor is it just for church members, everybody is invited to come and join in the fun. There is no admission charge and the only requirement is that preschool and IJS children must be accompanied by an adult."

The next meeting of Messy Church is in the Parish Hall on Sunday April 13 from 4-6p.m. The many Easter crafts and activities include scratch art and painting, making cards, bookmarks and bracelets, and learning how to make tussac crosses and Easter gardens. And, in view of the triple celebration, there will be a party buffet with Hot Cross Buns and birthday cake.

Business Climate Survey 2014

FIDC has electronically distributed the 2014 edition of the Business Climate Survey to all businesses. FIDC urges all businesses take the short time required to complete and return the Survey to FIDC. This initiative provides critical feedback regarding the current business environment in the Falklands and barriers to growth. This feedback enables FIDC improve its ability to help local businesses.

The deadline for completed Surveys is Monday the 21st April 2014. FIDC is happy to accept electronic or hard copies of completed Surveys. Please follow the instructions provided within the Survey to electronically return it to FIDC.

If you have any questions or wish to discuss the Survey please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk

Fundraising badge for Memorial Way

THE Allied Special Forces Memorial Fund will soon be offering a Commemorative Falklands Memorial Way badge for sale at £1 each. This is in order to help raise funds in support of the commemoration on June 14, 2014 at the Falklands Memorial Way, said Allied Special Forces Association Secretary Mike Colton.

The commemorations which take place at the National Memorial Arboretum in Staffordshire, "seem to increase in cost each year and we would like to encourage everyone to help our funds out in a small way. Possibly buy 10 badges and sell them on for more than a £1 each and the send balance to our account to help pay for the buffet or suchlike on the 14th," said Mr Colton.

Payment should be made to the Allied Special Forces Memorial Fund. Please contact Mike Colton on 07929-118598 or mikecolton@hotmail.com for further details.

FIT

An exciting opportunity to lead the direction of Television Media at Falkland Islands Television (FITV).

The Role: Television Station Manager

The successful candidate will be responsible for the day to day running of the television production company and have the opportunity to develop the direction of the content and coverage. You will need to be hands on as you will get involved in presenting, news gathering, script writing, camera work, and editing the twice weekly television programme. The position is for 12-24 months (to be negotiated). For candidates willing to commit to 24 months then there is the likelihood of spending three months with BBC South.

The Candidate: Interested parties must have had at least 2/3 years of previous experience working in television production and hold a full driving licence. Candidates must be proficient in using video editing software Final Cut Pro and/or Adobe PremierPro. They will have had managerial experience and be used to ensuring tight deadlines are met.

Remuneration: Will be commensurate with the level of experience of the successful candidate.

In the first instance please contact Stephen Fowmes via email at sfowmes@stanley-services.co.fk submitting your CV and a covering letter by Friday 25th April 2014.

Interviews will be held for shortlisted candidates, week commencing Monday 28th April 2014.

FIT

Are you are interested in working for a national TV station with the opportunity to cover stories ranging from live military exercises to wildlife, historical and political features? Then Falkland Islands Television (FITV) are offering adventurous candidates the unique chance to work for this small but fast developing TV station in the South Atlantic.

There are up to three Internships available.

FITV is a small community station which runs a twice weekly news magazine programme Falklands In Focus, and is the sole local television station on the Islands. FITV now also broadcasts a 60 second news update online at fitv.co.fk, which attracts a wider international audience.

The Role: Successful candidates will have the opportunity to be involved in all aspects of producing a TV programme twice a week. Ideally, interested candidates will want to improve their skills and obtain experience in news and features reporting, editing, directing, presenting, producing, and script writing. The position is for 12 months starting in May/June/July 2014

The Candidate:

Essential:

- A degree or equivalent level of training in Journalism or TV production
- Excellent communication skills, computer literate and fluent in English.
- A knowledge of camera work and previous experience with editing software, particularly Final Cut Pro is essential.
 - · Hold a full driving licence.

Desirable:

- Ideal candidates should be outgoing and armed with curiosity to seek out interesting stories, keeping a small community audience in mind.
- Be proactive and use their initiative to work on their own and as part of a dynamic team.
- Be adaptable to a new environment and be enthusiastic to embrace the opportunity to explore the islands history, culture and community. In the first instance please email your CV and a covering letter to Stephen

Interviews will be held for all applicants week commencing 28th April 2014

Over the garden fence with Ginge Kidd

EVERY year in a garden can provide many mini triumphs and equally as many, or more, disasters or disappointments.

This year has been no exception. The worst hit were the potatoes, not only were they planted rather late, which would not normally have affected them too badly, but they were badly burned off as young plants in the strong sunshine after a heavy ground frost a couple of months ago. They appeared to be limping back in and beginning to show themselves quite green and healthy when another frost hit the vegetable garden about three weeks ago. Needless to say digging them is going to be a bit of a heartbreaking task but one that cannot be put off forever.

The tomatoes inside have not fared much better. There are masses of fruit on them but trying to ripen them is not so easy. I have spent a lot of time amongst them this past week and they have now been cut down to a reasonable height to stop them producing any more fruit. More than three trusses at this time in the season would be wasted if, as ours, they are growing in a greenhouse without heating. I have also removed a lot of the leaves so that all sun and light can get to them.

The peas outside never really recovered from the frost which hit them when very young. Those planted inside, though late in the season, have done very well as have the carrots, planted rather late but inside, after I realised that those outside just could not cope with the wind and very dry conditions at the time.

The other successes inside are the many brassicas which include brussel sprouts. These are the best we have ever had, and early in the season too. As I removed litBeautiful yellow roses and delicate lilies are bright spots in Ginge's garden tle by little the bottom leaves the sprouts filled out and hardened lovely! I think, unless the weather improves a lot next year, growing under cover is going to become a necessity anyway. But, outside, all the brassicas Bill planted in November are producing more greens than we can cope with.

I have discovered also, as the earwigs have become more plentiful, that they tend to nestle inside the lighter coloured cabbage hearts and white and green curds but are, so far anyway, leaving alone all the dark green and purple broccoli.

In the flowering borders we've also had mixed luck. The hostas did not enjoy the very dry conditions caused by the never ending wind throughout the seasons. Many of the roses did not exactly thrive in those conditions either. The lilies got badly knocked about with the wind but most flowered anyway and even some of the more tender and scented oriental ones are starting to flower now

The perennial sweet peas which would normally be covered in blossom at this time are only just showing buds. I have finally been able to employ a garden fork (and not just as a crutch) and so while Sue has been here weeding one of the borders 1 tackled an older border in which the couch grass thrives and had become very established. Most of the plants had to be lifted, their roots cleaned and then replanted in freshly dug ground cleared of couch grass, for the moment anyway, and fed with a good dollop of home made compost. This was also a good time to break up some of the larger clumps. Some, such as primroses just require their roots teasing apart; usually easier to do if they are soaked first. Others needed rather more forceful methods, two garden forks pushed into the roots back to back can normally take care of breaking the clump up. Failing that a good sharp knife will normally cut through the congested roots. The middle of the plant should be discarded for it is the outside of the clump that is growing the youngest and strongest parts and has the newest and best roots.

Dryer conditions obviously suited some of the plants, or perhaps they were a little stressed? For whatever the reason it was pleasing to see the various Sambucus (elders) flowering quite prolifically. They might not produce any berries but the flowers are pleasing; particularly pretty l think are the flowers of the purple leaved elder. These are pink as opposed to the normal cream. I have never made any drinks with the elder flowers but I do wonder what the pink ones would produce. The Sorbus (Rowan or Mountain Ash) have also flowered and they have produced loads of berries. I believe that normally means a bad winter; we will sec.

Meanwhile I must get out there and pick some of the berries for Rowan jelly. It's lovely with roast mutton. Also producing berries for the first time this year is one of the Rowans with white fruits. These are a beautiful glistening white, rather like large pearls and stand out well against the ferny leaves which are smaller and darker and more lacy than the rest of the Mountain Ash family.

And now I must brave the weather and get the last of the brassicas planted out or we will be without any greens in spring. It looks like it's going to rain, so here goes.

Perfect days golf for Decor Services medal

WEATHER for the 2013-14 golf season has been testing.

It seemed that the wind blew ten knots harder and the temperature dropped a few degrees every Sunday. Fortunately the final competition of the season was played in near perfect conditions with very little wind.

So far in the season, before the Decor Services April Medal, the league competitions were still on the line meaning there was more to play for than the competition itself. A good field of 16 golfers took part and scoring was generally good.

Bob Gilbert had a fine round of nett 65 which was good enough for third place and moved him into the top eight of the league and eclectic competitions. Martyn Gilson-Clarke continued his recent run of form by returning a nett 64 for second place.

Bob and Martyn both received handicap cuts and are now off 21 and 22 respectively.

But it was club captain Troyd Bowles who won the competition with a nett 64, beating Martyn on a countback, thanks to a one under par back nine of 33.

Going into the competition Troyd was leading all of the season long league tables, but could have been caught in all of them. By winning and carding four birdies in the process he made it impossible for anyone to overtake him. This means Troyd has won the overall league, medal league, eclectic, gross league (72.9 stroke average) and received a handicap cut to five.

The golf club would like to thank Decor Services for sponsoring all of the Monthly Medals throughout the season, a total of twelve competitions.

The next scheduled competition is the May Medal, but the club plans to host some fun events each Sunday throughout April. Anyone is welcome to come and play, just turn up at 0900 Sunday morning. The format will be decided on the day depending on numbers.

Chief Justice dismisses year sentence appeal

AN appeal against Kevin Derek Charles McLaren's 10 year prison sentence was dismissed in the Supreme Court on Tuesday

His Lordship Chief Justice of the Falkland Islands, Christopher Gardner QC said he considered the sentence imposed by the Senior Magistrate Carl Gumsley not to be, "manifestly excessive," and dismissed the case. McLaren (38) was convicted last month of 16 serious sexual offences involving a child and two adult women.

The court has to have regard to all the circumstances of a particular case, including all the relevant aggravating and mitigating factors, and, having done so arrive at a total sentence which is appropriate and proportionate, said the Chief Justice, adding, "I consider that the Senior Magistrate did pre-

Referring to the presentence report on McLaren the Chief Justice considered to have been, "calculated, manipulative and sustained, targeting the vulnerable to satisfy what have become dysfunctional and deviant norms. He remains unable to control his sexual urges and is not inhibited by the risk of

Falklands Legal attorney Simon Crowder had argued that the sexual offences against the child were a series of sexual activity and as such the consecutive year of imprisonment for making and possessing sexual images was too much, when under Falklands law two thirds of the sentence would have to be served.

Having viewed the indecent images the Chief Justice said he agreed with the Senior Magistrate's description of these as highly graphic and "obtained as a result of an abusive relationship.

It was the professional opinion of the probation officer that McLaren's behaviour gave rise to a high risk of re-offending on release which could only be prevented if he received specialised sex offender treatment which was not available in the Falklands

The Chief Justice said he was concerned about there being no opportunity for treatment in the Islands and noted that McLaren had indicated he was willing to go to the UK to receive appropriate treatment, however, he said, this would be said, "cost a substantial amount of money." There was no order the court could make and was therefore an administration matter he added.

The Chief Justice said he hoped in view of the very considerable danger to children that would exist on McLaren's release consideration would be given to such treatment in time for it to be effective prior to his release

40 new posts requested by Government

MORE than forty new posts have been requested across the Falkland Islands Government with around 50 per cent. of those likely to be overseas

A staffing review paper was examined by Members of Legislative Assembly at last week's Executive Council meeting.

MLAs said this would lead to much discussion in the budget select meetings (last week and this week) "and it was passed on with a note that even if MLAs approved the jobs there were no houses available.

ExCo also approved a paper requesting funds to look at options for expanding the prison, and funding was approved for the development of outline design options for a new fire station be built on the outskirts

Critta joins dog trial legends with a grand slam

Pictures Leann Ford

PORT Howard farmer Christopher 'Critta' Lee worked his way into the dog trialing history books over the weekend as he joined just two other handlers who have managed to claim first place in the two events with the same dog.

Critta and his six year old dog Duke were first in the Dog Handler's Association (DHA) competition on Friday and maintained their form on Saturday to win the Championship Dog Trials. Proving his skill even further Critta working Duke's two year old son Bitzer also took second place in the Championship

Tony McMullen was the first to achieve the double back in 1979 and legendary dog trainer and handler Les 'Luch' Morrison pulled off the same remarkable achievement in 1990, 92 and 94.

Not to be outdone, the ladies of West Falkland were also making dog trialing history as the judging line up for the first time ever consisted of three females. Susie Hansen, Diane Betts and Dae Peck had the unenviable task of scoring the high class dogs and handlers on their performance, not to mention the arguably equally onerous task of defending their decisions after the event.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

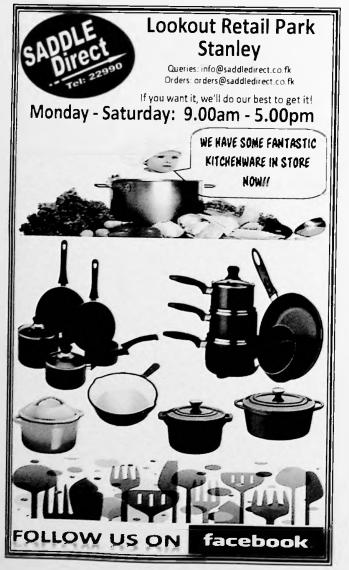

DESCENDING the hill into San Carlos on the recent beautifully sunny Saturday afternoon and admiring the view of the gleaming bay below, the driver of the vehicle looked horrified when I admitted it was a seene with which I wasn't particularly familiar. Not that you could blame him, as the offspring of north campers it's a shameful disclosure. In my defence I have had brief glances when calling in for 82 anniversaries (but not by road) and once while shadowing a visiting Princess Anne. However my abiding memory on that occasion involved trying to persuade Norman Clark to let me shimmy up his step-ladder in order to obtain a panoramic view of the lady and her entourage. Being challenged in the height department too many of my photographs include unflattering views of chins and nostrils.

Re-inspired then with regard to the beauty of our Islands it was satisfying to return to work on Monday and while penning through our mock-up of the PN, noticing that the planned subjects illustrate just why the Falklands is a place well worth the pretty penny most tourists will pay to get here.

The delight tourism hosts and operators took in receiving acknowledgement of their efforts was obvious at the awards ceremony (see centre pages) last Thursday. Their pride is deserved; the quality of care for tourists may not qualify as ultra-luxury but it's comfortable, clean and welcoming and most importantly the operators treat visitors warmly and as individuals.

Features this week also include the photographic competition with its remarkable images of Islands wildlife and society, along with analysis of various fauna, plus a museum project aimed at revealing the visual history of the Falklands horse. Bearing in mind that dark, dark mornings are upon us and the weather is deteriorating further it was a timely reminder of precisely why I'm happy to live this far south of the equator.

A well written blog by a junior doctor who spent six weeks in the Islands recently has illuminated the short staffing problems faced by the KEM Hospital. Rebecca, who found her time here invaluable as a result of the range of conditions she was able to obtain experience of, gave an interesting insight into why locum doctors in particular are reluctant to take up longer contracts. Having spoken to the doctors she said reasons range from the cut in pay they would face, but also smaller 'tum-offs' such as, "old, rundown accommodation which is shared with three to four other hospital staff, not of your choosing. No access to a vehicle unless you're on call (in which case you can't go anywhere anyway). Terribly slow and expensive internet." That remuneration for doctors and nurses is a problem is pretty well known locally (although matching locum pay might be pricey) but it was interesting to hear about the smaller (but important to the individuals) issues - ones that could clearly, with budget support, be solved relatively quickly.

Championship dog trials

THE two day dog trials event took place over the weekend on West Falkland with the Dog Handlers Association competition at Shallow Bay on Friday afternoon (15 entries) and the Championship Sheep Dog Trials at Westley on Saturday morning.

Both events attracted some strong competition between East and West entrants, although the East may have felt slightly let down by their representative. Paul Peck. Friday's host farmer who it was claimed had done a magnificent job of training the sheep to a high standard but was among the minority who failed to pen them. Fellow dog handlers were reportedly, very sympathetic to his plight.

East Islander Neil Goodwin who represented West Falklands, having won a place at a competition there earlier in the year suffered the shame of his dog performing a splendid outrun only to end it all with a flying leap into the back of the Land Rover at the letting go pen. Despite his misfortune he managed to carry out a very courageous television interview after the event.

However it was unanimously agreed that Critta Lee was the star of the show with three outstanding performances on the course and obtained almost celebrity status, trailed as he was shadowed by a film crew, not only throughout the dog trials, but also during some of the story telling and antics of the following evenings. (One to watch out for)

Susie Hansen said the Dog Handlers Association would once again like to thank Peter and Emily Short for their continued support and everyone else for prizes and donations. She also thanked judges and sheep 'letter outers' without whom there would be no trials. "It's a thankless task for all who spend the day not being able to mix with everyone and then get condemned for the job in hand.

"Thanks to all at Shallow Bay and Westley for hosting the trials, to Hill Cove for putting up with everyone and the girlies for doing the bar - probably the most important bit," concluded Susie.

Child safety awareness survey

AS part of the preparation for the up-coming Child Safety Awareness Campaign, the Falkland Islands Safeguarding Children Board will be carrying out an anonymous survey on child safety and child protection. The survey launched on Tuesday closes on April 24, and questionnaires and response boxes will be available in the Post Office, the Public Library, KEMH Reception, KEMH Nurses' Station and KEMH Casualty.

The online link to the survey is: www.surveymonkey.com/s/FISCB-Child-Safety-Survey

In a statement from Gilbert

House it is noted: "The subject of child safety is an important one, as demonstrated by being the Assembly Priority for the January-March 2014 quarter. It is, however, a delicate and sensitive subject, and one the Falkland Islands Safeguarding Children Board appreciates can be difficult to discuss. All the information gathered during this survey will be strictly anonymous and will be vital during the preparation of a safety campaign alongside the Lucy Faithfull Foundation, and will help to ensure that the Board prepares a campaign that is tailored to our community."

Awards ceremonics for Jim and Martin; and Martin takes time to run the marathon too

Honourable achievements at the palace and on the streets of London

DR JIM McAdam and Martin Collins were both presented with an Order of the British Empire (OBE) by HRH Prince Charles at Buckingham Palace on April 4.

As previously reported in Penguin News, Dr McAdam was awarded for services to research and agriculture in the Falkland Islands, while Chief Executive & Director of Fisheries of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands Mr Collins was honoured for services to science and conservation in SGSSI.

Dr McAdam said receiving the award from Prince Charles was very fitting, as the Prince had previously visited the Islands and while there had paid a visit to the Department of Agriculture.

During his short conversation with Dr McAdam, Prince Charles showed a clear interest in the Islands, asking about the state of farming and discussing current issues affecting the Falklands generally. His final comment was, "Seaweed's the answer isn't it?"

"Needless to say I was in no position to disagree with him," Dr McAdam told Penguin News.

His party included daughter Emma Jane Wells who was born in the Falklands and was a Shackleton Scholar in 2000/1, wife Geraldine, who visited in 2011 and sister Norena, who was a Doctor in the Islands from 1985 - 1987.

Afterwards he and his party were treated to lunch by former Governors David Tatham and Donald Lamont along with Sukey Cameron, Alexandra Shackleton, Andrew Moffat, Peter Johnston and David Walton.

Marathon running Martin

Mr Collins said the awards ceremony day was fabulous and he attended with his parents, nephew neice and sister.

His time in London was particularly stimulating as he also took part in the London marathon for the eighth time on April 13 completing it in a fantastic 3:01:47.

Third in the Stanley marathon last month (3:16:47) he was delighted with his London time but noted that it wasn't his personal best. This was his 16th marathon in total including five in Stanley, two in Melbourne and one in Oslo 18 months ago where he set his personal best of 2:58.

He said conditions this year in London were excellent with clear skies, no wind, "but perhaps a little too warm," and couldn't match his best time for the course of 2:59 set last year. He added: "I was going great until about 21 miles when my legs started to fail. Maybe three weeks wasn't enough gap between marathons."

Fanciful Argentina

ARGENTINA has once again accused the UK of provocation over plans to hold military exercises in the Falkland Islands.

It said drills by British forces would include missile launches and were part of a pattern of hostile acts. The British ambassador in Buenos Aires was last week summoned by Argentina's Deputy Foreign Minister who protested over the, "new show of military force."

The UK Foreign Office dismissed the claims as, "fanciful" and said next week's exercises were, "routine."

Ofsted inspection dates planned

DATES for an internal Ofsted inspection of schools has been set for the week of May 12 reports the Director of Education Annie Tempest.

The inspection will comprise, scrutiny of data, minutes, policies, and documents. After inspectors have examined those documents there will be a two day Skype/ Face Time session with various stakeholders in education.

Ms Tempest said: We are now negotiating with the Children's Military Services a full Ofsted in late October or early November."

Two more classrooms

PROPOSALS to provide two additional classrooms for the Infant Junior School are underway for the next academic year.

The long term plan remains a new school on a new site reports the Director of Education. This is to accommodate the school population until a long term solution is provided.

RFIP report a drop in incidents

THE Royal Falkland Islands Police reports a drop in reported incidents in the last quarter (January 1 to March 31) of 58, compared to the same period in 2013. January had the third lowest number of reports since 2007 (for that particular month). The months of February and March, whilst reduced, are more in keeping with historical data going back to 2007, where February 2013 had the highest figure since 2008.

Vivienne Perkins

IT is with sadness we report the death on Monday of Vivienne Perkins (80) years. Ms Perkins was well know for her dedication to supporting the work of Christchurch Cathedral Stanley.

Student doctor highlights KEMH staffing issues

JUNIOR doctor Rebecca Craw has praised her six weeks in the Falklands to the Rural Health Education Trust, saying she feels she has been, "utterly immersed in rural medicine right from the start, and boy have I loved it."

She also highlighted problems relating to a shortage of doctors.

Miss Craw lists having been able to dabble in general practice, general medicine, emergency and trauma medicine, general surgery and anaesthesia with the resident doctors.

She adds: "Everyday was filled with learning opportunities which I strived to grab with both hands.

"I learnt about conditions I had never seen before, varying from frostbite in fishermen to renal transplant management in a 4 year old; which I might add is complicated when you live in the Falklands and all the specialists are in the UK."

She adds however that rural health is notorious for being under-staffed and she had come across the problem not only in New Zealand and rural Australia but in the Falklands too.

On the downside she lists KEMH as not having adequate facilities for acutely unwell psychiatric patients, and witnessing a point when the hospital was stretched to near-breaking point.

She also outlined some of the reasons locum doctors had given for why they did not want long term contracts in the Falklands, including reasons to do with pay and accommodation.

However she comments that most doctors, "feel the hours are perfectly reasonable with not too much time on call."

Miss Craw said: "I also think they need to encourage young Falkland Islanders to pursue a career in medicine."

She notes that, "the more Falkland Islanders becoming health professionals the more likely some, if not all, will come back here to work. Provided you pay them at least equally to the locums."

Director of Health and Social Services Hilary Rowlands is currently out of the Islands and was unable to comment this week.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

LAUGHTER was inevitable when we were told of a proposal to announce on FIRS that some radio frequencies were temporarily out of action. Of more concern is the increasingly prevalent idea that most consultations should be done on line, so I was pleased to see paper copies of one or two consultations freely available. While many people are happy to fill out consultations and forms on line, I have reminded fellow MLAs and officials numerous times that the most recent census figures show that 28 per cent of households do not have access to the internet, that is more than one in four. Any consultation only available on line effectively disenfranchises more than a quarter of the population. It is easy for those who are heavy users of the internet to assume that its use is universal. It should also be remembered that information only put out electronically is also missed by a similar proportion of the population. There is still a very real need for information to go out on all available media.

THE census, although referring to information gathered in 2012. is an interesting read on many levels. The pattern of educational attainment shows a pleasing increase in the age groups who have grown up since the '82 war and had much broader opportunities to gain formal qualifications. In that age group male and female attainments seem to be broadly similar, as they should be. In older age groups, there appears to be a definite bias toward males having higher levels of education. Of course any statistics involving small numbers come with a health warning because they are easily distorted.

THE planned two day budget session last week overran and may require another half day this week. We then have another session in May and will finalise the budget in early June. That June meeting has been moved from late May to permit the attendance of members who would have been out of the Islands on FIG business in May. The overrun is a reflection of the complexity of the 2014/15 budget and the sometimes conflicting demands on available funds.

Travelling with Assembly Members

Special Advisor Emily Hancox reports on a visit to the Caribbean

I HAVE recently returned from a trip to the Caribbean with MLA Ian Hansen. We visited St Lucia first, to attend the Third Global Biennial Conference on Small States (organised by Economic Affairs Division of Commonwealth) with the theme 'Building Resilience in Small States.

The main focus on the first day was 'Debt Challenges and Solutions for Small States' which wasn't particularly relevant for the Falklands, however the benefit of this came from the case of networking as so many small states were represented at the conference

The resilience part of the conference was quite interesting; whilst we don't suffer from some of the other small state scenarios (such as hurricanes or sea water rise) almost all small states are highly reliant on imports. Market fluctuations effect imports and exports and resilience to these external forces is an area that many states need to focus on. These areas where there is likely to be instability were wrapped up in a presentation titled Governance Structure for Building Resilience which had some stimulating points regarding assessment criteria for resilience.

The second day was about En-

Emily and lan with other 'Small State' representatives

vironmental Resource Management and Climate Resilience in Small States which was much more relevant and interesting for us. At the coffee breaks there were papers regarding changes in attitudes towards research and resource management with lots of focus on creating Green economies. This made for good conversation afterwards as we have such a well-managed fishery and fairly environmentally-friendly economy at the moment

The afternoon session was about the role of youth and education which led me to chase up the youth delegates and talk to them about similarities and differences between the Falklands and their home countries

We met with the Gibraltar delegates and discussed problems with unreasonable neighbours. MLA Hansen spoke to a couple of CARICOM members about the economic blockades imposed by Argentina and our right to self-determination and said they seemed

Many of the delegates that we spoke to were very interested to hear about our lack of debt, strong economy, and where our GDP comes from. This created interest in to the Falklands, leading to questions about Argentine pressure, future of energy and general lifestyles.

We attended a farewell cocktail reception hosted by the Government of St Lucia, before organising ourselves and getting ready for the fairly short hop onwards to Trinidad and Tobago.

Trinidad is a business frontier for future collaborations and their government goal is to export energy expertise as they have been an oil producing country for the past 150 years.

The Falklands have already benefited from some of this knowledge as ASCO and IOGL (International Oil and Gas) have both been involved with the logistical and HSE (Health, Safety & Environment) aspect of our oil exploration when they were contracted by Byron McKay in 2010.

Our main goal was to scope out the potential for future training collaborations, including HSE, professional energy qualifications (engineers, roustabouts...), vocational training (welding, mechanics...) and a whole range of energy-related areas. To this end we had meetings with NESC (National Energy Skills Center), HHSL (Safety Systems trainers), The Energy Chamber, ASCO, Environmental Management Authority (EMA), also a few government ministers.

This sector of the trip was much more productive than we had previously anticipated, with the potential for a Falklands delegation to attend their annual energy conference next January, a possible scholarship programme and also plenty of interest for a Trinidadian delegation to visit the Falklands to meet with people with interests in our energy sector.

We also had dinner with a group of Trinidad journalists, one of whom we met last year after the referendum. They were all very keen to visit the Falklands and we had a very interesting evening talking about their local knowledge of Trinidad/Caribbean politics and life, whilst fielding questions about all aspects of the Falklands.

Local boy made good and flew flag wherever possible

FALKLAND Islander David Hardy who died in Dubai on November 10, 2013 was the perfect epitome of the old adage 'local beautiful to many large and 'local beau boy makes good'.

He had lived in the United Arab Emirates for the past 28 years where he was employed by the Ruler of Dubai, H.H. Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, as Head of the Radio Service Centre for the Royal Family. David was born in Stanley on David was born in Stanley on August 29, 1948 and was the adopted son of Mrs Elsie Hardy. His early days were spent at Chartres sheep farm on West Falklands where his mother was housekeeper for Mr and Mrs Keith Luxton, the farm manager.

Moving back to Stanley, David soon established himself as an outstanding scholar particularly in the field of algebra and geometry but with the opportunity of further education being virtually non-existent in those days he left school at the age of 14 and joined the W/T Station as a radio operator.

However, he studied from home and waltzed through his 'O' levels in English language, Pure Mathematics and Physics. He continued to study diligently through the International Correspondence Schools, passing all his exams with flying colours.

When the Government W/T Station was incorporated into Cable and Wireless, David seized the opportunity of the additional educational opportunities that the take-over presented and with the assistance of Rupert Thorogood and Peter Hayley, the two senior C&W officials, he soon established himself as an outstanding and gifted radio technician.

Looking to further enhance his career he made the difficult decision to leave the Falklands and quickly found employment with the Metropolitan Police in London in their radio section. He also studied at Croydon College where he received a full technological certificate in telecommunications from the City and Guilds Institute.

He met his future wife Linda Nixon while attending dancing classes in London as he sought to improve his dancing skills, having been brought up on a diet of Circassion Circles, Palais Glides and Barn Dances in the Falklands. They had one daughter Joanne who was born in Croydon in November 1981. Sadly, Linda died of cancer in 1997.

David then sought employment in the Middle East taking up a lucrative posting in Libya working for IAL before moving to Qatar in 1980. He continued to study and in 1989 received his Incorporated Engineer Certificate from the Engineering Council.

His next appointment in 1984 was to the very high profile position as Head of the Radio Service Centre for the Ruler of Dubai, His Highness Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum. The post required him to take care of all the telecommunication requirements of the Sheikh and his family, including the popular and traditional Dubai camel racing.

His expertise, reliability and supervisory capabilities endeared him to Sheikh Mohammed and he became as trusted, loyal and faithful employee of the Royal Family.

In 2003 David married Jinyan Zhang

In November 2011 when he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer the Royal Family had no hesitation in ensuring that David was sent to the best specialists that Harley Street could offer.

He fought a brave and courageous battle with the fatal illness, even working from his hospital bed and directing his staff in their daily duties until he passed away on November 10, 2013.

Never a gifted sportsman he nevertheless enjoyed playing football, cricket and running at Falkland's Sports meetings. He later took up squash and enjoyed walking many miles every day. In his younger days in the Islands, when every household was totally reliant on a shed full of dry peat which ensured hot meals and warm rooms, he was more than handy with a peat spade. His mother was never cold or hungry.

David forged a close and loving bond with his daughter Joanne and it is appropriate that she has been asked by the Royal Family, no less, to take up employment in the offices where her father once spear-headed radio communications for the Sheikh. That gesture alone indicates the high esteem that his employers held for him.

Often asked where he was from and finding a puzzled look on the face of the questionning person when he said the 'Falkland Islands', he cut out a little map of the world and had it carefully folded in his wallet, and he then would take great delight in producing the map and pointing out exactly where the Islands are.

David Hardy was a staunch Islander throughout his 65 years of life and he flew the flag for the Falklands in whichever part of the world he happened to be working

1. What is your happiest moment? Happiest moment recently was finding out 1 got my plot of land – 1 believe this might also be Dad's happiest moment because he knows the quicker he builds my house – the quicker I will move out

2. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands? Roddy Napier or Hamish Jennings - they would have some great stories to tell at GH functions

3.What is your nickname and why? Sadly they are not very flattering...Nads, Go Nads
4. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Got to be Vietnam next—from one end to the other by motorbike would be amazing.

5. What is your favourite TV programme? This changes regularly – at the moment it is Castle but when I get the new season of Bones I'm sure things will change. Anything with a good crime plot works for me

6. What would people be surprised to learn about you? I used to play the trumpet

7. What's the best book or movie you have read/watched recently? Shantaram by Gregory David Roberts

8. Where did you meet your partner? Shearing at Goose Green - he was wearing a pink ladies sports bra

9. What did you want to be when you were a child? FIGAS pilot but after recently considering applying I found I was actually a bit scared and I couldn't see over the dashboard - at all 10. What was your first job? Cleaner at college

11. When you leave the Falklands what do you miss the most? Being so close to friends and family

Décor's Falklands flooring pair up with Forbo

FALKLANDS floor and tiling company Decor Services Ltd has signed a contract with the Mount Pleasant providers of flooring Forbo Flooring Systems. This means the local company can carry out work on behalf of the, "global leader in flooring Forbo," confirmed an Mount Pleasant spokesperson this week.

Décor Services has been dealing with Forbo for some time, but now it is a working partnership. Forbo is the current supplier to the UK Ministry of Defence for all flooring materials and fitting requirements worldwide and has held the contract for the past 10 years.

Managing Director of Decor Services Ltd Chris Gilbert said: "I am thrilled with this step and look forward to working with Forbo to continue to provide the high standard of work at Mount Pleasant complex now and in the future."

The history of the work horse

Your photos can help the Museum create an historic snapshot

WHEN the Museum moves to the Dockyard, part of the smithy (east end) will become a stable, and an extension (yet to be built) to the east will be the gear shed.

The Museum has imported a demonstration horse, which will be geared up with saddle, cinch, cojonillo and headgear to show how the various items were used. The Museum owns a huge amount of homemade gear, some of which is workaday, and other tems which are pieces of art. There are also several saddles, and two beautifully preserved cargero saddles.

Our display horse hails from Scotland and the company that brought him were so tickled to be shipping a horse that they ran a competition to name him. All the Doccombe yard and office workers paid £2 for each name submitted, the pot then going to the holder of the name drawn out. The warehouse manager won with his choice of, would you believe it, 'Liberation'.

It is hoped to have a photographic display entitled. The History of the Horse in the smithy and we would like to ask Penguin News readers if amongst old family photographs they have pictures of working horses (as opposed to riding horses). Horses were used for all manner of things, such as carting peat and rock, for cinching posts, carrying fencing, carrying sheepskins and wool maletas – everything in fact. Even towing a rollie barrel!

Should you have such photographs and would be prepared to lend them for copying Denise McPhee (22842) or Sally Blake (21271) would be pleased and grateful to hear from you Such pictures would be well looked after and returned to the owner. Please make sure they are clearly marked with your name and address phone number.

We would also be very grateful if there is anyone with gearmaking tools no longer used who would consider donating these to the Museum. We hope that there will be a small workbench in the smithy where these can be displayed.

Sea lion numbers on the up

IN the 1930s the Falkland Islands were reputed to hold the largest population of Southern sea lions, with a staggering 80,000 pups estimated to be born each year. However, a census in the 1960s and again in the 1990s revealed the population had declined by more than 90 per cent.

With support from the Shackleton Scholarship Fund and the Falkland Islands Government Environmental Studies Budget, a team of researchers led by Dr Al Baylis (Deakin University, Australia & SAERI) have recently completed the fifth census of the Falkland Islands sea lion population. Over the course of three weeks in January and February 2014, over 4,500 sea lion pups were counted at 73 breeding sites around the Falklands (including seven new breeding sites).

This figure represents a 60 per cent increase in the number of pups born since the population was last counted in 2003, but it is still just a fraction of the 1930s estimate. To look for clues as to why the sea lion population declined between the 1930s and 1990s, the researchers also visited the Jane Cameron Memorial Archives and explored 100 years of Falkland Islands natural history.

The real challenge now lies ahead - trying to piece together not only reasons for the population decline, but why the population recovery has been so slow. To answer this long standing question, the researchers will combine census data with recent data collected on the foraging behaviour of sea lions and fine-scale population genetic data. A final report on the 2014 sea lion census will be available later in the year.

Dr Baylis sent his sincere thanks to land owners for assisting with the census and granting access to breeding colonies.

Cake and crafts in a San Carlos setting

IF crafts, coffee and cake are your thing then a weekend road trip to San Carlos should be on the cards

Last year Andi Neate (best known for her jazz/folk singing and song-writing) and farming partner Matthew McMullen moved to San Carlos and in November Andi opened her cafe in their spacious sun room. At that point she was already up and running in the pottery business and felt the cafe would offer another opportunity for visitors to view and purchase her work. Currently there is also a museum and cemetery at San Carlos which attracts visitors, so the area loaned itself to the provision of a cafe she said.

In terms of pottery Andi's primary interest is in imprints using nature in art, such as leaves and feathers but she also paints 'blanks' and produces brooches, badges, cards and weaves scarves.

If you are visiting on a weekend then the cafe will be open and visitors can try their hand at pottery painting. If you fancy smoke during the week then give her a call on 32044 so she can be sure to be home to welcome you.

For one very good reason Andi won't be available around the end of June however, as she will be jetting off to Glastonbury to perform there for the 24th time.

Andi's last album (her sixth) 'Flying full circle' is based on her experiences in the Falkland Islands. Her albums are also on sale at the cafe.

Help plan your town

THE Environmental Planning Department (EPD) is to review the Falkland Islands Development Plan (made up of the Structure Plan and Stanley Town Plan) and before a more in-depth consultation takes place, the public's views are required on some of the bigger issues.

A spokesperson for the Government said: "The Development Plan provides a framework for the future spatial development of the Jelands."

"In particular, it provides the basis for the determination of planning applications. The current version was produced some time ago and there is a need to review the plan to take account of the emerging potential for oil-related development, and to improve those areas where lessons can be learnt from the plan's implementation so far."

As part of the consultation process a Non-Technical Summary, Main Consultation document and Draft Stanley Town Plan Map will be available from the EPD offices on St Mary's Walk. A response form is available to provide comments on these documents. Responses can also be submitted on-line using the following link: www.surveymonkey.com/s/FIDevelopmentPlan2014 The deadline for comments is Friday May 30, 2014.

The results of this consultation will be used to help produce detailed amendments to the Structure Plan and Town Plan. There will be a separate consultation later in the year. It is hoped that the new plans will be formally adopted towards the middle of 2015.

Remarkable underwater lives

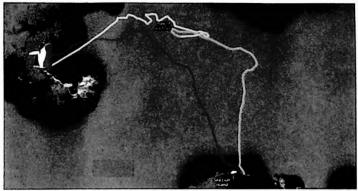

South African Jonathan Handley has been investigating the foraging ecology of Gentoo penguins around the Falkland Islands. To do this he had been deploying state of the art high definition (HD) video cameras, GPS, dive loggers and accelerometers on the backs of the birds which has been possible through the support of his university, Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University in South Africa and Falklands Conservation. Mr Handley takes up the story:

These technologies now allow scientists to see almost exactly what is going on in the remarkable underwater lives of penguins while at sea. Previously devices were too large or could not survive deep dives. Nowadays, the devices that we take for granted on our smart phones have been adapted to survive depths of over 500 metres and stay submerged in saltwater for months, even years, at a time.

For the first time in the Falklands and for Gentoo penguins, these HD cameras are revealing remarkable behaviour from the birds point of view. In addition, the tiny GPS devices and dive loggers reveal the three dimensional area that penguins are using, and the tiny accelerometers (collects data similar to how quickly a runner is travelling) reveal the energetic requirements of Gentoo

penguins while searching for and capturing prey

Footage from the cameras has revealed amazing chase sequences of prey. GPS and dive loggers recorded the deepest dive known for a Gentoo penguin across their range, and in the Falklands, when one of the study birds reached a depth of 212 metres when it travelled beyond Beauchene Island. Surprisingly, some breeding birds at one colony even visited other Gentoo colonies, an undescribed behaviour for Gentoo penguins in the Falklands so far. Such information is critical for gaining an all-round understanding of the requirements for survival for Gentoo penguins.

This information will contribute to an effective management plan for this species in the Falklands as well as assist in answering many scientific questions. Data will create potential for informed management decisions promoting a balance between man and the environment whilst ensuring sustainable economic development.

Critical to the success of this project has been generous support from the Environmental Planning Department, John Cheek trust and Ruffords Small Grants Foundation. Toward the future, the South Atlantic Environmental Research Institute (SAERI) will become a partner to the project to lend expertise and advice.

A key component of fully understanding a species is studying it at many sites. This was made possible with support from volunteers, and land owners and managers at North Arm, Johnsons Harbour and Steeple Jason Island. Thank you!

Baseline information of what is going on in the surrounding waters helps us to uncover what is happening higher up the food chain with penguins and other marine animals and this is only possible through the brilliant work and support of the Falkland Islands Fisheries Department and Shallow Marine Surveys Group. With such a wealth of data members from the British Antarctic Survey group, one of the most significant in British science, will be assisting in analyses. I look forward to updating you with the full details once we have analysed all the data.

Along with the science. I have also been so fortunate to have met and worked with the amazing community of the Falklands.

I have a new appreciation for cups of tea or the power of a hot toddy, especially when sipping either of these in the presence of great company, breathtaking wildlife and sunsets or sunrises that no camera can fully capture.

Thank you to everyone who has made this project possible and if you ever need a place to stay in South Africa I look forward to showing you around.

Falklands pioneer in the cruise industry, Roddy Napier receives

Malvina House Hotel management staff Rosie George, Carl Stroud and Jasper Gottschalk

World class product celebrated with well deserved awards

GOVERNMENT House was the venue for the third Tourism Awards and a large crowd gathered to see who would earn recognition for their work and be presented with trophies by Acting Governor John Duncan.

Assisted by his PA Kyle Biggs, Tourist Board Managing Director announced the nominated businesses and revealed the winner of each section before the Acting Governor presented the awards.

Recipient of the Managing Director's award was Roddy Napier who along with his wife Lily have been active in the cruise tourism industry for 45 years

Mr and Mrs Napier have been hosting cruise ships at West Point Island, providing access to the albatross and penguin colonies as well as serving tea and cakes to visitors since 1968.

In February of that year Lars Linblad a Swedish-American entrepreneur and explorer, who pioneered tourism to many remote and exotic parts of the world and also led the first tourist expedition to Antarctica in 1966, visited West Point and Carcass Island. For many years Mr Linblad operated his own vessel, the MS Lindhlad Explorer, in the region and the vessel's 1969 expeditionary cruise to Antarctica is mooted as the frontrunner to today's seabased tourism in the area.

In 1970 the first actual cruise ship to visit the Falklands was in fact the Linblad Explorer when it called in to New Island for two days. Mr Napier told Penguin News that two of the largest vessels to visit were the Marco Polo and the Seven Seas Mariner and he and Lily had had occasion to offer tea and cakes to up to 600 visitors in one day. Mr Napier said he was very grateful, "honoured and surprised," by the award.

Winner of the Tour Guide of the year award Tony Smith also said he was surprised, "most other people are dealing with greater numbers of people than me so it was a very nice surprise." Asked about his philosophy as a tour guide he said. "I try to answer every question they put to me, and having been involved for 20 odd years now I have picked up a lot." Mr Smith said he drives, few hundred a year, but it's small numbers compared to others. I take private bookings rather than get involved in the big convoys.

Sulivan Shipping's Cruise Coordinator Sammy Marsh who accepted Agency of the Year Award on behalf of the company thanked everyone who voted for them. "It is lovely to know that all our hard work is appreciated. We work with many excursion operators, transport providers and landowners, and without them of course we would not be able to achieve what we do, so thank you to them as well," she said

Welcoming guests to the event Acting Governor John Duncan said it was really important to recognise the excellence of the tourist industry and the people who work in it.

"It is a really important part of the economy and tonight is a celebration of the warm and welcoming spirit that Falkland Islanders show people who come to visit these wonderful Islands and the wonderful wildlife.

MLA Michael Poole who holds the portfolio for Tourism said it had been mentioned recently that the tourism industry doesn't always get the attention it deserves.

"It is the second largest industry in the Falklands in terms of economic output and also in terms of employment nowadays," he said adding that recent work by the Tourist Board demonstrated that for every pound the Government puts into tourism directly there are six in return. "That seems pretty good sense to me," he said.

The public diplomacy aspect is also important, said MLA Poole. "Tens of thousands people visit each year and get to meet and talk to Islanders and to a person I think they go away with a much better understanding and clearer view of what we are about as a people and a country." The evening was he said, "a celebration of the world class product that we have here."

FIT

An exciting opportunity to lead the direction of Television Media at Falkland Islands Television (FITV).

The Role: Television Station Manager

The successful candidate will be responsible for the day to day running of the television production company and have the opportunity to develop the direction of the content and coverage. You will need to be hands on as you will get involved in presenting, news gathering, script writing, camera work, and editing the twice weekly television programme. The position is for 12-24 months (to be negotiated). For candidates willing to commit to 24 months then there is the likelihood of spending three months with BBC South.

The Candidate: Interested parties must have had at least 2/3 years of previous experience working in television production and hold a full driving licence. Candidates must be proficient in using video editing software Final Cut Pro and/or Adobe PremierPro. They will have had managerial experience and be used to ensuring tight deadlines are met.

Remuneration: Will be commensurate with the level of experience of the successful candidate.

In the first instance please contact Stephen Fowmes via email at sfowmes@stanley-services.co.fk submitting your CV and a covering letter by Friday 25th April 2014.

Interviews will be held for shortlisted candidates, week commencing Monday 28th April 2014.

FIT

Are you are interested in working for a national TV station with the opportunity to cover stories ranging from live military exercises to wildlife, historical and political features? Then Falkland Islands Television (FITV) are offering adventurous candidates the unique chance to work for this small but fast developing TV station in the South Atlantic.

There are up to three Internships available.

FITV is a small community station which runs a twice weekly news magazine programme Falklands In Focus, and is the sole local television station on the Islands. FITV now also broadcasts a 60 second news update online at fitv.co.fk, which attracts a wider international audience.

The Role: Successful candidates will have the opportunity to be involved in all aspects of producing a TV programme twice a week. Ideally, interested candidates will want to improve their skills and obtain experience in news and features reporting, editing, directing, presenting, producing, and script writing. The position is for 12 months starting in May/June/July 2014.

The Candidate:

Essential

- A degree or equivalent level of training in Journalism or TV production
- Excellent communication skills, computer literate and fluent in English.
- A knowledge of camera work and previous experience with editing software, particularly Final Cut Pro is essential.
- · Hold a full driving licence.

Desirable:

- Ideal candidates should be outgoing and armed with curiosity to seek out interesting stories, keeping a small community audience in mind.
- Be proactive and use their initiative to work on their own and as part of a dynamic team.
- Be adaptable to a new environment and be enthusiastic to embrace the opportunity to explore the islands history, culture and community.

In the first instance please email your CV and a covering letter to Stephen Fowmes: sfowmes@stanley-services.co.fk by 25th April 2014.

Interviews will be held for all applicants week commencing 28th April

Business Climate Survey 2014

FIDC has electronically distributed the 2014 edition of the Business Climate Survey to all businesses. FIDC urges all businesses take the short time required to complete and return the Survey to FIDC. This initiative provides critical feedback regarding the current business environment in the Falklands and barriers to growth. This feedback enables FIDC improve its ability to help local businesses.

The deadline for completed Surveys is Monday the 21st April 2014. FIDC is happy to accept electronic or hard copies of completed Surveys. Please follow the instructions provided within the Survey to electronically return it to FIDC.

If you have any questions or wish to discuss the Survey please contact Michael Betts - Phone: 27211 or E-mail: mbetts@fidc.co.fk

Local photographers compete for 'We are Falklands' space

THE 'We Are Falklands' photo competition closed on March 28, with judging undertaken on April 10.

The PR and Media Office received over 400 images from more than 40 photographers during March, and had a fantastic variety of pictures to choose from.

The competition was held in order to source material for a Falkland Islands photographic exhibition that will take place in the Mall Gallery, London between July 20 to 27, this year. The exhibition. 'We Are Falklands' is designed to showcase all aspects of life in the Falkland Islands.

"From the outstanding natural beauty, to the exceptionally diverse wildlife; a thriving economy, as well as a unique identity, history and culture; this exhibition aims to capture the spirit of the Islands and its inhabitants," said Emily Hancox of the PR Office

A total of 62 images were selected by a judging panel, although the final number on display at the Threadneedle Space (in the Mall Gallery) may be subject to change depending on available space, print quality and professional advice from the gallery staff.

There were a few issues when receiving entries, as email was the most common format for sending files, explained Miss Hancox.

"Entries were such good quality that large file sizes sometimes meant only a single picture could be emailed at once and could become a slow and frustrating exercise. However, all of the photographers, amateur and professional alike persevered to send us a stunning range of images."

The photos that were not selected for the London exhibition will still be considered for use in future Falklands Government publications such as the new Islands Plan or other promotional material.

Miss Hancox said she and PR Manager Krysteen Ormond would like to thank everyone who sent in their photos.

"We had a brilliant time looking through them all and have a great source of material for the future. Thanks also to the other judges. Peter Judge, Sammy Marsh and Dan Fowler for helping to decide on the very best pictures and making some very difficult choices."

If you are in the UK in July, admission to the exhibition is free so go along and have a look. The Mall Gallery is located opposite St James Park in London.

Photos that were selected for the exhibition were taken by: Andrea Barlow, Andy Pollard, Angela Moffatt, Aniket Sardana, Ben Cockwell, Beverley Foster. Chris Moreno, Chistiaan Howlett, Craig Scott, Gill Day, Glen Sturdee, Grizelda Cockwell, Jessica McPhee, Jimmy Moffatt, Karl Nightingale, Mark Pollard, Paul Faria, Richard Pethybridge, Roger May, Sharon Jaffray, Sarah Lenaerts, Saul Zuvic, Sian Nightingale, Tamas Farkas, Vaclay Silha, Vicki Jackson and Zoran Zuvic.

Emily Hancox and Krysteen Ormond at the PR and Media Office take time to examine an exciting array of Falklands images

Development Plan Consultation

11th April - 30th May 2014

We are starting to review the Falkland Islands Development Plan (the Structure Plan and Stanley Town Plan). Before the more detailed consultation required by legislation, we want to hear your views on some of the headline issues

The Development Plan provides a framework for the future spatial development of the Islands In particular, it provides the basis for the determination of planning applications. The current version was produced some time ago. There is a pressure to review the plan to better take account of the emerging potential for oil-related development, and to improve those areas where lessons can be learnt from the plan's implementation so far

Queen's Birthday Parade MONDAY 21 APRIL 2014

The parade to celebrate the birthday of Her Majesty the Queen will be held at Victory Green on Monday 21st April 2014. The parade will form up at Victory Green at 10.15 hours and His Honour the Acting Governor will arrive at 10.30 hours.

The Parade will proceed along the usual lines, and will be followed by a march past at which His Honour the Acting Governor will take the Royal Salute.

A joint detachment representing British Forces South Atlantic Islands and the Falkland Islands Defence Force will be on parade, supported by the combined Bands of the Lancashire Artillery, Duke of Lancaster's and Royal Signals North. Also in attendance will be representatives of the Legislative Assembly, Falkland Islands Government and Youth Organisations. There will be a fly-past at approximately 10.45 hours.

This is an important occasion and gives members of the public the opportunity to demonstrate their loyalty to the Crown and pay their respects to Her Majesty, whose presence is symbolised by the flying of the Royal Standard during part of the ceremony.

Members of the public attending the parade are invited to observe it from points on Victory Green and should be in position by 10.15 hours. The particular areas will be indicated by the Police Officers on duty.

It is appropriate for medals and decorations to be worn on this occasion.

EXECUTIVE Council have approved funding up to £100,000, over two years for specialist consultancy advice to support consideration of future options for the provision of telecommunications on the Islands

The recommendation was put forward by the telecommunications working group which was formed earlier this year following an Assembly 'away day' when the future of exclusive licences for telecommunications and fuel were discussed.

The group proposes to review the future provision of telecommunications on the Islands, to ensure the provision of efficient and affordable telecommunications to the Islands and in doing so, consider the full range of options to provide better and/or different telecommunication solutions.

Public consultation on the current telecommunications on offer on the Island is also to be undertaken over the next few months. Sure's current telecommunications licence can be terminated with five years notice, with the next opportunity for FIG to give notice being December 2014.

While there is a recognised need to guarantee national provision of telecommunication services, the working group said. "there are concerns regarding the price of services, limited internet bandwidth, and incomplete mobile phone coverage across the Islands."

Swearing in of new Governor

COLIN Roberts CVO will be swom in as Governor of the Falkland Islands in the Court and Assembly Chamber on Tuesday, April 29 at 9am. The ceremony will be followed by a Parade at 0955 at Victory Green.

MARCHING to Victory Green to celebrate the 88th birthday of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II this Monday was a detachment of the Falkland Islands Defence Force (pictured above) and a tri-service detachment of Her Majesty's Armed Forces accompanied by combined Bands of the Lancashire Artillery, Duke of Lancaster's and Royal Signals North. Duty to protect public funds

WE have a duty to proteet public funds," stated a Member of Legislative Assembly yesterday in relation to a Public Accounts Committee report on the partnership agreement between the Falklands Government and Morrison (Falklands) Ltd.

MLA Michael Poole introduced the report that included analysis reports of the partnership agreement researched by consultants Mazars Ltd.

The issue was first referred to the PAC in 2011 and delays have been caused among other reasons as a result of it being a "complex issue," and it having taken some time to, "compile the relevant documents and data and to analyse it," explained MLA Poole.

He said the PAC had approached the issue from the point of view of whether the Falklands tax payer was receiving value for money from the partnership arrangement.

Before outlining the key findings he commented that the research showed there were no clear reasons why a single bidder procurement approach should not be used by FIG.

The report from PAC found that a significant strengthening of the existing partnership agreement needed to take place to further protect tax payers money and ensure value for money.

To this end the agreement with Morrison should be renegotiated and the, "respective risk sharing between the two parties more clearly articulated."

It should have much clearer contractual and pricing methodology, needed common objectives and goals and be legally binding. It also required a clear definition of each party's roles and responsibilities, said MLA Poole.

The agreement should also be based on past experience, looking back at where things have and have not worked well.

The report recommends that contractual documents for individual construction projects be more formalised and contain more detailed schedules of allowable costs which would then be regularly reviewed and bench marked.

Once in place there should be a stronger oversight role from a person independent of PWD within FIG, who would examine specific documents, said MLA Poole.

Comment by Editor Lisa Watson

ALTHOUGH the Falklands is a territory that like most others exploits its natural resources. I confidently defend what I view as the environmentally friendly practices of those bodies or businesses that benefit, including the careful regulation of the fishery, the work undertaken by past and present observers on sea bird death mitigation practices, and the farmers who may grumble about 'tree hugging' conservationists but in fact care responsibly for the natural environment in their keeping.

Even at the most recent meeting of the environmental committee it was apparent that while not everybody wanted to jump too quickly into signing up to the Convention on Biological Diversity (a vital international environmental treaty) this was not due to any reluctance to protect the Falklands environment. On the contrary, so entirely accepting were both the government and industry representatives that if the Falklands was to eventually sign up then obligations would be correctly fulfilled; that they felt obligated to fully comprehend the requirements and impact realities, and be in the right place before making the commitment.

What would be the alternative? Well the convention is largely not legally binding so it would be an easy thing to make the politically correct decision to pay lip service, sign the paperwork, and then toddle along not fulfilling anything very much for years to come, or even just ignore the bits that might lose us money.

As such I admired the sincerity and the intensity of the lengthy debate from all sides. Of course the business community had concerns about impractical environmental promises impacting on economics, but still there appeared no unwillingness to see joining the CBD as anything other than an ultimate objective.

So here I am all uplifted that we're just such great people committed to birds and fish and pretty grasses and flowers; except I visited the rubbish dump on the weekend.

Now you don't expect rubbish dumps to be aesthetically pleasing but the amount of plastic and other materials blowing on to the Common was a pretty distressing sight and no doubt other horrors lurked in the form of discarded hazardous materials and CFCs floating merrily off into the atmosphere

Fortunately there's a plan - I'm just not allowed to see it yet. A paper, not yet public, will be presented to ExCo mid May and its aim is to improve the management of waste and start segregation of recyclable or reusable material.

That sounds reasonable but I have to ask this. Is it a project that encompasses our needs not just now, but in the future? If yes, will it be properly funded? If properly funded, will it be properly project managed?

Let's hope so - I don't see the point of self-righteously signing up to an international convention if we can't manage a rubbish tip

Speed limits: From 25 to 40 and back again

THE legality and the reasoning behind the recent reinstatement of the 25mph speed limit on the Stanley Airport Road on the section near FIGAS was questioned at Tuesday's public meeting, as was the speed limit on the Moody Brook/Mink Park road.

MLA Mike Summers said the reinstatement of the restriction had definitely not been to Executive Council while MLA Jan Cheek said such a move would have at least required subsidiary legislation and MLA Michael Poole said he thought it was a Police operational matter to set speed limits.

Research following the meeting revealed a Penguin News report in November 1994, which said the decision to remove the 25mph restriction near FIGAS was approved in Executive Coun-

Consequently this raised the question that if the 25mph restriction was not legislated, was a recent prosecution against an individual for speeding in the area

Chief Inspector Len McGin told Penguin News the current speed limits were designated by the Road Traffic (Designation of Roads) (Various) Order of 1989 The FIGAS area was 25mph and to Moody Brook from the Stanley Boundary was 40mph. Chief Inspector McGill explained that last year PWD had updated road signs to ensure they complied with the relevant law which had resulted in replacing the 25mph sign leading to Stanley Airport

A spokesperson for PWD said once work was completed on the Moody Brook Road the speed signage would be reinstated, "but hopefully as a 25mph sign if regulations are in place in time."

MLA Summers said that any public views on applicable road speeds in the vicinity of Mink Park, or the stretch between the Beaver Hangar and Mink Park. would be welcome.

The Attorney General and Chief Inspector McGill continue to investigate whether the 1994 decision was ever enforced and what the implications would be.

Queen's birthday parade didn't go off with a bang

MEMBERS of the public have said they found the organisation for the Queen's Birthday Parade on Monday "shoddy," and "embarrassing" and suggested that if it was not possible to have a 21 gun salute as was traditional, a rifle volley or nothing at all would be preferable to random explosions from the Camber.

Assembly Member Mike Summers said it was a valid point and that the efforts to replicate the 21 gun salute had indeed, "failed horrendously.

Major Peter Biggs of the Falkland Islands Defence Force told Penguin News that as the organiser of the Queen's Birthday Parade he took full responsibility for any problems regarding the 21 detonation salute and any other aspect of the parade.

He explained that in the absence of ammunition for the saluting guns three options were available: to let the event go with-out a salute; use blank firing rifle detonations (BATSIM).

To have a parade without the spectacle generated by 21 shots, volleys or detonations was unacceptable, said Major Biggs.

Looking back at all the complaints I received on the last occasion we used blank rifle volleys for the salute made that option a very last resort and this left using BATSIM as the best option, even though it is the one with the most potential for going wrong.

He said he chose that option and, despite the best efforts of the dedicated personnel involved there was a timing issue.

"As always we look at what we do and try to improve," said Major Biggs, adding his thanks to all involved from Stanley and Mount Pleasant for giving their time and working hard to produce the parade. "With assistance from MPC we have now established a firm supply chain for saluting gun ammunition and the saluting guns volleys, or to use ba	ttle simulat	iffe will be used for the Gion arrival parade on April 2	29."

Leaky, poorly made cabins

THAT the newly purchased cabins at Murray Heights are leaking is not a result of the removal of windows to shift white goods from the rentals, but because the units themselves are poorly made, said Falkland Islands Government's Housing Officer Bonnie Curtis.

A member of the public claimed at the Public Meeting on Tuesday evening, that his daughter who rents one of the cabins had not been offered the option to retain the fridge freezer, that the window had to be removed to shift the goods and then again when she purchased new items and had them installed.

MLA Mike Summers said he was not sure that was the situation, but added that he and MLA Gavin Short had met with the Director of Public Works to discuss the matter which neither of them found satisfactory.

MLA Roger Edwards made his feelings clear, declaring the entire situation was, "bloody stupid."

Miss Curtis however confirmed this week that all of the local occupants of the cabins were offered the opportunity to purchase the integrated washer/driers, and all had taken up the offer.

The fridge freezers, which are not integrated were removed. "There was never any offer made to leave them in," said Miss Curtis adding that the cabins are rented out to local tenants at the unfurnished rate of £245 per month.

There was however a lot of built-in furniture which tenants had benefited from at no charge such as built in beds, wardrobes, TV units and carpeting.

There was no need to remove windows to shift the fridges as they fitted out of the opened windows, she explained, adding that the cabins themselves are leaky in more than one area, and were in her opinion, poorly made.

"I am taking note of the various little niggles that have occurred with them, so that if it is suggested we buy any more I can make an objection at that point," she told MLA Summers.

Most birds caught on SG longline in ten years

ONE of the most significant scabird by-catches in over a decade occurred in the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands (SGSSI) Marine Zone last week, by the Chilean longliner Antarctic Bay.

Chief Executive and Director of Fisheries for the Government of SGSSI, Martin Collins told Penguin News the circumstances surrounding the capture of the birds was being investigated and once complete a decision would be made about what, if any, action was required.

À report that one of the longline vessels licenced to fish in the SGSSI MZ had caught 74 white-chinned petrels on a single line was received on April 16

April 16.

"This is the most significant bird by-catch event we have had in the fishery for more than 10 years," said Mr Collins.

He explained that in the early years of the fishery (1990s) large numbers of birds were killed and as a consequence the Commission on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR) introduced a number of measures to reduce the bycatch, including limiting the season to the winter months, restricting the setting of lines to darkness, ensuring lines sink quickly and enforcing the use of streamer lines.

"As a consequence of these measures bird by-catch has been reduced to close to zero," said Mr Collins.

On the back of this success CCAMLR has, since 2010, approved an incremental relaxation of the season restriction. During the period 2010 to 2014 the start of the season has been incrementally and experimentally brought forward by five days each year.

This year vessels were allowed to start fishing on April 6. The incidental catch occurred on lines set during this experimental extension period.

Mr Collins said licence conditions have now been adjusted to ensure that vessels complete the setting of lines at least three hours before sunrise to reduce the risk of incidental capture of white-chinned

"This new condition will be in force until May 15, by which time the risk to white-chinned petrels should be greatly reduced," said Mr Collins.

Family wedding celebration

AFTER a week of rain the sun shone on the wedding of lan Smith and Felicity Clarke (right) at Christ Church cathedral on April 12.

Wearing a beautiful ivory chiffon a-line strapless dress with embroidered blue flowers on the bodice and trailing onto the hip, Felicity was attended by maid of honour Laura Street and bridesmaid Sara Molkenbuhr-Smith wearing royal blue dresses.

Flower girl Kyra Smith wore a white satin dress with 'loose' blue petals. Ian and best man Ricky McCormick wore matching tailcoats with royal blue waistcoats and cravats. The two pageboys, the couple's children, Ryan (5) and Scott (2) were also dressed to match the groom. Mother of the bride Trudi Clarke was elegant in a knee length navy blue dress with matching bolero jacket and mother of the groom Janice McLeod wore an attractive knee length dress with purple flowers and matching jacket.

The wedding was followed by a small gathering of family and friends at the Malvina House Hotel and then a reception and dance at the Town Hall.

It was a double celebration as Felicity's grandparents Rudy and Camilla Clarke celebrated their 56th Wedding anniversary the same day (inset).

What are we signing up to

'WHAT are we signing up for?' is the question the Environmental Committee will ask of the Attorney General when they task him to examine the requirements of a multilateral environmental agreement, the Convention on Biological Diversity.

The treaty that attempts to encourage all nations of the world to improve environmental management of their territories, has been actively considered by the Falklands Environmental Mainstreaming group for some time.

On Wednesday the Environmental Committee viewed a paper from Head of Policy Jamie Fotheringham and Environmental Officer Nick Rendell that reviewed the requirements of the treaty, the latter pointing out where the Falklands was already in line with targets, and where areas lacked progress. Mr Rendell emphasised, "most of the basics," were already being met.

MLA Jan Cheek commented that they should go in cautiously, "if we enter agreements we follow them so we should be careful what we are committing to.'

She noted however that it already had political support in terms of, "exploring what needed to be done."

She and MLA Michael Poole indicated they were uncomfortable recommending ExCo agree to the principal of joining without greater clarification.

Speaking to Penguin News later the Falkland Islands Fishing Companies Association Secretary Andy Pollard explained that fisheries sector concerns related to a requirement for 'protected areas'. He said: "we are still unclear as to exactly what we are signing up to. It is not clear as to what aspects are legally binding... the industry believes that our fisheries are very well managed with the current system from an environmental perspective. Protected Areas may not have a negative effect on the industry, but they also might."

He said they were working on a project led by South Atlantic Environmental Research Institution that will look at this subject over the next two years: "The proposal is to sign up to the UK's ratification and we need clarity as to what this would involve."

The Falklands fishery contributes approximately 60 per cent of the Islands Gross Domestic Product, any negative effects on the industry's profitability, "will in likelihood have a knock on effect to the Islands as a whole," said Mr Pollard.

During the meeting Mr Pollard commented that current closed fishing grounds around the Falklands would already added up to the 10 per cent likely required by the CBD. However, as yet it is not clear what the definition of a protected area is or if by joining the UK's ratification that 10 per cent would be the Islands' objective.

would be the Islands' objective.

He also wonders: "If stocks move can the legal framework be flexible chough to adapt?"

Land based protected areas are currently being reviewed by Falklands Conservation with a recommendation report to go to Environmental Committee in August. Terrestrial requirements for protected areas is 17 per cent.

Legislative Assembly Member Jan Cheek shares a glimpse into her working week

TWO shortened weeks have left a bit to catch up this week when everyone is back from the long weekend. We have had to schedule another additional day in May for work on the budget. I hope that we do not have to resort to cutting back on services, but that could be a consequence of asking departments to offer savings when several of them barely have sufficient resources to cover what they are doing now. Some may be surprised that it is so difficult to complete the budget, but as I've said before there are so many competing items on the agenda that some pretty serious compromises will be needed and some will find that their preferred projects are not affordable People should not underestimate the cost of being 'oil ready' in terms of legislation, regulation and public consultation and man hours, not to mention potential port and utility upgrades. It is also important not to neglect the industries like fishing that are currently funding much of our expenditure. An interesting Environmental Committee agenda this week should result in a lively discussion as we look at the potential for signing up to the Convention on Biodiversity. Like so many things this looks great in principle but we have to be wary of taking up commitments that many larger countries would struggle to find the resources to meet. We have over many years done a fair amount to look after the natural resources of our country; consequently wildlife and farming, with a few unfortunate exceptions, have co-existed quite happily. Likewise fishing has been managed in a way that is sustainable and there has been good co-operation on things like incidental seabird mortality. Oil companies are generally well regulated and those operating exploration here have shown real willingness to work on environmental issues. However, it is important to recognise that new pressures may arise in the future whether from oil production, increased tourism or more intensive farming. At the risk of making more work for people, I wonder if we should look at tailoring our own schemes rather than adopting others.

Ground breaking fishing company for 20 years - the ups and downs of CFL

CONSOLIDATED Fisheries Ltd (CFL) celebrated its 20th anniversary as a company at a reception and banquet at Malvina House Hotel on Saturday. It also celebrated the 10th anniversary of its vessel CFL Gambler's blessing and highlighted the MSC certification of the toothfish fishery.

CFL Chair Hamish Wylic told Penguin News this week how the company came to be in the early 1990s when. "little was known," in the Islands, "about operating fishing vessels or selling fish."

He said at that time local companies were very much still shut out of active involvement in the major fisheries by overseas companies. However, "identifying an opportunity to break that mould, Mike Summers, then General Manager of FIDC, and John Barton, Director of Fisheries, proposed to facilitate Falkland Islands fishing companies, to work together and learn from their experience, through the formation of a company to develop the emerging toothfish fishery, said Mr Wylie

He said although CFL is now one of the most successful and profitable operators in the fishery, "few realise that on two occasions in its early history the company came extremely close to bankruptcy."

Under pressure to move to vessel ownership at a time where there was a dearth of longline vessels on the market, CFL purchased a Canadian trawler in 1997. The vessel was converted to a longliner and named the CFL Pioneer.

Mr Wylie said: "With little knowledge in this area coupled with some poor advice, a steep and expensive learning curve soon followed. On the second occasion, declining catches resulted in the company losing substantial sums of money. The cause was mainly put down to excessive whale predation of toothfish from the fishing lines, and by November 2001 the company had four months in which to manage a solvent wind up."

However, immediately after the decision had been taken catches started to improve, and light began to appear at the end of the tunnel.

He explained how the Islands has benefited from CFL, "beyond the obvious," saying, "CFL is substantially owned by five other local fishing companies that do not rely on its performance for their own well-being."

For this reason CFL is more able to take a wider view on reinvestment of its profits.

This is reflected in a pilot toothfish farming project aimed at providing an alternative source of toothfish to the company, and its substantial investment in the Islands containerised shipping link SAAS.

"Recognising the pivotal role that a link to the rest of the world could have on the Islands economy, CFL has invested over £7million in SAAS and currently holds 70 per cent of the debt that has been necessary to see the company through some extremely challenging times."

During his speech he explained how Grant Munro led the company out of the late 90s, to hand over vessel operations to George Betts who later took over as General Manager in 2008.

During the celebratory evening, recently retired Mr Betts was presented with the gift of a painting of the CFL Gambler in recognition of his hard work and valuable experience he brought to the company. FIG fisheries scientist Paul Brewin was also recognised for his work on MSC certification of the toothfish fishery.

Amendment

IN an article covering the tourism awards in last week's edition we reported that in 1970 the Linblad Explorer called in to New Island for two days. This was incorrect and should have read 'West Point'. Roddy Napier, winner of the Managing Director's award, for services to the tourism industry also asked PN to pass on his thanks to all of those people that assisted him and Lily over the years.

Historian researches 1982 battlefields and his family

HISTORIAN Derrill de Heer, the nephew of former Government House chauffeur Don Bonner will visit the Falklands in late June initially assisting in the filming of battlefields and then afterwards researching his family history. As such he is keen to talk to as many people as possible who might be able to help him with the latter.

Mr de Heer's mother and her relatives are well known Falkland Islanders: Gleadells, Macaskill and Bonners. His mother Vivien Phyllis Bonner (Gleadell) married an Australian merchant seaman (Merchant Marine Engineering Officer) and they moved to the UK during World War II. "After World War II we returned to Australia, where I have been ever since," he told Penguin News.

He is currently a Visiting Fellow in Military History at the University of New South Wales located at the Australian Defence Force Academy (ADFA) in Canberra. His area of research is in recent wars that Australia has participated in, mainly the Indonesian Confrontation and the Vietnam conflict. He served as a soldier in Malaysia as part of the 28th Commonwealth Infantry Brigade Group and had two tours in Vietnam in various capacities. Mr de Heer is the current historian of 2 Commando Regiment, Special Operations Command who have just returned from Afghanistan.

His visit will take place from June 28 until July 12, with a colleague from the university.

He said: "This will be the first time I have visited the Falklands since I left as a baby. My Colleague is Dr Deane-Peter Baker and he lectures in military ethics.

Vivian Bonner with an ashtray made from the scrap from the Graf Spee private military companies, counterinsurgency, South Africa's past, present and future. Dr Baker will only be in the Falklands for one week. He is touring many parts of the globe filming battlefields so he can show different types of terrain in his lectures to the military cadets at ADFA."

"My second week I hope will be taken up with tracing my family tree and meeting relatives who live in the Falklands. These are people I have never met so I am looking forward to it."

He is also interested in collecting the stories of past relatives, photographs and any memorabilia. His mother passed away in October 2008, "and although it was always her wish to return to the Falklands, she never made it."

Giving family background Mr de Heer explained: "My mother's mother Kate (Katherine) Gleadell (Bonner) had, I believe 12 children. One son Raymond served in the Royal Air Force during WWII as a tail gunner. I'm told he did in excess of twenty trips over Germany. He told me he was shot down once but survived."

Another of Kate's sons Owen served in the Royal Navy, survived the Battle of the River Plate on HMS Exeter only to die when the HMS Charybdis was sunk during WWII in the English Channel. Another son Jeffery Gleadell enlisted in the British Army and was sent to France; he was evacuated at Dunkirk. After leave in the UK he went to visit the woman he was engaged to only to find that their family house had been bombed and the whole family had perished. He spent the rest of the war posted to Malta. "Jeff never married," said Mr de Heer, "later he came to Australia (early 1950s) and went to the Antarctic with the Australian Antarctic Expedition and was in the first team that wintered over on the mainland of Antarctica. All of those people from that expedition were awarded the Polar Medal for that trip and the medal was presented by the Duke of Edinburgh to Jeff during the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne.

Mr de Heer is also keen to speak to his Uncle Don Bonner who he has heard many stories about.

He is also the nephew of Doreen Bonner who was one of three women killed during the Falklands war and is interested in discovering where Mrs Bonner's disabled daughter was sent and what has happened to her since.

He said he looks forward to, "beginning a family journey."

1. What is your most prized possession?

My Mum and Dad for sure

2. What is the best piece of advice you have ever been given? Don't worry about what anyone else thinks, it's your life - live it

3. If you had a motto, what would it be?

If there is a will there is a way and if a job is to be done, it has to be done properly

4. What is your most embar-rassing moment?

Far too many to mention, mostly self inflicted with the help of a few too many Budweisers

5. Who would you make Governor of the Falklands?

My Uncle Lewis, he would sort everyone out

6. If you could travel anywhere in the world, where would it be? Definitely Alaska, always a place I have wanted to go, and hopefully someday I will

7. What is your favourite TV programme?

Would have to be Deadliest Catch and Ice Road Truckers. Glued! Probably has something to do with wanting to go to Alaska

8. What song makes you feel happy when you hear it?

All Summer Long - Kid Rock. Awesome memories from a brilliant weekend at North Arm with friends

9. What would people be surprised to learn about you?

When I was 9 years old I went with my Uncle Lewis to Buckingham Palace to collect his OBE. Not many young school children could say that 10. What is your happiest child-hood memory?

Going around the Islands with my Dad on the Tamar FI during school holiday - even if I wasn't the best on the sea, they were the good times

Needs versus finance - spirited school buildings debate at committee meeting

ACCOMMODATION needs of the Infant and Junior School was the subject of passionate discussion at last Thursday's meeting of the Education Committee.

"We are not going to get a new school immediately and there is an immediate problem in September and we are working on fitting PortaKabins at Stanley House as a short-term solution," Director of Education Annie Tempest reported. Planning permission has been sought for new classrooms but a contingency plan to place the Year 6 group at the Catholic hall is the alternative and, "not ideal," measure she said.

Committee members expressed concern that the need for a new Infant and Junior School was being overlooked and splitting the school over different sites around town restricted some year groups' access to facilities at the main building. "It's the future of our Islands, the education of our children. If you're going to achieve the Island Plan it needs to be addressed," Committee member Karen Lee told MLAs Roger Edwards and Dr Barry Elsby.

A new school was one of a number of, "conflicting requests for finance," like a home for the elderly or larger prison facility, that have been brought to the Assembly said MLA Elsby. "Most departments will be asked to reduce requests because of budget overspend" he said, indicating that the public meeting on May 1, would be an opportunity for the community to comment on what capital project they would like to see prioritised, and the best opportunity to volley for a long-term colution.

Ms Tempest reported that Executive Council was being approached with two requests, one to fund the short-term solution of temporary classrooms for IJS in September, and the other for funds to identify a suitable site and design a new school so that when funding is available for the build, "we're ready to go" she said.

Under the current education policy classes are split when they reach 30 students to ensure the best student to teacher ratio across both schools. Year One is the next year group to be split but in the future the policy may not be achievable because of budget overspend, said MLA Elsby.

Committee member Karen Lee noted that the UK recommendation was to split year groups at 20 students.

APRIL is autism awareness month and as such Penguin News was invited by a local mother of an autistic child to include the following thought provoking piece in order to draw attention to this lifelong developmental disorder. The article is written by US author and blogger Jo Worgan.

I LOOK at my little boy and often think about what the future holds for him. every day I worry. I worry what will happen to him once I am gone, I worry about who will look after him and if he will be safe and cared for. I do not know if he will be able to care for himself or it he will need additional help, I worry about this too.

I worry for Stephen and the burden he may feel in caring for his brother.

Then I worry about the family as I know they worry about me. I worry a lot.

But when chatting to us parents and asking how we are we simply nod and say. 'thank you, how are you?' We never truly reveal our inner sadness, how we really feel, that every day is a constant battle. Don't get me wrong, I am a very optimistic person and enjoy life; I make the most of my little boys. Still, at the end of the day there is that niggling feeling that we are never really truly settled, that we can never really truly relax.

We face a constant battle to get

What parents of autistic children will never tell you the services put in place that our child needs.

We then have a battle to keep them in place.

We constantly try to make our marriages work; it is a fact that parents of autistic children are under a great deal more stress, less time spent together, one parent caring for the autistic child in essence means less family time together and this all puts a strain on the relationship.

Trying to devote time and look after our other children is often guilt ridden as most of our time is spent in caring and worrying over the autistic child's needs.

We play at being peacekeeper, this is a FACT. We keep the peace within the family, at school, with other parents we meet and complete strangers.

One huge fact that we will never reveal is that we are lonely. We are often on the outside looking in, looking in at both society and our own child, unable in a way to reach both. We are isolated from society due to our caring role, lack of financial support and understanding. We are isolated from our child as we are never truly allowed 'inside'.

My child cannot tell me about his day, he seems to be locked inside his own little world and only at times of his choosing am I allowed in.

Parents of autistic children are isolated. We do not go to as many social gatherings with our children.

We then too have the comments and stares when out with our child and we try to make it look like we are not bothered. I often say to myself they do not understand how it is for us, how life is for my child, but it still hurts even though I carry on smiling.

This is at the heart of caring for an autistic child. We love them dearly, we fight for what our child needs and we speak up for them as who else will if we don't? That is what every parent does. But inside we do hurt.

We hurt over the comments that are made.

"Oh he doesn't look autistic" or "he will grow out if it."

We hurt when we see other children lining up to go into school, going out with friends, talking about their day, this is a totally different life for us. Our children are not part of that world. Of all the social interaction that takes place.

This however is my life, it is not a choosing, it was thrust upon me, but as any mother would do I get on with it and accept my child for who he is.

So even though we may say that everything is fine, believe me when I tell you that we will never say that we feel lonely, isolated and utterly worn out, that we worry constantly about our child's future and how society perceives them.

We keep the feelings buried.

However I am a happy person, an optimist and although the above is true what is also true is the support that other parents of autistic children give to each other.

There is a very supportive autism community out there that many people do not know exists. We as parents support each other as we all understand. And our children are different, as are all children, but we all share an invisible bond of just 'knowing' and we gain great support and comfort from this.

We also, as a collective group and united voice, raise awareness about autism. This is very much needed in a world where acceptance and understanding is still a long way off

Consultation on Tax Reliefs to Support Rural Development

Closing on Wednesday 30th April 2014!

As part of the Falkland Islands' Rural Development Strategy, the Falkland Islands Government is considering the introduction of a number of tax reliefs designed to facilitate growth in the rural economy.

The proposals are designed to incentivise investment in Camp-based businesses, to encourage new business creation and to aid growth in existing businesses.

You can have your say on the consultation by:

- → Downloading from: www.fig.gov.fk/policy/index.php/consultations
- Completing online at: www.surveymonkey.com/s/firuraltaxreliefs
- Picking up a hard copy from: Secretariat, Post Office, Bank, Library or Stanley Services Shop
- Asking for a copy to be posted to you by calling 28421 or emailing snightingale@sec.gov.fk

If you are unsure about any of the proposals outlined in the consultation document or would like further information, then please do give us a call and we would be happy to talk to you.

For further information, please call the Policy Unit on telephone 28421, email snightingale@sec.gov.fk or call into the Policy Unit, upstairs in the Secretariat.

Zoe Fowler explains the busy life and roles of a Falklands' vet

Eager minds meet Falklands careers at FICS fair

THE annual Falkland Islands Community School Careers Fair at the Sports Hall on Wednesday attracted a huge turnout and some great praise from the Education Board.

Students from Falkland Islands Community School were joined this year by Year 6 of the Infant and Junior School and Camp Education and enthusiastically whipped around the hall learning about industries, businesses and Government Departments that may one day be their employers.

Talking to the Education Committee the following day Director of Education Annie Tempest described the excellent turn out at the Fair as a, "beautiful," example of the, "big demand," from people wishing to better themselves through career specific training.

Students and the general public were intrigued by the opportunities described and many entered in the various stalls' competitions and raffles for prizes at the fair. The light-hearted event was also a serious opportunity for companies and departments to showcase what they can offer employees and hopefully encourage local talent and enthusiasm to join them.

Education Portfolio holder Member of Legislative Assembly (MLA) Barry Elsby said it was great that departments took the names of people interested in their work, but in order to ensure the interest is translated into a career within the department, "follow up contact targeting those interested needs to be done." MLA Elsby said he thought more should be done to encourage students into careers by giving advice on what A-levels and educational goals they should pursue.

Ms Tempest told the committee that she was aware of an increasing number of requests from the public for additional training. Because of budget overspend the previously discussed post of a specific Careers Development Officer will not happen, said MLA Elsby, but it was hoped a restructure of the resources available at the schools would fill the need.

A Falklands Happy Birthday to Her Majesty

ENTIRELY unexpected but most welcome sunshine accompanied the parade to the 88th birthday of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II at Victory Green on Monday. Clearing mist revealed a large crowd of spectators eager to see the joint detachment which would include the superb sounds of the combined Bands of the Lancashire Artillery. Duke of ancaster's and Royal Signals North Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands, Air Commodore Russ La Forte arrived prior to His Honour the Acting Governor John Duncan, and the latter proceeded to inspect the troops, a tri-service detachment of HM's British Forces and a detachment from the Falkland Islands Defence Force, and then take the Royal Salute. Also in attendance were members of the Falkland Islands Legislative Assembly as well as youth organisations. Due to the early mist the fly past was reduced to the Sea King helicopter, however the gathered crowd were also able to enjoy the sight of HMS Clyde anchored in Stanley harbour regally decked in flags. A 21 explosive salute turned out to be a little late but was enthusiastically preceded with three cheers for Her Majesty fly fishing passion. They actually stocked 2,400 km of rivers in Kenday of a foreign angling holiday. It's one of those unwritten rules of a fisherman's life. It seems to level the field of expectations so that when you do start connecting with fish, each one towers above the next in your mental landscape. In the end, you look at the photographs and only the tallest stand out. That blank and fishless day is forgotten, overshadowed by skyscrapers of glistening achievement.

Hooked from the first cast

Or that's what I was thinking when I waded into the peaty waters of the Murrell River in early March the Air Bridge cobwebs blown away in a stiff and uncompromising wind. Don't expect too much Andy, I told myself. They are Sea Trout, after all, and few things are more capricious or uncooperative, no matter how alluring. There is a touch of the Hollywood star about them. Just because they are beautiful and you can see them does not mean they will accept your invitation for dinner.

So I cast my line, hunched into my fishing posture, and watched it swirl around a few times below a spot called Drunken Rock. The fly seemed to be swinging around in fully functional fashion and I began slowly edging my way down-stream in search of deeper, water, one of those elusive 'pools' that those of us who fish for migratory fish talk about in the way that golf ers talk about 'sweet spots'

I found one and tossed the fly in. It was a pattern tied for me in Kenya, where I live, by the local flytving industry bequeathed by the former colonial masters and their va with brown and rainbow trout to attract, "the right sort of person" to settle in the colony. Read 'White Mischief (by James Fox) and decide if that worked.

And then I got my welcome from the Falklands. A thump like the sort you get from an over-zealous relative or school friend that leaves you briefly breathless and very awake. And there, skipping over the water like a demented dolphin, was five pounds of chunky, brutish sea trout Mullet also came to the net and turned the 'First Day Fishing' logic on its head. Perhaps that's because the Falklands are at the bottom of the world and I mostly fish the top end. I don't know. Two weeks later, facing a return leg on the Air Panini to Brize Norton, all I can think about is when can I get back and do it again.

Penguin News, April 25, 2014

I've wanted to come to the Falklands for a decade or more, since I first started hearing about the Sea Trout on these Islands. They hold the highest place in my angling that wanted nothing to do with my fly, my line, or the bank. It took an age to beach it and weigh it and return it, and afterwards I suddenly felt the Air Bridge effect, an unexpected deflation of the inner batteries. I was exhausted.

And so it went on that day. Five more beautiful fish and many feisty pantheon. In many ways I see them as kindred spirits. The Falkland Islands Sea Trout started out, as Sea Trout do, as pretty little brown trout in peaty little streams but, for some reason, they went out to sea in search of better things and wider horizons and return all silver and chunky and BIG. I was born in Britain of British teacher pare but moved to Hong Kong when I was five and only returned to be educated. After that I joined Reuters, became a foreign correspondent, and have never really lived in the 'Yookay' again.

I am getting chunky - it's age, I turned 64 here - I am turning silver (but at least I have all my hair) but I have seen and reported on a lot of the world - Europe, Africa, the Middle East, South Asia. I've fished for trout in Afghanistan and Pakistan and the Pacific North West of America, and contribute to fishing magazines as well as being editor of the Kenyan Conservation quarterly, SWARA. (which will have two Falkland pages in its next issue.)

What I am convinced of is that the Sca Trout fishing in the Falkands is world class. I've caught beautiful specimens that European and American anglers would be proud of; I've fished the Murrell, San Carlos, Malo, Frying Pan and Swan Inlet on East Falklands and taken trout in all of them. The affable guide Adie Low is my witness. And on West Falklands, in weather that would have made Shackleton go back to bed, I took several dozen really fine specimens on the Warrrah River in the company of Wayne Brewer from Port Howard Lodge. And I cannot believe that I now have to haul on a seat bolt, not my waders, and fly back to Africa to go back to work.

I cannot understand why there are not more foreign anglers on the bank. I met only one. On YouTube and the internet there is very little information about how to fish the Falklands, what tackle to bring and which techniques to use. Of course one of the beauties of the Falklands is that so few people fish it. But there is so much water that if you multiplied the number of yearly foreign anglers by 10 - from 20 to 200 - they still wouldn't cross each other except at the bar. There is so much fabulous water, and fish.

I'm already plotting a month long return next year. I have in mind an extended expedition including the Chartres River, which, I am told, yields monsters. Not that I am expecting much. After all, you don't catch fish on your first day, do you? It's all about managing your expectations.

Emergency Radio Frequencies

The Public are advised that, in the event of an emergency, where no other form of communication is available, the Royal Falkland Islands Police maintain a 24 hour listening watch on the VIIF 2 metre band. This system is served by a series of five repeaters.

Users are advised to familiarise themselves with the frequencies that the system uses and which areas of the Falkland Islands they cover, to optimise their likelihood of accessing the system. A listening watch is also maintained on the Marine Band.

VIIF 2 Metre Band:
Sapper Hill: Frequency: 146.675 (Simplex) This repeater serves both Mount Kent and Pleasant Peak repeaters and the Stanley area.

Mount Kent: Frequency: 147.125 (+600 Duplex) This repeater serves the north camp on East Falklands and repeats the Mount Caroline Repeater, which covers the north of West Falklands. It links to Stanley via Sapper Hill.

Governors Cup and fond farewell to club founder Mark

THE Archery Club's competition of the year took place on April 6 at the Stanley Football field - the Governor's Cup, a FITA shoot for everyone.

The day was cold but with very light winds and turnout was one of the best the club has had for an outside shoot, a fitting show of heads for such a prestigious event.

Competition was fierce and close at all levels with the leaders changing at the different ranges

For many it was their first full shoot of a 150 arrows at four distances. Junior club members shot a FITA metric V and at 30, 20, 15, & 10m ranges. The clubs intermediate level of archers shot a FITA Metric III and began at 50 followed by 40, 30 and finishing at 20m. The clubs experienced archers shot the full FITA. For the ladies, it was a 70, 60, 50 and 30m shoot and the gents would shoot 90, 70, 50, 30m ranges. Only six arrows are allowed in practice with most shooting on the longest range to get their eye in. At each range an archer shoots 36 arrows before dropping back to a closer boss and shooting the next 36 arrows and so on until you have shot all 144 arrows.

Thanks to all members who brought tea and cakes for the coffee breaks and the wonderful

The Club gathered later at the Malvina House Hotel for the presentation of the Governor's Cup and medals but the excitement was tempered by it being the last event for founding member of the Archery Association Mark Lewis, as he was due to leave the Islands. Mark was a prime mover in getting the sport re-established in the Falklands, and his personal achievements with the club have been many.

Mark gave the club and committee the benefit of his experience, guidance and participation and also assisted with setting up an IJS & CE archery club.

As a coach he was so successful that some of his students, Jav Lazo in particular, began to out shoot him. Mark even persuaded the former Governor, Nigel Haywood, to sponsor the Governor's Cup and led the charge at the Guernsey Games and brought back the Falklands first archery gold medal in in the combined indoor 25m and 18m FITA rounds Whilst preparing to go to the Guernsey Games and in order to boost everyone's confidence. he made the rash statement that "should I win a gold medal, I will run around the field naked. To the best of our knowledge this forfeit has not been honoured but has been the subject of much ribbing at club events.

Mark was presented with a whiskey decanter and glasses by Club President Justin McPhee as a token of thanks for his efforts and support of the club.

Club members wish Mark and his family well for the future and thank him for the outstanding contribution to archery in the Falklands

Dek Hockey Club - 2014 Energise Shield results

THE first competition of the Dek Hockey 2014 season is nearly over. The final game is this Sunday but Flyers have already secured the win with a faultless winning streak and 14 point lead over second place Panthers.

Their last victory was against Blackhawks on Tuesday. Nearing the end of the first half, Blackhawks were four goals down courtesy of Flyers Jonathon Nicholson - 2, Kyran Evans - 1 and Nick Rendell -1 and their goalie Melvyn Clifton was eyeing up an clusive 'shut out'. (The only two this season coming from goal tenders Stuey Duncan - Blackhawks, and Ben Hoyles - Penguins.) His hopes were dashed by Blackhawks Roy Shepherd, but the relief was short lived as Kyran, Jon and Nick added one more each in quick succession.

With a few minutes left in the first half tempers flared when an illegal move appeared to go unpunished to the dismay of Blackhawks and they attacked with renewed ferocity. Karl Nightingale, a guest player for Blackhawks, secured the score at 2:7 at the end of the first half.

defending Aggressive competitiveness boiled over in the second half. Duane Evans, Karl and Callum Middleton secured another four goals for Black- Score breakdowns hawks but they couldn't close the gap to Flyers once Nick secured his hat-trick and Jon added another to his tally: Final score Blackhawks 6, Flyers 9.

Jonathon now tops the hat-trick tally with four and the highest number of goals in a game Panthers' Rafa Sotomayor against Penguins in the second match on Tuesday. Rafa scored 5 of Panthers 6 goals to beat Penguins by 3 points. This placed Panthers into second place in the competition but this could change if Coy-

Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands Catch Verification Tender

GSGSSI is seeking tenders to undertake the verification of catches of Patagonian toothfish from the South Georgia fishery in 2014.

Catch verification involves weighing and verifying catch from 6 vessels, amounting to approximately 1500 tonnes of product.

Catch verification is likely to take place in June (mid-season) and again in August (end of season), but can take place anytime during the South Georgia toothfish season (April – end of August). Ideally one member of staff from the successful tendering organisation will be responsible for, and supervise, all catch verification and there will be a level of continuity in their assisting team.

Catch verification takes place on FIPASS. Vessels are required to offload all their product and sub-product. The product is usually offloaded into reefer containers or into temporary frozen storage (using the Polar facility on FIPASS).

The process involves the following:

Weighing of all product and sub-product and verifying against the reported catch and quantity of each product;

2. Verifying packaging weights for different product types;
3. Checking (scanning bar codes and opening cartons or sacks) of 5-10% of all primary product (trunks) to ensure that weights and number of items are correctly labelled;

4. Checking the holds of the vessel to ensure that all product has been verified

To achieve these objectives, GSGSSI anticipates that the successful tenderer would have 3 staff present at FIPASS at all times. It is important the tenderer can make ready acatch verification team at short notice and that the team can work flexibly, including work during unsocial hours (0800 to 2200)- in accordance with changes to vessel schedules. The work can be strenuous and involves a significant amount of lifting so all staff should be medically fit. Staff should be familiar with the use of Microsoft Excel. GSGSSI will provide the necessary electronic balances and pallet scales and will arrange for the use of a suitable container to undertake the verification work. The tenderer should provide suitable PPE for all employees.

Tender documents (a maximum of 4 pages of A4) should include the following;
1. How the tenderer proposes to undertake the work;
2. Details of the experience of staff that will be employed;
3. Name of the primary contact person;
4. Cost can be given as hourly rate for the staff or as a single cost for the season's verification.

Tenders should be submitted by 12noon on the 9th of May 2014. For more information please contact GSGSSI on 28200.

Climate Change and the Falkland Islands Your chance to get involved in debate and information sharing

You are invited to the following seminar.
When: Tuesday 6th May, 9am - 4.30pm
Where: Chamber of Commerce

Where: Chamber of Commerce
What: A seminar led by Jim McAdam, Colin Clubbe and Rebecca Upson.

A summary and discussion of the climate modelling work carried out so far by the Tyndall Centre for Climate Change Research (University of East Anglia)

An overview and discussion of the current EU- and FIG-funded project focusing on the impact of climate change on the land environment of the Falkland Islands

People with a direct interest in this area have already been invited to the seminar and a 2 day follow-on workshop. However we would like to open a general invitation to everyone to attend either the seminar or a talk on Friday evening (more information on this in next week's Penguin News) to find out more about this important topic that has the potential to impact on us all.

Please get in contact with Rebecca Upson (R.Upson@kew.org) if you have any further questions about the planned talks and discussions.
